PREFACE.

SEVERAL of my friends, from various parts of India, to whose help and sympathy I am greatly indebted for the completion of my English translations of the Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata, and of other Sanskrit works, requested me to undertake an English translation of the Twenty Hindu Smṛitis which pass under the general name of Dharma-S'āstras. But I always expressed my reluctance to undertake the task, for I did not consider myself competent enough to do the same. It is only to satisfy the pressing request of a host of kind friends, to whom it is a sin to be dis-obliging, that I venture to undertake this most arduous work of publishing, in a collected form, the Text and a literal prose English Translation, with profuse Explanatory Notes, of all the Samhitās:

Some of these Samhitās have already been translated by some eminent scholars of the West. But no attempt has yet been made to translate all of these valuable works and publish them in a few handy volumes so that every student of Hindu Law and Literature may easily possess them for his own use. This is indeed a sad desideratum, especially in a century when so much activity is going on both in the East and West to place the intellectual and moral greatness of the ancient Hindus before the English-knowing world. The value of Samhitās as a sacred record of the life and customs of the ancient Hindus stands supreme over every other Hindu religious work, and it is but necessary that they should be made as much popular as possible. To encompass this great and sacred end that I have undertaken the present work. I have very carefully collated the Text, with the help of a number of Pundits, and after carefully going through a number of Texts both in Manuscript and print. The Translation I have attempted to make as much literal as possible, keeping an eye more on accuracy than on literary excellence. To elucidate the Text and Translation I have not hesitated in appending Notes, very carefully made out, as elaborately as possible. In my opinion translations of such technical works as Samhitās must be always very literal. And I have followed this dictum very carefully throughout the work. My object, in publishing a very carefully edited Text along with the Translation, is that the reader may go through the Translation and the Text simultaneously and learn for himself the true nature and character of the civil and ecclesiastical laws of the ancient Hindus. It is needless for me to mention here that there is not a single collected edition of the Text of the Samhitās available in this country and elsewhere. And this surely, if not any thing else, enhances the value and utility of my publication.

A careful study of the Samhitās is fraught with immense value and profit not only to the students and practitioners of law but to the general readers as well. They will, by such a study, be not only able to form an estimate of the life and conduct, so glorious and eminent in themselves, of the ancient Hindus but will also be able to regulate their own conduct in the same light and on the same line, with such healthy innovations as the environments under which they now live so urgently require. True regeneration of the Hindus depends mainly upon the regulation of their life and conduct upon national lines. And nowhere can they find greater light and help in forming their national life anew than in the Samhitās. Students and practitioners of law in particular will find in these works the earliest and the most genuine Texts of Hindu Laws on which they may safely base their higher studies in this most important department of Literature.

How far I have succeeded in making the Translation literal and accurate, it is not for me to pronounce any opinion. I leave it entirely to the judgment of my readers. If, however, this edition of the early Law-Texts proves successful, I shall, in a near future, undertake the Translation of all the Commentaries for the convenience and use of my legal friends and readers.

Any suggestion that my friends and readers may make for the improvement of the work will be thankfully received by me. I beg only to remind them of the fact that the present undertaking is a national work in which they all, like myself, are equally interested.

INTRODUCTION

THE Scriptural writings of the Hindus are divided, in main, into two classes, namely S'ruti or what is heard and Smṛiti or what is remembered. The earliest and the most sacred religious work of the Hindus, namely, the Véda, belongs to the former. In it the words of revelation are preserved in their original state. And all the laws, civil and religious; which govern and regulate the life and conduct of the Hindus pass under the sacred appellation of S'ruti. According to the belief of the Hindus Smṛiti also is of divine origin; the difference between it and the Véda consists in the fact that in the Hindu System of Law the sense is recorded either in the divine words or other equivalent expressions.

The history of the origin of Smṛiti attributes it to the Self-Sprung Brahmâ who communicated it to Manu, who again taught it to the ten patriarchal sages, viz., Maríchi, Atri, Ângira, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Prachétá, Vas ishthâ, Bhrigu and Nárada.

Smṛiti consists of three Kāṇḍas or sections, viz., —(1) A'châra or regulations relating to the performance of religious rites and ceremonies and the general duties of men; (2) Vyâvahâra or civil laws relating to the protection of life and property with all their rules and practices; (3) Prâys'chitta or those relating to the atonement for various sins committed. But all these groups of laws, religious, civil and about atonement, pass by one comprehensive term which is popularly known as the Dharma-S ástra.

The Dharma-S'ástra of the Hindus, is not one single book but consists of the Samhitás or Institutes of holy sages numbering twenty according to the list given by Yájñawalkya, namely,—Manu, Atri, Vishṇu, Háríta, Yájñawalkya, Ushaná, Aṅgira, Yama, Apastamva, Samvarta, Kátyáyana, Vṛihaspati, Parás'ara, Vyása, Saṅkha, Likhita, Daksha, Goutama, Satátapa, and Vas'ishtha.

There are slight variations in the names of authors to be found in the writings of the other Lawgivers. In some works more names are seen. Parás'ara, whose name occurs in the above list, mentions also twenty Lawgivers; but in his enumeration, instead of Yama, Vṛihaspati and Vyása the names of Kas'yapa, Gárgya and Prachétá are mentioned. In the account given of the Samhitás in that encyclopædic work Padma Purāṇam the name of Atri, which is seen in Yájñawalkya's list, is omitted and the number of thirty-six is completed by adding Maríchi, Pulastya, Prachétá, Bhrigu, Nárada, Kas'yapa, Vishwámitra, Devala, Ris'yas'ringa, Gárgya, Boudháyaṇa, Paithinashi, Jáváli, Samantu, Páras'ara, Lokákshi, Kuthumi.

In the Commentary of the Gṛihya-Sūtra by Rám-kṛishṇa thirty-nine names are mentioned, of whom nine are not to be found in any of the above lists, viz., Agni, Chyavana, Chhágaleya, Játukarāṇa, Pitámaha, Prajapati, Buddha, Satyáyana and Soma. Sometimes one person is mentioned as being the author of several Institutes, Comprehensive (Vṛihat), and Easy (Laghu), according to the nature and bulk of the work.

Besides those mentioned above, some more legislators appear to have flourished, namely,—Dhoumya, the priest of the Pándavás and the author of a Commentary on the Yajur-Véda, As'wáláyana, who wrote several treatises on religious acts and ceremonies, Bhāguri, a commentator of Manu-Saṁhitā and Datta, the son of Atri.

According to the Hindus the world is divided into four Yugās or cycles, and each Saṁhitā is considered appropriate for each cycle. Parás'ara regards Manu-Saṁhitā as suited to Satya-Yugaḥ, that of Goutama, to the Trétā-, those of S'aṅkha and Likhita to the Dwápara-, and his own Institutes to the Kali-, Yugaḥ. But this distinction has never been actually observed. Truly does Strange remark:—"In fact had Parás'ara-Smṛiti alone been adopted as the Dharma-S'ástra of the present age it would not have been sufficient for the purpose; inasmuch as the Vyāvahāra-Kāṇḍa is entirely wanting in his Institutes; so that a professed commentary on this Smṛiti, is founded, in this respect, upon nothing belonging exclusively to Parás'ara, beyond a verse extracted from the A'chāra, or the first Kāṇḍa, purporting merely that the princes of the earth are, in this age, enjoined to conform to the dictates of Justice." —Preface to Stranges' Hindu Law.

Of all the Smṛitis, Manu-Saṁhitā is regarded by the Hindus as next in sanctity to the Védās. It is the oldest of all the laws and its authorship is attributed to Manu himself, the son of Brahmā. He was the most ancient and the greatest of all Lawgivers.*

* Regarding the antiquity of Manava-Dharma-S'āstra, Babu S'yámá Charan Sircár, in his Introduction to Vyāvāsthā-Darpan, arrives at the following conclusion with which we fully concur.

"This is manifest from the following verses of Manu-Saṁhitā (Ch. I.). 'From that which is the first cause, not the object of sense, existing everywhere in substance, not existing to our perception, without beginning or end, was produced the divine male, famed in all worlds under the appellation of Brahma. (11) Having divided his own substance, the mighty power became half male, half female, or nature active and passive; and from that female he produced Viráj. (23.) Know me, O most excellent of Bráhmaṇás, to be that person, whom the power Viráj, having performed austere devotion, produced by himself, me, the secondary framer of all this visible world. (33) It was I, who, desirous of giving birth to a race of men, performed very difficult religious duties, and first produced the lords of created beings, eminent in holiness:—Maríchi, Atri, Aṅgirá, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Prachetá, or Daksha, Vas'ishtha, Bhrigu, and Nárada. (34—35) They abundant in glory, produced seven other Manus, together with deities and the mansions of deities, and Maharshis, or great sages, unlimited in power.' (36) 'He (Bráhmá) having enacted this Code of Laws, himself taught it fully to me in the beginning; afterwards I, taught it to Maríchi and nine other holy sages. (58) This my son Bhrigu will repeat the divine Code to you without omission; for that sage learned from me to recite the whole of it (59). Bhrigu, great and wise, having thus been appointed by Manu to promulgate his Laws, addressed all the Rishis with an affectionate mind, saying:—'Hear! (60.) From this Manu named Swayambhuvaḥ, or Sprung from the Self-Existent, came six descendants, other Manus, or perfectly understanding the scripture, each giving birth to a race of his own, all exalted in dignity, eminent in power. (61) Swarochisha, Outtami, Támasa, Raivata, likewise and Chakshusha, beaming in glory, and Vaivaswata, child of the sun. (62) The seven Manus, (who are to be followed by seven more) of whom Swayambhuvaḥ is the chief, have produced and supported this world of moving and stationary beings each in his own antara or the period of his reign. (63.)'

" 'We cannot but remark that the word Menu (Manu) has no relation whatever to the moon, and that it was the seventh, not the first of that name, whom the Bráhmaṇas believe to have been preserved in an ark from the general deluge: him they call the child of the sun, to distinguish him from our legislator, but they assign to his brother Yama the office (which the Greeks were after the same model. The laws of Manu were held in such great veneration by the saintly writers of law-treatises pleased to confer on Minos) of judge in the shades below.'—Sir William Jones's Preface to Manu, p. x.

"Dr. Max Müller at the conclusion of his letter to Mr. Morley, says:—"It is evident that the author of the metrical code of law speaks of the old Manu as of a person different from himself, when he says (Ch. X. v. 63):—'Not to kill, not to lie, and to steal, to keep the body clean and restrain the senses; this was the short law which Manu proclaimed amongst the four castes.' Seeing Manu spoken of in the third person, he conjectures that the Author of the metrical code of Manava-Dharma-Sāstra was not the first of all the Manus. It arises from his not bearing in mind that the laws of Manu were rehearsed to the Rishis by Bhrigu, who of course mentions Manu in the third person; consequently it was quite consistent that this sage after imparting the dictum of Manu as in the verse cited, should say:—'this was the law which Manu proclaimed amongst the four castes.' Thus another Manu is not the Author of the code speaking of the old Manu as a different person from himself, but it is Bhrigu who does so. Besides, it was an ordinary custom with the ancient sages to refer to themselves in the third person. And it will appear on reference to Manu Chapter I. verses 38, 57, 58, 59, and 60, above cited, that the first Manu, who is Swayambhuvaḥ (Sprung from the Self-Existent), learnt the law from Brahmā and taught it to the ten holy sages including Bhrigu, who, appointed by Manu to promulgate his laws, repeated the divine Code to the Rishis. It is moreover asserted in the Preface to the Saṁhitā of Nārada, a son of the Swayambhuvaḥ that the same Manu, having composed his code in a hundred thousand s'lokās or couplets, arranged under twenty-four heads in a thousand chapters, delivered the work to Nārada, the sage [among gods]. Thus there can be no doubt that the Author of the (Vrihat) Manu-Saṁhitā was the first of all the Manus; and it appears from the above verses that Laghu Manu-Saṁhitā which we see, was taught to, and rehearsed, by Bhrigu.'

"Various dates have been suggested by the European scholars who have endeavoured to ascertain the period of the composition of the Code of Manu's Laws. Chezy and Deslongchamps, the that no part of their books contradicting Manu, was regarded as an authority on the subject. Vṛihaspati latter of whom professes to have formed his opinion from an examination of the code itself, conceive that it was composed in the 13th. century previous to the Christian era. Schlegel gives it as his decided and well-considered opinion, 'quod multorum annorum meditatio me docuit,' that the Laws of Manu were promulgated in India at least as early as the seventh century before, Alexander the Great, or about a thousand years before Christ. He places the Rāmāyana of Vālmiki at about the same date, and doubts which of them was the older. Elphinstone, who is inclined to attribute great antiquity to the Institutes of Manu on the ground of difference between the laws and manners therein recorded and those of modern times, and from the proportion of the changes which took place before the invasion of Alexander the Great, infers that a considerable period had elapsed between the promulgation of the code and the latter epoch; and he fixes the probable date of Manu, to use his own words 'very loosely' somewhere about half way between Alexander (in the fourth century before Christ,) and the Vēdās (in the fourteenth.) Professor Wilson thinks that the work of Manu, as we now possess it, is not of so ancient a date as the Rāmāyana; and that it was most probably composed about the end of the third or commencement of the second century before Christ. Sir William Jones' inference, founded on a consideration of the style, is, however, opposed to the learned Professor's conclusion. Sir William says, and with reason too:—"The Sanskrit of the three Vēdās, that of the Manava-Dharma-S'āstra, and that of the Purāṇās (of which Rāmāyana is one) differ from each other in pretty exact proportion to the Latin of Numa, from whose laws entire sentences are preserved, that of Appias which we see in the fragments of the twelve tables and that, of Cicero or of Lucretius, where he has not affected an obsolete style: if the several changes, therefore, of the Sanskrit and Latin took place, as we may fairly assume, in times very nearly proportional, the Vēdās must have been written about three hundred years before these Institutes and about six hundred years before the Purāṇās." He then remarks:—"The dialect of Manu is even observed in many passages to resemble that of the Vēdās, particularly in a departure from the more writes in his Code: "Manu held the first rank among the legislators, because he had expressed in his Saṁhitā, modern grammatical forms, whence it must at first view seem very probable that the laws now brought to light were considerably older than those of Solon or even of Lycurgus, although the promulgation of them before they were reduced to writing might have been coeval with the first monarchies established in Asia." Upon such and other grounds he fixes the date of the actual text at about the year 1280 before Christ. Thus these opinions as to the date of the Institutes of Manu, being founded not on any historical or positive proof, but mere conjecture, are, as might have been expected, contradictory and quite inconclusive. Now if the sage Nārada be believed, he asserts in the Preface to his law tract, that Manu, having composed the laws of Brahma in a hundred thousand s'lokās or couplets, arranged under twenty-four heads in a thousand chapters, delivered the work to him (Nārada, the sage among gods,) who abridged it for the use of mankind in twelve thousand verses, and gave them to the son of Bhrigu named Sumati, who for the greater ease of the human race, reduced them to four thousand. Hence it appears that the Vṛihat (large) Manu-Saṁhitā was composed by Manu himself. The abridged metrical code of Manu-Saṁhitā in question, appears also from the text of the very work to have been composed during Manu's time, (as will be known from the verses 58, 59, and 60, already cited.) It remains to determine the epoch of Manu's existence. This in the absence of other evidence should be believed to be the same as stated in the Manu Saṁhitā before us, that is, he flourished in the beginning of the world, being progenitor of the races, human and divine.—See Ch. I vs. 11, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36.

"Sir William Jones, after saying 'We cannot but admit that Minos, Mneues, or Mneuis have only Greek terminations, but that the crude noun is composed of the same radical letters both in Greek and Samskrit,' and leaving others to determine whether our Menus (or Menu in the nominative,) the son of Brahmā, was the same personage with Minos the son of Jupiter and the legislator of the Cretans (who also is supposed to be the same with Mneuis spoken of as the first lawgiver receiving his laws from the chief Egyptian deity Hermes, and Menes the first king of the the essence of the Védās, that no code contradicting Manu, was considered as an authority; that other Egyptians) remarks:—‘Dārāshekoh was persuaded and not without sound reason that the first Manu of the Brāhmanās could be no other person than the progenitor of mankind, to whom Jews, Christians, and Mussulmans unite in giving the name of Adam.’

“The learned writer further remarks:—‘The name of Manu (like Menes, mens, and mind,) is clearly divided from the root man or men to understand, and it signifies, as all the Pandits agree, ‘intelligent,’ particularly in the doctrines of the Védās which the composer of our Dharma-Sāstra must have studied very diligently, since great numbers of its texts changed only in a few syllables for the sake of the measure, are interspersed through the work. A spirit of sublime devotion, of benevolence to mankind, and of amiable tenderness to sentient creatures pervades the whole work; the style of it has a certain austere majesty that sounds like the language of legislation and extorts respectful awe; the sentiments of independence on all beings but God, and harsh admonitions even to kings, are truly noble; and the panegyrics on the Gāyatrī the mother (as it is called) of the Védās, prove the author to have adored (not the visible material sun, but) that divine incomparable greater light, (to use the words of the most venerable text of Indian Scripture,) which illumines all, delights all, from which all proceed, to which all must return, and which alone can eradicate (not our visual organs merely, but) our souls and our intellects.’

“Mr. Morley, the author of the Analytical Digest, who in his Introduction to the Hindu Law has cited the observations of the Sanskrit scholars of Europe, makes this concluding remark:—‘Whatever may be the exact period at which the Manava-Dharma-Sāstra was composed or collected, it is undoubtedly of very great antiquity, and is eminently worthy of the attention of the scholar, whether on account of its classical beauty; and proving as it does that, even at the remote epoch of its composition, the Hindus had attained to a high degree of civilization, or whether we regard it as held to be a divine revelation, and consequently the chief guide of moral and religious duties, by nearly a hundred millions of beings.’—Morley’s Digest, Vol. I. Introd, p. cxcvii.

S'āstras and treatises on grammar or logic so long only shone as Manu, who taught the way to religion, profit and desire, was not seen in competition with them."

Babu S'yámá Charaṇ gives, in his learned work, the following concise account of the other Samhitās.

"Atri composed a remarkable law-treatise, in verse, which is extant.

"Vishṇu is the author of an excellent law-treatise, which is for the most part in verse. Hárta wrote a treatise in prose. Metrical abridgments of both these works are also extant.

"Yājñawalkya appears, from the Introduction to his own Institutes, to have delivered his precepts to an audience of ancient philosophers assembled in the province of Mithilá. The Institutes of Yājñawalkya are second in importance to Manu, and have been arranged in three books: viz., A'chāra, Vyāvahāra and Prāyaśchitta Kāṇḍas containing one thousand and twenty-three couplets.

"Us'ana composed his Institutes in verse, and there is an abridgment of the same.

"Āngira wrote a short treatise containing about seventy couplets.

"Yama or Jama, composed a short tract containing a hundred couplets.

"Apastamva was the author of a law tract in prose which is extant as well as an abridgment of it in verse.

"The metrical abridgment only of the Institutes of Samvarta is found in this country.

The other Samskrit scholars too of Europe do not, and cannot, deny that the Samhitā of Manu is the most ancient, or the first, work of Law."

7 "Kátyáyana is the author of a clear and full treatise on law and also wrote on grammar and other subjects.

"An abridgment of the Institutes, if not the Code at large, of Vṛihaspati, is extant.

"The treatise of Parás'ara, which consists of the A'chdra and Práyschitta Kaṇdas, is extant.

"Vyása is the reputed author of the Puráṇas: he is also the author of some works more immediately connected with the law.

"Sankha and Likhita are the joint authors of a work in prose, which has been abridged in verse: their separate tracts in verse are also extant.

"Daksha composed a law-treatise in verse.

"Goutama is the author of an elegant treatise, although Texts are cited in the name of his father Gotama, the son of Utathya.

"Sátátapa is the author of a treatise on penance and expiation, of which an abridgment, in verse, is extant.

"Vas'ishtha is the last of twenty legislators named by Yájñawalkya; his elegant work in prose is intermixed with verse.

"Besides the Saṁhitás above mentioned, there is extant a part of Nárada's Saṁhitá; and some Texts of other sages, except Kuthumi, Buddha, Sátáyana, and a few more (whose Vachands and names rarely occur in any compilation) are seen cited in the Digests and Commentaries.

"The works of the sages do not treat of every subject as the Institutes of Manu do; and it is the opinion of Pandits that the entire work, of none of the sages, with the exception of Manu, has come down to the present times."

There are Glosses and Commentaries on some of the principal Samhitās without which the original works would have been utterly unintelligible. A number of Glosses on Manu-Samhitā are said to have been written by the sages of yore. These, save that of Bháguri, are not extant now. Of the modern Commentaries and Glosses, that by Medhātithi, son of Viraswámí Bhatta, which having been partly lost, has been completed by the Court Pandits of Madanapál, a prince of Digh, that by Govindarájá and that by Dharañídhara were held in great esteem until a most important and erudite Commentary was written by Kulluka Bhatta. The Glosses of Manu known as the Mádhaví by Sáyānacháryya and the Nanda-rájkrit by Nandarájá are known amongst the Marhátás, the former being considered as the most authoritative in the Kárnátic. There is another Commentary on Manu known as Manwarthachandriká. Another Commentary on the same sacred work is cited by Sridharácháryya in his Smṛiti-Sāra named Káma-dhénu.

Nanda Pandita wrote a Commentary on Vishṇu-Samhitā called the Vaijayanti and another on Parás'ara.

The most ancient Commentary on Yājñawalkya-Samhitā is the Gloss of Aparárka. Then comes the most celebrated Commentary Mitáksharā of Vijñānēs's'wara. Two more Commentaries on the same Samhitā were written by Dévabodha and Vis'warupa. The Bengal School of Lawyers holds in highest esteem the Commentary on Yājñawalkya known as Dīpakalikā. Its authorship is attributed to S'ūlapání, a native of Mithilá, who resided at Sahuria in Bengal.

The Mitáksharā is not only a Commentary on Yājñawalkya-Saṁhitā, but a general Digest highly valued and esteemed by the Hindus. Its character is thus described :—"By citing the other legislators and writers as authority for his explanation of Yājñawalkya's Text which he professes to illustrate, and expounding their Texts in the progress of his work, and at the same time reconciling the seeming discrepancies, if any between them and the Text of his author, Viṣṇuśara has surpassed all those writers of Commentaries whose works combine the utility of regular Digests with their original character as Commentaries."

Kulluka Bhatta, the celebrated Commentator of the Manava-Dharma-S'āstra also wrote a Gloss on the Text of Yama. The Varadā-rājyā by Varadā-rājā, although a general Digest, is written principally as a Commentary on the Institutes of Nārada. It is considered as an authority in the Southern schools. The Mādhariya, though dealing principally with the A'chāra and Prāyaś'chitta portions of the Parās'ara-Smṛiti, is, in fact, an excellent Digest held in high esteem in Southern India. There is a general abridgment of Smritis called Chaturviṁśati-Smṛiti-Vyākhyā, or "An Exposition of the Twenty-Four Smṛitis."

The Legislators, however, do not agree in all respects. They are sometimes seen even to differ from Manu himself. But when such differences appear no one is allowed to accept one Text and reject the other. Hence arose the necessity of a Complete Digest "which after harmonizing the conflicting authorities might lay down the rules to be followed in practice."

Thus several Digests have been compiled by lawyers of different parts of India. They generally contain Texts taken from the Saṁhitās oftentimes reconciling the apparently contradictory Texts in the light of the most sacred Text of Manu himself. Sometimes Texts from Védas and Purāṇs are quoted as authority but the S'ruti being always respected as the highest. The authors of Digests were always guided by the following scriptural maxims in forming their opinions. "A principle of law, established in one instance, should be extended to other cases also, provided there be no impediment." "Between rules general and special the special is to prevail." "If there be a contradiction between a S'ruti and a Smṛiti, the former is to be followed; but if there be no such contradiction, the Smṛiti should be acted upon (Yadvāli)." "If two Texts differ, reason must in practice prevail (Yājñawalkya)."

All parts of the Dharma-Sāstra have not been treated by these Digests nor are their conclusions the same. These differences have led to the formation of the different Schools. There are five such Schools or divisions of Hindu Law in India, namely, the Gauḍiya (Bengal), Benares, the Mithilā (North Behar), the Mahārāshtra and the Drāvida. The original Smṛitis are always common to them all, but the doctrines, inculcated in particular Digests, differ.

The chief guide of the Benares school is the Mitāksharā of Viṣṇuśara. This work is of greater authority than any of the other Digests, for, as Mr. Colebrooke remarks,—“It is received in all the schools of Hindu Law, from Benares to the Southern extremity of the Peninsula of India, as the chief ground work of the doctrines which they follow, and as an authority from which they rarely dissent.” The other works which are also respected by the Benares School are the Vīramitrodaya by Mitramisra, the Paras'urāma- Mādhava, the Vyāvahāra-Mādhava, the Nirṇaya-Sindhu, and the Vivāda-Tāṇḍava and other works of Kamalākara.

The works held in highest authority by the Mithilā School, are the Vivāda-Ratnākara and Vivāda-Chintāmaṇi. The Vivāda-Chandra by Lakshmi Devi is also respected. Vyāvahāramayukha of Nilakanta, the Nirṇaya-Sindhu, the Hemādri, the Vyāvahāra-Kaustava and Parasurāma-Mādhava are held in highest authority by the Mahārattā School. The Mādhaviya, the Smṛiti-Chandrikā, and the Saraswati-Vilāsa are the works of authority in the Drāvīda School.

Mitāksharā is always respected as of paramount authority everywhere even in Orissa except Bengal Proper which has alone taken for its chief guide in matters of inheritance the Dāya-Bhāga of Jimut-Vāhana who is generally called the Founder of the Bengal School. The other works of great authority in Bengal are the the Dāya-Tattwa, the Subodhinī, and the Dāya-Kramasangraha.

Dāya-Tattwa is a part of Raghunandana's Smṛiti-Tattwa treating of inheritance. It is a short legal tract in which Jimut-Vāhana's doctrines are strictly followed.

The other works on inheritance accepted by the Bengal School are the Dāya-Nirṇaya by S'rīkara Bhattāchāryya and a few more which are nothing but epitomes of the works of Raghunandana and Jimut-Vāhana.

There are several Commentaries on the Dāya-Bhāga, of which that by S'rīnath A'chāryya is acknowledged as the most excellent exposition of the Text and was considered as a great authority before the appearance of S'rī Kṛishṇa's Commentary.

There is also a Gloss on the Text of Jimut-Vāhana by Achyuta Chakravarti. There is another Gloss on the same work by Mahés'wara which is, for the greater part, an able interpretation of the Text of Jimut-Vāhana. "The Commentary of S'rīkrishna Tarkálankára," says Mr. Colebrooke, "is the most celebrated of the Glosses of the Text of the Dāya-Bhaga. It is the work of a very acute Logician, who interprets his author and reasons on his arguments with great accuracy and precision, and who always illustrates the Text, generally confirms its positions, but not unfrequently modifies or amends them. Its authority has been long gaining ground in the Schools of Law throughout Bengal, and it has almost banished from them the other expositions of the Dāya-Bhaga, being ranked in general estimation, next after the treatise of Jimut-Vāhana and of Ragnunandana."

A PREFATORY NOTE ON YA'JNAWALKYA.

YA'JNAWALKYA delivered his precepts to a number of ancient philosophers assembled in the province of Mithilâ. His Institutes are regarded by the Hindus as second in importance to those of Manu. They have been divided into three books, namely âchâra, vyâvâkâra and prâyas'chitta. The work contains one thousand and twenty-three couplets.

It is very difficult to ascertain the date of the composition of this work. Morley, in his Introduction to Hindu Law, thus observes on the subject :

"The age of this Code cannot be fixed with any certainty, but it is of considerable antiquity, as indeed is proved by passages from it being found on inscriptions in every part of India, dated in the tenth and eleventh centuries after Christ. 'To have been so widely diffused,' says Professor Wilson, 'and to have then attained a general character as an authority, a considerable time must have elapsed; and the work must date, therefore, long prior to those inscriptions.' In addition to this, passages from YA'JNAWALKYA are found in the Pañchatantra, which will throw the date of the composition of his work at least as far back as the fifth century, and it is probable even that it may have originated at a much more remote period. It seems, however, that it is not earlier than the second century of the Christian era, since Professor Wilson supposes the name of a certain Muni, Nanaka, which name is found in YA'JNAWALKYA'S Institutes, originated about that time."

YĀ'JNAWALKYA SAMHITA'.

CHAPTER I.

HAVING adored Yājñawalkya, the lord of Yogins (ascetics), the Munis (anchorites) said :—"Do thou describe unto us in full, the religious rites of Varnas (four castes), ás'ramás (four orders),¹ and [those of] other inferior castes." (1)

Meditating for a while that lord of Yogins, residing in Mithilá² said to the Munis :—

"Know [these to be the] religious rites of the country where the antelope [roams at large]. (2)

Purāṇam,³ Nyāya,^{1(a)} Mīmāṃsā,^{1(b)} Dharma-S'āstra,^{1(c)} Védāṅga^{1(d)} [six], and the Védás^{1(e)} (four in number),—these fourteen are the roots of knowledge and religion. (3)

1 A stage or order, or period of the religious life of a Bráhmaṇāḥ, vis., Brahmacharyyam, student life, Gárhastyam, domestic mode, Vána-prastham, retirement in the forest and Sannyāsa.

2 A tract of country in Behar.

3 A class of religious literature, eighteen in number. The name Purāṇam, which itself implies old, indicates the object of the compilation to be the preservation of ancient traditions. The Lexicon of Amar Sinha gives, as a synonym of Purāṇam, Panchalakshanaṁ, that which has five characteristic topics, vis., (1) Primary Creation or Cosmogony; (2) Secondary Creation or the Destruction and Renovation of Worlds including Chronology; (3) Genealogy of Gods and Patriarchs; (4) Reigns of Manus; (5) History. The eighteen Purāṇas :—Brahma, Padma, Vishṇu, S'aiva, Bhágavat, Náradiya, Márkaṇdéya, Agni, Bhavishya, Brahmavaivarta, Līnga, Varáha, Skanda, Vámana, Kurma, Matsya, Garud'a, and Brahmánda.

3a A System of Hindu Philosophy founded by sage Gautama. It gives a philosophical arrangement with strict rules of reasoning which may be compared to the dialectics of the Aristotelian school. The text of Gautama, Nyāya-Sūtras, is a collection of Sūtras in five books or lectures, each divided into two daily lessons, and those again are subdivided into sections.

Manu, Atri, Vishnu, Hārita, Yājñawalkya; Us'ana, Aṅgirā, Yama, A'pastamva, Saṃvartta, Kātyāyana, Vrihaspati, Parás'ara, Vyása, S'aṅkha, Likhita, Dakṣha, Gotama, S'átátapa, and Vasishtha are the promulgators of Dharma-S'ástras (religious codes). (4—5)

All [articles] that are reverentially offered to a [worthy] person determining [proper] place (and) time, and others (other religious rites) are the marks of religion, (i.e., the means of attaining to the fruits of religious observances). (6)

S'rutis,¹ Smṛitis,² conduct of pious men, self-love, desire begotten of perfect determination are held [to be the] sources of religion, (i.e., religious knowledge). (7)

3(b) A System of Hindu Philosophy, the object of which is the interpretation of the Védās. "Its purpose," says a Commentator, "is to determine the sense of revelation. It is divided into two; the prior (Purea) Mīmāṃsā is practical as relating to work (Karma) or religious observances to be undertaken for specific ends; and it is accordingly called Karma-Mīmāṃsā in contradistinction to the theological, which is named Brahma-Mīmāṃsā."

3(c) Religious Codes, i.e., Sāṃhitās.

3(d) Certain classes of works regarded as auxiliary to the Védās and designed to aid in the correct pronunciation and interpretation of the text and right employment of Mantras in ceremonials. They are six in number :—(1) S'ikshā, the science of proper articulation and pronunciation; (2) Chhandas, prosody; (3) Vyākharanam, grammar; (4) Nirukta, etymological explanation of different Védic words; (5) Jyotiṣh, astrology; (6) Kalpa, ritual or ceremonial.

3(e) Rik, Sāman, Yajush and Atharvan,—these are the four Védās.

1 What is heard, i.e., the Védās.

2 What is remembered, i.e., the Purānās, Dharma-S'ástras, etc.

The seeing of átman (self) by Yoga (suppression of mental faculties), is a religion superior to that of all these works, viz., performance of religious rites, good conduct, self-restraint, abstention from cruelty, charity, and Védic studies. (8)

Four persons well read in the Védás and Religious Codes, or a number of Bráhmanás versed in the three Védás, form a synod. Whatever this (synod) or a person foremost amongst those well versed in spiritual science, declares, is religion.¹ (9)

The Bráhmanás, Kshatriyás, Vais'yás and the S'udrás, are the (four) Varṇas (castes); of them the first three are the twice-born.² All their rites, from the very conception (Garbhádhānam) to death (S'ráddha), are performed with the recitation of Mantrás (mystic syllables). (10)

Garbhádhānam [takes place when conception is formed] during the menses; Pūmsavanam (formation of a male child), before the moving of the foetus; Seemantonnyanam, in the sixth or eighth [month]; and Játakarma after delivery. (11)

Námakaranam [takes place] on the eleventh [day after birth]; Nishkramaṇam, in the fourth month; Anna-prás'anam, in the sixth month; and Chūd'ákaraṇam should be performed according to the practices of the family. (12)

With this (performance of rites) the sin begotten of semen and blood, is dissipated; in case of women these purificatory rites are performed without Mantrás [their marriage is only accompanied with Mantrás.] (13)

1. The author here means that one should remove his doubts in any religious question by the determination or decision of the entire body of this Religious Synod, or by that of an expert in spiritual science.

2 They are entitled to perform the ceremony of Saṃskárás. They are said to be born again when they put on the sacred thread.

The Upanayanam [ceremony] of a Brāhmanāḥ [is performed] in the eighth year [counting from the time] of conception; [that of] a Kshatriya, in the eleventh or according to the practices of the family. (14)

After the celebration of the Upanayanam ceremony, the preceptor, after reciting Maha-Vyāhṛiti,¹ should teach the disciple the Védās, good and pure conduct. (15)

Having placed the sacred thread on the ear, one, with his face directed towards the north, should pass urine and excreta during the day and the period of conjunction (morning and evening), and with that towards the south in the night. (16)

Then taking the organ and raising it up, he should wash and purify it with earth and water so carefully that there may not be the least smell or a particle of [urine or excreta] left. (17)

Then seated in a purified place with his face directed towards north or east and placing his hand between the two knee-joints, a twice-born one should daily rinse his mouth with Brahma-Tirtham. (18)

The bases of the smallest finger, the fore-finger, the thumb and the fore-part of the palm are severally called Prajāpati-Tirtha, Pitri-Tirtha, Brahma-Tirtha and Deva-Tirtha. (19)

After drinking water thrice, [one] should rinse his mouth twice with the base of the thumb and then wash the upper apertures (nostrils, etc.,) with water, natural, devoid of foam and bubbles and not brought by the S'ūdrās. The twice-born, (i.e., the Brāhmanāḥ,

1 A mystic word uttered by every Brāhmanāḥ in performing his daily Sandhyā, adoration; these Vyāhṛitis are those of Bhur, Bhuvā, and Swas usually repeated after Om.

Kshatriya, and the Vais'ya,) are generally purified when the water reaches the breast, throat and the palate. The women and S'ūdrās are purified when it merely touches the lips. (20—21)

[One] should daily bathe in the morning, sprinkle [his person] with the A'pohisthā-mantram, practise prāṇāyāma (suppression of the vital airs), Sūryyopasthānam (worshipping the sun), and recite the Gāyatrī.¹ (22)

Having suppressed the vital airs, one should recite the Gāyatrī thrice along with the A'pojyotiḥ-mantram preceded duty by a Vyāhṛiti united with a Pranava.² (23)

Having suppressed the vital airs, sprinkled himself with water [accompanied] with [the recitation of] A'pohisthā-mantram, [one] should, with his face towards the west, recite the *Sāvitrī*³ in the evening till the stars rise. (24)

In the morning, one should sit, with his face towards the east, till he sees the Sun [and perform] the *Sandhyā*⁴ (morning and evening devotions). After the Sandhyā adoration, he should worship [the sacred] fire. (25)

Then saying "I am such and such," (i.e., taking his own name,) he should salute the elders and then serve his preceptor steadfastly for the fruition of his (Swādhyāya) Védic studies. (26)

He should study when called [upon by his preceptor to do so] and dedicate unto him [whatever had been] acquired [by him by begging]. He should secure [the preceptor's] well being by his mind, words, body, and deeds. (27)

The grateful, the submissive, the intelligent, the pure. those who do not suffer from mental and physical ailments, those who are shorn of jealousy, the good-natured, those who are clever in serving friends, those who distribute learning and riches, are worthy of receiving religious instructions. (28)

One should carry a staff, a deer-skin, a sacred thread and a belt ; and for supporting himself [he] should secure alms from the house of a Brāhmaṇaḥ of unimpeachable character. (29) .

Using the word *bhavati*¹ respectively in the beginning, middle, and end, a Brāhmaṇaḥ, Kshatriya, or a Vais'ya should beg alms.* (30)

Having offered his adoration to the sacred fire,* he should, with the permission of his preceptor, take his meals silently. But before it he should adore the edibles without speaking ill of them and perform the A'pos'āna-rite, (a kind of prayer or formula repeated before and after eating, popularly called Gaṇḍ'usha). (31)

While a Brahmachārin (leading the life of a religious student), one should not partake of boiled rice brought from elsewhere unless he suffers from any disease. And a Brāhmaṇaḥ⁴ only is allowed to take food

1 An address of respect.

2 A Brāhmaṇaḥ should say,—"Bhavati, bhikshām dēhi," Madam, give me alms A Kshatriya should say,—"Biksham bhavati, dēhi." A Vais'ya should say,—"Bhiksham dēhi bhavati."

3 If he has not adored the fire before. It shows that adoration of the sacred fire is obligatory on every Hindu.

4 The word Brāhmaṇaḥ is particularly used here, for a Kshatriya-, or a Vais'ya-, religious student is not allowed to take food on the occasion of a S'raddha.

as he likes [when invited on the occasion of a] S'rāddha,¹ provided he does not break his vow. (32)

[A twice-born] should always avoid honey, meat, collyrium, residue of food (partaken of by any body else than a preceptor), harsh words, women, injury to animals, looking at the Sun (in the morning and evening), obscene words and calumny. (33)

He is called guru, who, having performed all the rites [beginning with the Garbhadhānam] delivers instructions in the Védās. He is called āchāryya who teaches the Védās after having performed only the ceremony of Upanayanam. (34)

[He is called] upādhyāya who teaches only a portion of the Védās; [and he is] called ṛitwik who celebrates sacrifices. Of them every one deserves greater respect according to the order [in which] he is mentioned. But the mother is superior to them all. (35)

In studying each Védā, one should lead the life of a religious student for twelve years, or for five years [at the lowest]. Some say [one should observe] brahmacharyyam while studying the Védās. [One should have] his hairs shaven in the sixteenth year [beginning with the conception]. (36)

The period up to the sixteenth, twenty-second, and the twenty-fourth, year, is laid down as the time for Upanayanam [respectively] for the Brāhmaṇaḥ, Kshatriya- and the Vais'ya. (37)

After that, i.e., (when Upanayanam is performed) they are prohibited from performing all the religious rites, [and] reciting the Gāyatrī till they perform the rite of the Vrātyastoma.² (38)

1 A religious rite performed in honor of the departed manes.

2 Name of a sacrifice performed to recover the rights forfeited by the non-performance of due Samskárās.

The first birth proceeds from the parents, and the second, from the binding of the *Mounji*¹ (investiture with the sacred thread); therefore the Brāhmaṇās, Kshatriyās, and the Vais'yās are called the twice-born. (39)

Of sacrifices, asceticism and sacred rites, the Védā alone is more powerful in bringing emancipation unto the twice-born [ones]. (40)

The twice-born, who daily studies the Rig-Védam, gratifies the celestials with honey and milk, and the departed manes with honey and clarified butter. (41)

He, who daily studies the Yajur-Védam, to the best of his power, gratifies the celestials with clarified butter and nectar, and the departed manes with clarified butter and honey. (42)

He, who daily studies the Sāma-Védam, gratifies the celestials with Soma-juice and clarified butter, and the departed manes with honey and clarified butter. (43)

He, who daily studies, to the best of his power, the Atharvaṇ of [Rishi] Angīras, gratifies the celestials with marrow, and the departed manes with honey and clarified butter. (44)

He, who studies daily, to the best of his power, the Védās in the form of questions and answers, the Purāṇās, Dharma-S'āstras (Religious Codes), [Rudra-daivata-] mantras, Gāthās, Itihāsās (History), and other (Religious verses), sciences (Vārūṇī), gratifies the celestials with meat, milk, boiled rice and honey, and the departed manes with honey and clarified butter. (45—46)

Gratified, they (the celestials and the departed manes) please him (the reader) with the auspicious fruition of all his desires. He, who recites [the portion of a Védā relating to a particular] sacrifice, reaps the fruit of that [particular sacrifice]. (47)

A twice-born person, who daily studies the Védās, reaps the fruits of giving away thrice the earth full of riches [as well as those] of the best ascetic observances. (48)

A perpetual religious student [who vows a life-long abstinence and celibacy,] should [for ever] live near his preceptor; in his absence, [near] his son; in the latter's absence, [near] his wife; [and in her absence,] near the sacred fire. (49)

By such a method [a religious student] who has controlled his senses, after renouncing his body, attains to the region of Brahma; he is not born again in this world. (50)

Having completed his Védā, (i.e., Védic studies) or the vows (of celibacy), or the both, and after having paid the best fee to his preceptor, he should, with his (preceptor's) permission, take his bath. (51)

[A twice-born one,] whose celibacy has not been disturbed, should marry a maiden endued with auspicious marks, (i.e., shorn of all defects, such as, eunuchism, etc.), ananyapūrvikām (who had not been known by any one before or who had not previously been promised to any one), beautiful, asapindām, (i.e., remote from his father's family by seven degrees and that of his mother by five,) younger in age, freed from (incurable) diseases, having brother, born in a different gotra (family), distanced from his mother's family by five degrees and that of his father by seven. (52—53)

[A maiden should be taken from] a highly respectable family, of persons well-read in the Védās, and inheriting the virtue of ten generations [five degrees higher on both the paternal and maternal side], prosperous [with riches and servants]; but not even from [such a] family, if there be any hereditary disease. (54)

A bride-groom should be endued with all the accomplishments [enumerated above], be of the same caste and social standing, well-read in the Védās, carefully examined about his manly power, youthful, intelligent, and agreeable to all the people. (55)

There is a saying that the twice-born ones can get their wives from among the S'ūdrās: I do not approve of it; for, the ātman (soul) itself is born there (in the wife) [as the son].¹ (56)

The Brāhmanās, Kshatriyās and the Vais'yas must take wives, three, two and one in number according to the order of their caste.² The wife of a S'ūdra must be of his own caste. (57)

That is called a Brāhma marriage where a maiden, adorned according to one's own power, is given away to [a bride-groom] on being invited. A son, begotten of such [a marriage], sanctifies twenty-one generations.³ (58)

1 For the purpose of begetting a son, a twice-born one must not marry a S'ūdra woman. But he can, after the demise of his own caste, wife, take a S'ūdra wife for the satisfaction of his carnal appetites. This is the purpose of the S'loka. If a Brāhmaṇa, however, begets a son upon his S'ūdra wife, the son does not inherit his father's property.

2 A Brahmana can take his wife, three in number, from amongst the Brāhmanās, Kshatriyās and the Vais'yās; a Kshatriya can take two wives from amongst the Kshatriyās and Vais'yās; and a Vais'ya can take one wife from amongst the Vais'yās.

3 Ten generations before, ten generations after, and the soul of the beggetter.

[That is called] Daiva [marriage] [in which a maiden is given to] a ṛitwijah (priest), engaged in a sacrifice. [A marriage that is celebrated [after] taking a pair of cows [is called] A'rsha. A son, born of the former, sanctifies fourteen generations and that of the latter, six. (59)

[A marriage in which a maiden] is given to a soliciting [person] after saying [practise religion with her] ; is called Kāyah [A son] begotten of [such a marriage,] sanctifies six generations [upwards] and six generations [downwards] together with the soul [of the begetter]. (60)

A's'ura [marriage is that in which] money is taken [in exchange for the bride]; Gāndharva [marriage is that in which the parties] unite themselves by a vow of mutual love ; a Rākshasa marriage [is that in which the maiden] is carried away by fighting ; [and] a Pis'ācha marriage [is that in which] a maiden [is taken away] stealthily (while asleep or by stratagem). (61)

[In an alliance] between parties of the same caste, the hand should be taken ; in that between a higher caste and a lower one, the Kshatriyah should take an arrow, and a Vais'yah], a goad. (62)

A father, a grand-father, a brother, one of the same family, and a brother can give away a bride. With the death of the preceding [person] the succeeding person in order [can do the same, provided that] he is in natural temper, (i.e., does not suffer from insanity). (63)

[A qualified person,] not giving away (in marriage, a maiden,) will be visited by the sin of the destruction of foetus at every time of her menses. In the absence of a giver, the maiden should herself give her away. (64)

[If a person] steals (gives to another) a maiden who had been (once) given away (either) by words or mind, he meets with the punishment of a thief. But if a bride-groom, better than [the promised] one is got, she may be (even if promised) given away to him (the former). (65)

[If one] gives away (a maiden) without mentioning her shortcomings, [he] is punished with the highest pecuniary punishment (uttamasāhasam).¹ For renouncing a maiden who has no shortcomings, or for attributing (false) defect to her, one is punished a hundred times more. (66)

A virgin (maiden, or one who has been known by a man, when purified again after performing the purificatory rites, is called 'born again' (punarbhū). She, who having left her husband, seeks one of her own caste out of lust, is called Svairinī (an unchaste woman). (67)

A younger brother (of a woman's husband, [in his absence,] a sapiṇḍa (a kinsman connected by the offering of the funeral rice-ball to the manes), [in his absence,] one of the same family (sagotra), for begetting a son, can, with the permission of her elders, having his body rubbed with clarified butter, know a woman, who has not given birth to a son, in her season, one after another, till she conceives. Otherwise, (i.e., if he knows her at any other time,) he will be condemned. A son, born by this procedure, will be [called] Kṣhetraja.² (68—69)

[One should make] an unchaste wife,—deprived of [all her] rights, living poorly, taking only a morsel of food, (piṇḍamātropajivinīm),² always chidden and lying on earth,—live in his own house, [so that she might withdraw herself from her sinful course]. (70)

The Moon has conferred on them (women) purity ; the Gandharvas, sweet speech ; [and] Fire, the most exalted state of holiness ; [therefore] women are most holy. (71)

[If a woman commit] adultery [mentally] [she gets] purified with her menses ; renunciation [of a woman] is prescribed, [if she] conceives [by associating with a low caste man], or commits a mighty iniquity, such, as the destruction of an embryo, that of her husband, etc. (72)

One can take a second wife, [if his existing wife] drinks intoxicating liquors, suffers from any disease, is wicked, barren, dissipates money, utters unpleasant words, gives birth to female issues [only], and is inimical to her husband. (73)

But the superseded wife should (always) be maintained ; otherwise a great sin is committed. Threefold objects of life (virtue, worldly profit, and pleasure) multiply there where the husband and wife help each other. (74)

[The woman], who does not see any other man, whether her husband is alive or dead, reaps great fame in this world and sports with Umā² in the next. (75)

[If a husband renounces] a wife, who carries out his command, is skilful in work, who has given birth to heroic sons, (and) is sweet-speeched, she should be given one third of [her husband's] property and maintenance [if he is poor]. (76)

1 She will be allowed only that quantity of food which will keep her body and soul together.

2 The consort of Ś'iva, one of the three deities of Hindu Triad.

A wife should carry into practice her husband's words,—for this is the highest duty of a wife; but [she] should await the period of purification [if her husband] is sullied by any great iniquity. (77)

By sons, grandsons and great-grandsons, is acquired an unending family [in this world] and the celestial region hereafter;¹ for these purposes a wife should be served and well-maintained and protected.² (78)

Sixteen days or nights [commencing with the day of the menses] are the menstrual period of the womankind; of them one should know his wife on the night of an even day [such as, the fourth, the sixth, or the eighth, night]. This is Brahmacharyyam.³ On the other hand, one should avoid *parva*⁴ days and the first four days [of the menses]. (79)

[One] should [always] avoid *Maghā*⁵ and Mūlā; and thus knowing his wife, emaciated (by restricted diet and the observance of menstrual regulations) when the moon sets, a man should procreate an excellent son endowed with auspicious marks. (80).

1 These two are the fruits of marriage, namely, the family is multiplied in this world and the celestial region is attained hereafter; one's progeny being entitled to perform the Agnihotra rites.

2 A husband should know his wife for the purpose of procreating sons and maintain her for religious purposes.

3 If one knows his wife under these regulations he does not lose the vow of a religious student.

4 One should not know his wife on chaturdasī (fourteenth day of the moon), ashtami (eighth day), dvadvashyā (the last day of the dark half month), and the last day of the month.

5 The tenth lunar mansion containing five stars—the thirteenth day of the dark half of Bhādrapada.

6 The Asterism Mūlā.

Remembering the vow of women, being faithfully devoted to one's own wife and being influenced by desire proportionate to (hers), one can know [his wife], (even at any other time except the menstrual period), for it is laid down in the Smritis that women should be protected (by every means). (81)

Women should [always] be adored by the husband, brother, father, kinsman, mother-in-law, father-in-law, husband's younger brother and the other relatives with ornaments, clothes and food. (82)

Women should keep the household articles in order, be expert [in domestic works], contented, economical in expenditure, salute the feet of their mothers-in-law and fathers-in-law and be devoted to their husbands. (83)

A woman, whose husband is absent from home, should renounce sports, personal decorations, the witnessing of social festivities, laughing, and visiting other people's houses. (84)

A father should protect [a woman when she is] a maiden; a husband after she is married; and a son, in her old age; in the absence [of a legitimate protector] the kinsmen [should protect her]; independence is not for womankind. (85)

A woman, having no husband, should be taken care of by the father, mother, son, brother mother-in-law, father-in-law, or maternal uncle; otherwise she will be an object of censure. (86)

[The woman who is] devoted to the well-being of her husband, is observant of good conduct and has [her]

senses under restraint, reaps glory in this world and incomparable bliss in the next. (87)

[A wife of] the same caste existing, [a husband having many wives] should not make [a wife of] another caste perform the religious rites ; in case of many wives of one's own caste (existing), the first-married one is [entitled to the performance of] the religious rites, and not the other. (88)

Having burnt a wife of good conduct with Agni-hotra,¹ a husband should, - duly and without delay, marry her again and bring fire. (89)

Sons of the same caste are begotten by [persons of the] same caste upon [wives of the] same caste. Sons [begotten] in unblamable marriages (such as Brāhma, etc.,) multiply the race. (90)

The son begotten on a Kshatriya wife by a Brāhmaṇa, [is called] Mūrdhābhishikt ḥ ; that on a Vais'ya wife, *Amvashtha*ḥ ; that on a S'ūdra wife, *Nishāda*ḥ or *Pāras'ava*ḥ. (91)

Sons [begotten] on Vais'ya and S'ūdra [women] by a Kshatriya, [are respectively known] in the Smṛitis [as] *Māhishya*ḥ and *Ugra*ḥ. [The son begotten on a] S'ūdra [woman] by a Vais'ya, [is called] *Karana*ḥ. The rule applies, according to the Smṛitis, to married wives. (92)

[The son begotten by a] Kshatriya on a Brāhmaṇa [woman, is called] *Sūta*ḥ ; [that begotten by a] Vais'ya, [is called] *Vaidēhaka*ḥ ; [that begotten by a] S'ūdra,

is Chanāḍalāḥ driven out of the pale of all religious rites. (93)

[A son born of a] Kshatriya [mother] by a Vais'ya [father] [is called] Māgadhaḥ; [that begotten by a] S'ūdraḥ [is called] Kattāḥ; a S'ūdraḥ begets on a Vais'yā woman a son [called] Ayogavaḥ. (94)

A Māhishyaḥ begets on a Karana woman [a son called] Rathakāraḥ. Thus Pratiloma (be-gotten by a father of an inferior caste upon a mother of superior caste) and Anuloma (begotten by a father of superior caste upon a mother of inferior caste) offspring are known as Asat (bad) and Sat (good) (95)

[The attainment of an] excellent (higher) caste is known to take place in the seventh, or the fifth, Yuga (cycle or birth) : [in case of the existence of] a degraded livelihood, equality [of lower caste takes place in the seventh, sixth, or the fifth, birth]; [the superior or inferior position and the attainment of an excellent caste of] Uttara (son begotten by a Kshatriyah on a Mūrdhābhishiktā woman) and Adhara (son begotten on her by a Brāhmanah) [should be determined] as before.¹ (96)

A person, leading the domestic mode of life, should daily perform the Smārta (prescribed in a Code of Laws) actions in the *Vivāha*² Fire or that brought according to the division of time, and S'routa (prescribed in the S'ruti) actions in *Vaitānika*³ Fire. (97)

³ A sacrificial fire.

Having passed urine and excreta (S'arīrachintā) and duly performed the purificatory actions and cleansed his teeth, a twice-born one should recite his morning prayers. (98)

[Then] having offered oblations to Fire, [he] being self-controlled, should recite the Sūryyadaivata-Mantras and study the Védās and various other scriptural works. (99)

[Then] for getting what has not been gained and for protecting what has been acquired, he should approach the king; then, after bathing, he should offer oblations of water to the celestials and the departed manes (Pitṛis). (100)

For attaining consummate result in recitation and sacrifice, he should study the Védās (the Rik, Yajus, Sāman, and the Atharvan), the Purāṇas, the Itihāsās, (and the entire body of spiritual sciences), according to his might. (101)

Sacrifice of animals (Vali), oblation or food offered to the manes (Swādhā), oblation to Fire (Homa), study and teaching of the Védās (Swādhya), and the reception of guests, are the great sacrifices of the Bhūtās (evil spirits), Pitṛis (departed manes), Devas (celestials), Brahmā, and Manushya (mankind). (102)

From amongst the remnant of food offered in Fire to the celestials, [one] should procure food for the evil spirits, and then throw a portion on earth for the dogs, the Chandālās (degraded caste), the crows, etc. (103)

One should daily offer food and water to the departed manes and human beings: one should daily study and teach the Védās, [but] one should never cook food for oneself. (104)

After having fed the child, the woman who lives in her father's house after being married, the aged, women in family way, the diseased, the maiden, the guests, and the servants, the husband and wife should partake of the residue. (105)

Before and after taking meals, the food should be converted into a substance not other than fire and nectar with the Apos'ānaḥ (prayer).¹ (106)

[One] should give, according to his might [food, etc.,] to all the castes [arrived] as guests. If a guest comes uninvited [even] in the night, [one should treat him] with words, earth, grass and water. (107)

Alms should be given to a beggar after having received him well; (similarly) to a Brahmachārīn; [one] should feed friends and relatives arrived at the time of taking meals. (108).

[One should] place before a S'rotriyaḥ a big bull or a big goat;² one should offer him a welcome, a seat, sweet food and sweet words. (109)

A Snātakaḥ,³ a preceptor, a king, a friend and relations formed by marriage (such as son-in-law father-in-law, maternal uncle, etc.,) should be offered *arghyaḥ*⁴

1. A kind of prayer or formula repeated before and after eating; the formulas being respectively

अमृतोपिस्तरणमपि स्वाहा and अमृतापिधानमपि स्वाहा ।

2 One should not make a gift of them or kill them for the learned Brāhmaṇaḥ but simply place them before him as a sort of hearty welcome.

3 A Brāhmaṇaḥ who has performed the ceremony of ablution which has to be performed on his finishing the first ās'ramaḥ.

4 A respectful offering or oblation to a god or a venerable person; the ingredients of this offering are :

आपः क्षीरं कुशाग्रं च दधिसर्पिः सतण्डुलम् ।
यवः सिद्धार्थकश्चैव अष्टांगोऽर्घः प्रवीर्तितः ॥

once a year; a ṛitwik (sacrificial priest) should again and again be [similarly honoured]. (110)

A traveller is to be known as an atithī (guest), and one versed in the Védas as S'rotriyaḥ. [They are] both worthy of respect to a householder who desires for the region of Brahmá. (111)

Save when invited by a person of unimpeachable character, one should have no desire for food cooked by any other person. [One should] avoid fickleness of speech, unsteadiness of hands and feet and over-feeding. (112)

[One should] follow to the end of the boundary [of one's house] a S'rotriya guest gratified with feeding, [and] spend the rest of the day in the company of good and prosperous friends.¹ (113)

Having performed the evening devotion, offered oblation to [the three] Fires and worshipped them, [one] surrounded by servants, should take food moderately² [and] then go to bed. (114)

Having risen from the bed at Bráhma-muhūrta (early part of dawn), [one should] think of the well-being of one's soul, and, then, according to one's might and in proper time, serve virtue, worldly profit and pleasure. (115)

[One] is respected in order [according to one's endowment] of learning, religious deeds, age, friends and wealth. Endued with all these even a S'ūdraḥ, in his old age, deserves respect (116)

² Anatitriptijanaḥ .s., must not be overfed.

An aged burden-carrier, a king, a Snátaka, a woman, a diseased person, a bridegroom, and a cart-man, should [always] be given road; a king is adorable unto them all; but a Snátaka, [even] to the king. (117)

The celebration of sacrifices, study and the making of gifts, [are the general duties of] the Vais'yás and Kshatriyás; the Bráhmaṇás have in addition to these, the acceptance of gifts, the performance of religious rites for others, and teaching. (118)

The highest duty of a Kshatriyaḥ is the protection of subjects; money-lending, agriculture, trade and the tending of cattle are sanctioned for the Vais'yás. (119)

The service of the twice-born, is [the duty of a] S'ūdraḥ; if he cannot maintain himself by that, he may become a tradesman; or he may maintain himself with various works of art, but he should always do good unto the twice-born. (120)

[He should be] devotedly attached to his wife, be of pure conduct, a protector of servants and given to the performance of S'ráddha. With the recitation of the Mantram-Namas, he should perform the five Yajñas. (121)

Abstention from cruelty, truthfulness, not stealing, purity, control of the senses, charity, mercy, self-restraint, and forgiveness, are the religious practices for all. (122)

[One should] perform actions shorn of crookedness, and dishonesty, according to [the nature of] age, intellect, wealth, words, dress, learning, family, and deeds. (123)

The twice-born one, who has in store food for three years to last, can drink Soma-juice; [and] one, who has food in store for a year, before the drinking of Soma, should perform the rites which ought to be performed, (i.e., the Agnihotra.) (124)

One should perform every year the Soma-Yajña ; at every Ayana (the period of duration of the sun's passage, north and south of the equator), the Pas'u-Yajña ; [at the time of the growth of corns], the Agrayana-Yajña ; [and at every year], the Chaturmāsya. (125)

[The celebration of] all these becoming impossible, a twice-born one should celebrate the Vaisyānarī (Fire Sacrifice ; but he should never do an inferior one, or perform on an inferior scale even a sacrifice that is undertaken with some definite object. (126)

If a sacrifice is performed with articles begged from a S'ūdraḥ, one is born as a Chandūlaḥ ; [if one does not give away] every article obtained for a sacrifice he becomes a crow. (127)

By [means of] S'ilāḥ (gathering of corns dropped or thrown by others), and Unchchhaḥ (taking of a parcel of corn thrown by others), [or] by being Kus'ūlaḥ (having foodstuff capable of maintaining his relatives for twelve days), [or] Kumbhīḥ (having the same for six days), [or] having foodstuff for three days, [or] being As'wastanaḥ (one who has no food for the morrow), [a householder] should carry on his livelihood ; of these [modes], each succeeding one is superior to the former. (128)

[One should] never accept an adverse interpretation of the Védās, gifts from unknown persons, [gain livelihood] by officiating as a priest to an unworthy person, nor by singing and dancing ; and [should] always be contented. (129)

When stricken with hunger, (i.e., when one cannot maintain one's relatives with the ordinary revenue), a king may collect money from persons living on the boundary, and those who are worthy of receiving services from priests. One should avoid persons who perform religious rites for vanity, who make false reasonings, follow orders of life not sanctioned in the scriptures. and who follow the conduct of cranes (cheats). (130)

[One should] put on a white raiment, should dress beards and hairs and pare nails and be purified; one should not take food, before one's wife, with one piece of cloth on, or while standing. (131)

[One] should not go to a place [where there is] danger [of life], nor should one all on a sudden give utterance to unpleasant words, or do what is not conducive to [one's] well-being; one should not speak untruthful words, steal, or maintain oneself with forbidden means. (132)

[One should] wear golden Kundalās (ear-ornaments) and the sacred thread, and hold the bamboo-stick and the Kamaṇḍalu (water-pitcher); [one] should go round the image of a deity, raised earth, a cow, a Brāhmaṇa and a tree. (133)

One should not pass urine and excreta in a river, in a shady place, on a public way, in a pasturage, in water and ashes; nor before fire, the sun, the moon, a woman or a Brāhmaṇa, and at the period of conjunction. (134)

[One should] not eye the sun, a woman naked, or engaged in sexual intercourse; should not look at urine and excreta, and being impure, at Rāhu and stars. (135)

One should not go uncovered, while raining, reciting all the Mantramās, such as, "This is my thunderbolt." One should not go to bed naked with one's head towards the west. (136)

[One should not] throw into water, saliva, blood, excreta, urine, and semen; one should neither warm one's feet on fire nor cross it over. (137)

[One should] not drink water with one's folded palms, nor rouse any person while asleep, should not play dice [or indulge in games] destructive of virtue, [and should] not lie on the same bed with a diseased person. (138)

[One should] avoid forbidden deeds, the smoke of funeral pyre, crossing the river [by swimming], and standing on hairs, ashes, chaffs, embers and skull-bones. (139)

[One] should not look at a calf drinking its mother's milk, should not enter (a city, village, or temple) by a bad road, receive gifts from a king who is miserly, and a transgressor of scriptural injunctions. (140)

Of butcher, oilman, wine-seller, prostitute, and a king (as described before in the matter of receiving gifts), every succeeding one is ten times more culpable than the preceding one. (141)

When medicinal herbs grow, on the full-moon day of *S'rāvāṇa*¹ (month), or on a day, under the S'ravanā asterism, or on the fifth day under *Hastā*² asterism, one should begin the study of the Védās. (142)

On a day under the *Rohini*³ asterism in the month of Poush, or on an *Asthakā*⁴ Tithi, one should, near water, at the outskirt of a village, duly consecrate one's Védic studies. (143)

1 A lunar month corresponding to July and August.

2 Name of the thirteenth lunar mansion consisting of five stars.

3 Name of the fourth lunar mansion consisting of five stars figured by a cart.

4 A collection of three days (7th, 8th, 9th) beginning from the seventh day after the full moon.

At the death of a disciple, a Ritwik, a preceptor, a friend, or a Srottriya studying the same branch of the Védā, at Upakarman (a ceremony performed before commencing to read the Védā), and at Utsarga (dedication), the Védās should not be studied for three days. (144)

If there is roaring of clouds in the morning and evening, an ominous sound in the sky, earthquake and dropping of fire-brands, the finishing of the Védās and the study of the Aranyakas should be stopped for one day and night. (145)

[Similarly, i.e., the study should be stopped for one whole day and night] on Amāvasyā (the fifteenth day of the dark-half month), on the fullmoon day, fourteenth day, eighth day, on the day of solar or lunar eclipse, on the junction days of the seasons,* on the day when one partakes of food and accepts presents, on the occasion of a Srāddha. (146)

If any pashu (animals which are fourteen in number, viz., cow, sheep, goat, horse, mule, ass and man—these domestic, and buffalo, monkey, bear, reptile, ruru-deer, spotted-antelope and deer—these wild ones), or a frog, mongoose, cat, horse and mouse, [happens] to pass between [a student and preceptor], or [on the day of] the hoisting and throwing down of the enemy's [standard], [Védic studies should be stopped] for one day and night. (147)

[Similarly it should not be studied] when a dog, jackal, ass, or an owl emits a noise, [when] the Sāmans

* Here the word Ritu refers to the summer, rainy and winter seasons, i.e., on the Pratipad day of Chaitra, S'ravana, and Agra háyana, the Védā should not be studied.

are sung [when there is any sound] of arrows, [when] the cry of a person in danger [is heard], near an unholy [place or object], a dead body, a S'udra, a degraded caste, a cremation-ground, a fallen person, an unholy place, in an impure state, when the muttering of clouds and thunder is heard, when the hand is yet wet after eating, within water, in the middle of the night, when high winds blow, when ominous dust is showered, when the quarters are ablaze, at the periods of conjunction, when any fear (proceeds either from a king or a robber), while running, when a bad smell comes, when a good person arrives at the house, while going on an ass, camel, chariot, elephant, horse, boat, tree, or a desert. These thirty-seven are known as periods not fit for Vedic studies. (148—151)

[One should not] cross an idol, a Ritwik, a Snátaka, a preceptor, the shadow of another's wife, blood, excreta, urine, saliva, turmeric etc., that had been rubbed on the person, and others (i.e., water used for bathing, etc.) (152)

A learned Brâhmaṇa, a serpent, a Kshatriya king and one's ownself should never be treated lightly. One should desire for riches until death, but one should never cut any person to the quick. (153)

[One should] throw at a distance [from the house] remnants of food, excreta, urine and water used for washing feet; and should daily follow the rules of conduct laid down in the S'rutis and Smritis. (154)

One should never touch with foot, a cow, a Brâhmaṇa, fire and the remnant of cooked rice left after eating; should not vilify or chastise another; but one can reprove a son or a disciple [at the time of teaching]. (155)

[One should] perform religious rites carefully by deeds, mind and words; one should not perform a religious rite which is censured by the people and which does not lead to the celestial region [even if it is sanctioned in the Scriptures]. (156)

Having renounced dissensions with mother, father, guest, brother, Jāmi (sister, daughter or daughter-in-law) Samvandhi (father-in-law, brother-in-law, etc.,) maternal uncle, an old man, a boy, a diseased person, a preceptor, a physician, a dependant, a friend, a Ritwik, a priest, son, daughter, wife, servant, sister and kinsmen, a householder conquers all the regions. (157—158)

One should not, without uplifting the five pīndas (funeral cakes), bathe in a pool of water belonging to another person. [But one can] bathe in a river, a tank, dedicated to a deity, a pool and a fountain. (159)

One should avoid the bed, seat, garden-house and the conveyance belonging to another person; one should not, except at a critical moment, partake of the boiled rice of a person who is not [entitled to maintain] Fire. (160)

A miser, one fettered in a chain, a thief, a eunuch, an actor, one living on bamboo (i.e., bamboo-made articles), one notorious for doing evil deeds, a usurer, a public woman, a multitude of men, one initiated into a sacrifice before Agnīsthoma, a physician, a person in difficulty, an angry person, a loose woman, a drunkard, an enemy, a wily wight, a terrific [person], a degraded [individual], a Vrātya (a man of the first three classes who has lost caste owing to the non-performance of the principal Saṁskārās or purificatory rites, (especially the investiture of the sacred thread over him), a vain man

(i.e., who performs religious works for name), one who partakes of eaten food, a woman having no husband or son, a goldsmith, one under the sole influence of a woman, one who works as a priest for the [entire] village, the seller of weapons, a blacksmith, a weaver, the seller of dogs, a cruel king, a washerman (or dyer of cloth), an ungrateful person, one who lives on killing animals, one who removes the dirt of clothes, the seller of wine, one whose house is visited by a paramour, one who points out others' faults, a liar, an oilman, a panegyrist, a seller of Soma-juice,—the food of all these persons should not be partaken of. (161—165)*

One should avoid food which has not been reverentially offered to an adorable person, useless meat (i.e., of an animal which has not been sacrificed before a deity), which is full of hairs and worms, which though sweet by nature becomes acid when mixed with curd, which has been cooked a night before, which has been partaken of by another, which has been touched by a dog, which has been looked at by a degraded person, which has been touched by a woman in menses, which is offered with an announcement (who will eat this?), which, though belonging to one, is offered in another's name, which is smelt by a cow, eaten by a bird and has been knowingly touched by foot. (166—167)

* By the regulation "the boiled rice of a person who is not entitled to maintain Fire should not be taken," it has been laid down that the food of the S'ūdrās is not to be taken. But there were exceptions to this rule, and one could partake of the food of a servant, a cowherd, of one with whose family hereditary friendship had been maintained, of one who acted as a partner in the cultivation of lands, of a barber and of one who entirely surrendered himself. But this law no longer holds good now.

Of S'udrás : the food of a servant, of a cowherd, of one with whose family hereditary friendship has been maintained, of one with whom one cultivates land in half shares, of a barber, and of one who entirely surrenders himself, could be taken. (168)

An edible, which has been prepared a night before, and one, prepared with clarified butter or oil, and kept for some time, may be taken. Cakes of wheat and barley and that made of milk (dried up), [even] if not made with clarified butter or oil, [may be taken,] if they are not sour to the taste. (169)

[One should] avoid the milk of a Sandhinī (a cow in heat, i.e., united with a bull or impregnated by him, or a cow milked unseasonably), of an Anirddas'ahā (within the ten days of impurity caused by the birth of a calf), or of one which has no calf, [as well as] that of a camel, a mare, an animal having two udders (excepting a she-goat), of wild animals (excepting a she-buffaloe) and of an ewe. (170)

[One should avoid] havi (clarified butter) made for the worship of a deity, [before the adoration is finished,] the juice of a pot-herb, that of a red-coloured tree, that of trees born of cuttings, meat of animals not offered in sacrifices, those born in a place where excreta is passed, mushrooms, meat of animals living on flesh, of chātaka, (a bird which lives on rain-drops), parrot, pratuda (such as hawks, parrots, crows, etc.,) tittibha (a kind of bird), crane, horse, swan, domesticated animals, heron, water-fowl, chakravāka, valāṅkā, vaka, vishkira, useless (i.e., not made for a deity) kṛisara (a kind of food made of boiled sesame seeds), saṁyāva (made of milk, molasses and clarified butter)

[the meat of] chāsha (bird) and of birds having red-feet, that of an animal killed at a slaughter-house and dried meat or fish. If one knowingly eats the same, one should fast for three days. (175)

Having knowingly eaten onion, [the meat of] domesticated hog, mushroom, village fowls, garlic and turnip one should perform Chandrāyaṇam.* (176).

Sédhas (porcupine), crocodiles, tortoises, porcupines and rhinoceros—these five-nailed animals, and of fish, Simhāsya, Rohita, Pāthina, Rājīva and lobsters are allowed to be eaten by the twice-born. Listen now to the regulations regarding what meat should be taken and what not. (177—178)

[Taking meat] when life is in danger, at a S'rāddha, [as well as] prokshita (meat of an animal offered in fire for a sacrifice) and taking [the residue of] meat after having offered it to the twice-born, the celestials and the departed manes, does not lead to the commitment of any sin. (179)

[The purification of] Sphya (a kind of sacrificial vessel called Vajra), winnowing basket, sacrificial antelope-skin, paddy, pestle, mortar and car, [is also made by hot water]. The sprinkling of water [also purifies] beddings and a collection of raiments. (184)

Paring or cutting purifies vessels made of wood, horns and bones; vessels containing fruits are purified [when] rubbed with the hairs of a cow's tail; sacrificial vessels [should be purified with] palms [and be used in sacrifices.] (185)

Woolen and silken raiments [are purified with] the ashes of plantain leaves, earth, cow's urine and water; ams'upātta (a kind of silk-cloth), with Bael fruits and blankets with cow's urine and water. (186)

† A sort of wooden ladle, used for pouring clarified butter in Sacrificial Fire; (usually made of trees like Palās'a or Khadira).

§ A kind of sacrificial vessel.

Silken raiments [are purified] with gaurasarsāpa (cow's urine and water) and earthen vessels [if not particularly impure] with being burnt again. The hand of an artisan, articles for sale, articles obtained by begging, and the face of a woman, are [always] pure. (187)

The purification of earth [is encompassed by] rubbing, burning, or in time (i.e., till the sign of the impure object is entirely destroyed), or by the sprinkling of cow-dung and water, or by rain, or by digging, or by rubbing with cow-dung. A house [is purified] by rubbing, and pasting [with cow-dung].* (188)

Any edible being made impure by the smell of a cow, or by hairs, insects and flies, water, ashes, or earth should be thrown into it for its purification. (189)

Tin, lead, copper and brass [are purified by] water mixed with ashes, that mixed with acid or [simple water; bell-metal and iron, by water [mixed with] ashes; and clarified butter [and similar] other substances [by mixing them with a profusion of them.] (190)

[The purification of] impure gold and silver [is encompassed by] the removal of smell by [the application of] earth and water; Vaks'asta (i.e., any article that is always spoken of as being pure), any article washed by water and any that is not known, are [always] pure. (191)

Water that gives satisfaction to the cow, that is in its natural state and is on earth (i.e., even when placed in an impure ground), is always pure. (192)

* The purport of the s'loka is that a house, should be daily cleansed and rubbed with cow-dung, the latter being regarded by the Hindus as a great disinfectant.

The meat of an animal killed by a dog [or by a] Chandāla, and of animals which live on flesh, [are, also, pure]. (192)*

The rays of the sun, fire, dust, shade, cow, horse, earth, air, frost and fly, even when touched [by a Chandāla], are [always] pure, [and so] is a young one while sucking milk. (193).

The face of a goat and horse is pure, but that of a cow, or the impurities of a person's body are not so. The roads are purified by the rays of the sun, moon, and the wind. (194)

Drops of water begotten in the mouth, drops [of water left after] rinsing, [and] beards inside the mouth are pure; [things] fixed on the teeth and not dropped, are [also] pure. (195)

After bathing, drinking water, yawning, sleeping, eating, walking, putting on cloth, weeping, [as also after] reading, [one should] rinse his mouth again, even if he has done it once [before] (196)

Mud and water lying on a roadside and buildings made of burnt bricks, when touched by Chandālās or by other degraded castes, and by dogs and crows, are purified by air. (197)

Having practised penances, Brahmā created the Brāhmanās for protecting the Védās, pleasing the celestials and the departed manes, and for upholding religion. (198)

Brāhmanās, endued with Vedic studies, are superior to all [the other castes]; of them those, given to the performance of religious acts, are superior; of them those, gifted with the knowledge of self, [are superior]. (199)

* This is the last half of the śloka so numbered.

The worthiness of a person is not [determined by] mere learning or asceticism; but he is known as a worthy person in whom both these exist. (200)

A cow, earth, sesame (seed), gold and other [similar articles], after being duly adored, should be given to [a qualified] person; nothing should be given by a learned person, seeking his own well-being, to an unworthy person. (201)

Nothing should be accepted by a person devoid of learning or of ascetic observances; having accepted [a present], [such a person] takes the giver and his own self downwards. (202)

[Presents] should be daily given to a worthy person, specially on [particular] occasions (such as solar and lunar eclipses, etc.); [even when] solicited, [presents] should be made with reverence and according to one's own might. (203)

Good-tempered kine, giving milk, having golden horns and silvery hoops, and covered with cloth should be given away with vessels made of bellmetal and with dakshinā.* (204)

The giver of such kine enjoys the celestial region for years corresponding to the number of down standing on their body. If any of them happen to be of the Kapila† kind, [the gift], again, rescues his family up to the seventh generation.‡ (205)

* A money present that is given to a recipient along with other presents on the occasion of a religious ceremony: for a Hindu believes that no gift is made perfect unless it is accompanied with a little money gift proportionate to one's own power.

† A brown-coloured cow is considered very auspicious.

‡ i. e., liberates from the fetters of worldly existence not only his own self but six generations upwards.

[If one], according to the full complement of ordinances, gives away an *Ubhayatomukhī cow, the giver of such [a cow] enjoys the celestial region for years equalling the number of the down [standing] on her body [as well as that of her] calf. (206)

From the time [when] the two forelegs and the face of the calf, coming out of the womb, become visible till the hour she gives birth to it, the cow is to be known as the earth. (207)

Giving away some one (i.e., whether gold-horned or not) either a dhénu (i.e., a cow yielding milk at the time), or an adhénu (i.e., not barren, though not yielding milk at the time), if she is not diseased or weak, the giver wins great glory in the celestial region. (208).

To remove the fatigue of a fatigued person, to attend the sick, to worship the celestials, [to adore the feet [of a worshipful person], and to clear the residue of the food [partaken of by] a twice-born, is tantamount to the gift of a cow. (209)

By making gifts of earth, lamp, horse† food, cloth, water, sesame seed, clarified butter, shelter to a foreigner, naivéshika (a maiden), gold, and a beast of burden, one acquires great glory in the celestial region. (210)

By making gifts of houses, corns, cheering words of reassurance, (i.e., of freeing from fear or terror), sandals, umbrellas, garlands, pastes, conveyances, trees, articles liked [by the recipients], and beds, one becomes greatly happy. (211)

highest gift ; by giving it, one acquires the undecaying region of Brahmā. (212)

Even being qualified, one, who does not accept a present, attains to those regions which belong to those persons who always make profuse gifts. (213)

Kus'a, vegetable, milk, fishes, scents, flowers, curd, earth, meat, bed, seats, and corns should never be refused ; nor water. (214)

[Articles], brought unsolicited, may be accepted even from the perpetrators of iniquitous deeds, but not from unchaste women, eunuchs, outcastes and enemies. (215).

For the adoration of the celestials and guests, for the maintenance of elders and servants, and for the maintenance of one's own self, [one can] accept presents from all. (216)

Similarly [funeral cakes should also be offered to] the maternal grandfather [and his two generations upwards]; then he should offer water [to the Brāhmaṇās] for rinsing the mouth; "Svasti" (may it be well with one), should be said; he should then perform Akshayyodakam.* (242)

Then giving dakṣiṇā, according to his might, he should recite "swadhā;"† being ordered to say, [he should exclaim],—"Swadhā (obeisance) unto the pitṛis." (243)

[After the Brāhmaṇās] had said,—"Astu swādhā" (here is swādhā), he should sprinkle water on the earth: [he should next say],—"May Vis'wadhévās be pleased;" the Brāhmaṇās saying,—"Yes," he should recite the following (Mantram):—(244)

"May our food be manifold; may we get Tithin, (auspicious occasions for performing S'raddha); may we get solicitous persons, and may we never beg."* (246)

Having said these [sweet words and having bowed [unto them, he should] send [them away] with the Mantram,—"Váje Váje,†" and being delighted, [he should perform the ceremony of] sending away in the order of precedence from the father upwards.‡ (247)

After having made erect the pitrī-vessel, the same arghya-vessel in which Samsravās (water from the hands of the Bráhmaṇas) had been formerly deposited, he should send away the Viprās. (248)

For one full year, one should give boiled rice and pitchers full of water to a Brāhmaṇa [in honour of] the person whose "Sapīṇḍikaraṇam" takes place within one year afterwards.‡ (255)

For one year, "Ekoddistha" should be performed, every month, on the date of the death, or every year; "A'dya-S'rāddha" [should be performed], on the eleventh day. (256).

[One should] give funeral cakes to kine, goats and Brāhmaṇds, or throw [them] into the fire or water; if the Viprās remain seated, [he] should not cleanse the remnant of the food partaken of by the twice-born. (257)

The departed manes become gratified with the proffered [oblations of] Havishya for one month; with Pāyasa (sweetened boiled milk, and rice) for one year;

* The Text is elliptical; it means:—For the purposes of offering arghya to the evil spirits, four vessels should be made ready with scented water and sesame seeds. Then, dividing into four parts the water deposited in the Prītapātra, one should place three parts in the three vessels intended, in case of a Sapīṇḍikaraṇam for a grandfather, great grandfather, and the latter's father, with the Mantram,—"Yesamānds."

† Mitāksharā says that this S'rāddha should be, also, performed for the mother, indicating that no oblation should be offered to the maternal manes on a Pārvana S'rāddha. Some, therefore, explaining the Text say,—"Ekoddistha should be performed even for the departed souls of one's own female relatives."

‡ The word in the Text is "arvak," which means "subsequent to a certain time," i.e., whose Sapīṇḍikaraṇam takes place within one year either on account of a childbirth, or for the sake of family custom, or on account the death of the qualified person.

with fish, venison, mutton, meat of birds, goat, spotted antelope, Ena (deer), Ruru (deer), boar (pork), and hare,—successively for one month more. (258—259)

The meat of rhinoceros, and of fish having large scales, honey, the food of ascetics (such as, rice growing without cultivation), the meat of black goat, kālas'āka (black pot-herb), the meat of an old white goat [offered at a S'rāddha], whatever one offers while at Gayā,* or on a Trayodas'i (thirteenth day of a fortnight) marked by Maghā in the rainy season (i.e., in the month of Bhādra), is said to yield un-ending fruits; there is no doubt [in it]. (260—261)

He, who always, performs S'rāddha on all the days, beginning with the first (in the dark half of the month,) leaving off the fourteenth, obtains [in order] a [good] daughter, a [good] son-in-law, animals (goat, etc.), leading sons, [success in] gambling, agriculture, trade; two-hoofed animals (kine, etc.), one-hoofed animals (horse etc.); sons endued with Brahma-energy; gold, silver, tin; supremacy over his own kith and kin; and all desired-for objects. On that day (i.e., on the fourteenth), (cblations in S'rāddha) should be offered to those who had been killed by weapons.† (262—264)

One, who, endued with faith and reverence and shorn of pride and egoism, duly performs a S'rāddha, [on days] beginning with [the one marked by the asterism] Kṛittikā and ending with Bharaṇī, obtains the celestial region

* i.e., While performing S'rāddha at Gayā or on a Trayodas'i day.

† There are some variations in the reading of the Text published in Bombay. There is jñāti for putrān, and sūtrān for tathā. In the said edition, the second line of the 265th s'loka is numbered as the 264th.

Then comes the following additional line

पुष्टचक्रतां पुत्रान्वाणिज्यं प्रभृतींस्तथा—

(after death), offspring, profusion of strength, [fertile] lands physical strength, accomplished sons, superior by over his caste people, good luck, prosperity, leadership, immunity from disease, fame, freedom from grief and sorrow, exalted position, wealth, learning, success in the practice of medicine and the use of base metals, kine, goats, lambs, horses, longevity, and all desired-for objects. (265—268)

Having been treated with oblations, [the Pitri-Dévatās,—Vasu, Rudra and A'ditya,] propitiate the departed manes of men.* (269)

Propitiated, the departed manes of men confer on them longevity, children, riches, learning, heaven, emancipation, felicity and kingdom. (270)

Listen to the characteristics of the person who is troubled by him. He, in a dream, goes into deep water, sees persons robed in silken raiments and having their hands shaven, rides carnivorous animals, lives in the company of low-caste people, asses and camels. (272—273)

While running, he considers himself followed by enemies. He is absent-minded, has fruitless ventures, and becomes depressed without any reason. (274) though omitted in the Bengal Text occurs in the Bombay Edition.

‡ A troop of Demi-Gods considered as Ś'iva's attendants and under the special superintendence of Ganes'a.

Possessed by him, a king's son does not come by his kingdom; a maiden [does not get] a husband; and a woman on the way of becoming a mother, a child; (275)

A S'rotríya [does not get] the dignity of a preceptor; a student, his lessons; a merchant, his profit, and a cultivator, the [fruit of his] tillage (i.e., a good crop). (276)

He should be duly bathed, as on a sacred day Qualified Bráhmaṇás [four in number,] should be made to recite "Swásti" (may it be well with you) for him, whose body has been cleansed with the paste of white mustard soaked in clarified butter, whose head has been pasted with sarvaushadhí (a number of herbs) and sarvagandha (some fragrant articles), and who has been seated on a Bhadrás'ana. (277—278)

[One should] throw [a little of the compound] earth, [brought respectively from] the place where a horse is kept, from where an elephant is housed, from an ant-hill, from the confluence of rivers and from a lake; rochona;* scented articles; and guggula;†—into the waters, brought from a lake in four pitchers of one colour. Then Bhadrás'anam should be placed on a red bull-skin.‡ (279—280)

† A particular fragrant gum resin.

‡ The passage is elliptical. It explains Bhadrás'anam, mentioned in the preceding s'loka, as, "Four pitchers, filled with water, bedecked with mango-leaves, pasted with sandal and covered with garlands and new cloths, should be placed on the four sides of the altar. Then five sorts of powders of five colours should be placed on it. Then a red bull-skin should be spread over it. And, above it, an awning of white cloth should be placed."

Thousand-Eyed King of the Celestials (Indra); may those sanctifying waters purify thee.* (281)

"May Varuṇa, the Lord of the Firmament, Sūryya (Sun-God), Vṛihaspati, Indra, Vāyu (Wind-God), and the Seven Rishis,† grant thee lordly powers. (282)

"May the Water always remove the ill-luck [that resides in] thy hairs, the parting line of thy hairs (seemanta), head, forehead, the two ears, and the two eyes."‡ (283)

[Then,] taking up with his left hand Kṛs'a-blades, [the priest] should offer oblations of mustard oil in a ladle, made of Udumvara-tree, on the head of the person thus bathed, [reciting the Mantrams],—"Mita, Sammita, S'ala, Katangkata, Kushmāṇḍa, and Rāja-putra" [all] supplemented by "Swāhā." (284—285)

Having spread Kṛs'a-grass on all sides, he should offer [oblations of food to the Deities,—Indra, etc.,] on the crossing of four roads, [lighted] by the Sun, with the "Bali-" Mantrams, [reciting] the names [of the Deities] coupled with "Namas" (obeisance).§ (286)

‡ With these three Mantrams, the presiding priest should pour the contents of the first three pitchers and then should sprinkle the performer with the water of the fourth.

§ The passage requires a little elucidation:—The sacrificer should himself prepare charu, food. Then, reciting the Mantrams, such as, "Om, Indrīya namas," and so forth, he should offer the food to Indra, Agni, Yama, Nīlāziti, Varuṇa, Vāyu, Soma, Is'āna, Brahmā, and Ananta.

sweet scents, three sorts of wine, radish, purika, (a kind of cake), pupa (a preparation of wheat fried with clarified butter), similarly garlands made of the fruits of Ricinus Communis, boiled rice mixed with curd, thickened milk, treacle, cakes with Modaka,*—having collected all these in one vessel, he should offer them] ; and, afterwards keeping his forehead on the earth he should sit before Aṃvikā, the mother of Viṇāyaka. [Then,] offering her arghya and handful Durva-grass blades, sesame seeds and flowers, [he should pray]. (287—290)

“O thou endued with lordly powers, give me beauty, fame and good luck ; grant me sons and riches and confer on me all desired-for objects.” (291)

Thereupon putting on a white cloth, adorned with white garlands and being rubbed with white scented powders, [he] should feed the Brāhmanās and give two pieces of cloth to the preceptor. (292)

Having, thus, worshipped Viṇāyaka and the Grahas (Planets) duly, one attains to the fruits of his actions and most excellent prosperity. (293)

Having, thus, adored, always (i.e., daily), [and] offered gold and silver ornaments to Aditya, Kaitikéya and the lord of Mahāgaṇas, one acquires Siddhi (emancipation) (294)

Desirous of riches, peace, rain, longevity and nourishment, one should perform the Graha-Yajña (adoration of the Planets), or for exorcising the enemies. (295)

The Sun, Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn, Rāhu and Ketu are known as the Grahas or Planets. (296)

* A compound of certain powdered medicinal drugs duly dressed which gives strength and hilarity.

[The images of the] Grahas should be made in order, [one, each,] from copper, crystal, red sandal; two from gold, [and one, each,] from silver, iron, lead and bell-metal.* (297)

They should be painted on a canvass in their respective colours, or in a maṇḍala (mystic diagram) with scented powders; then clothes and flowers of their respective colours are to be offered. (298).

Scents, armlets, incense and gum resin should be given. Each deity [being adored with a different] Mantram, charus (sacrificial food) should be prepared. (299).

The same number (i.e., nine,) of Mantras [such as],—Akṛishṇēnalmam, dēvās, Agnimurdhā divas Kakut, Udvudhyshwa, Vrihaspatiutyadarhya, Annūtparisruta's Shannodevis, Kandat, Ketum Krinam, should be recited in order.† (300—301)

Arkas, (Sun-plant), Palās'a, Khadīra, Apāmārga, Pippulā, Udumvara, Shamī, Durvā (grass), and Kus'a, are, in order, the sacrificial fuels [of the Nine Planets. (302)

With each [class of] Samidh,—soaked with honey, clarified butter, curd, or thickened milk,—oblations, either one hundred and eight, or twenty-eight [in number], should be offered. (303)

A wise man should offer to the Brāhmaṇs, for eating [in honour of] the Grahas, respectively cakes made of

* The Bombay Edition makes a s'loka with one line. The making of the images of the Grahas, has been described at length in the Matsya-Purānam and Devi-Purānam.

† These nine Mantras should be recited in honour of the Nine Planets. Instead of Kramāt in the Bengali reading, the Bombay Edition reads apī in the last Couplet.

treacle, Pāyasam, Havishyam, Shasthika, cake mixed with thickened milk, that mixed with curd, clarified butter, powdered sesame seeds, meat and various other edibles; or whatever is secured by him, according to his might, [should be offered] duly with reverence. (304—305).

A dhénu (a cow that yields milk,) conchshell, a bull, gold, cloth, a (white) horse, a black cow, weapons made of iron, and a goat,—are, in order, the sacrificial presents [laid down for the adoration of the Planets]. (306)

One should, with care, adore, at that time, the [particular] Planet that is offended with him. This boon was conferred by Brahmā [on the Planets]:—"Adored, you will, also, worship them, i.e., the sacrificers)." (307)

The rise and decline of kings and the creation and destruction of the universe are under the influence of the Planets; so they are known as the most adored. (308)

A king should be endued with great energy, munificent,* grateful, given to the service of the aged, humble, virtuous,† born in a good family, truthful, pure, up and doing, well-read in the Dharma-S'āstrás,‡ large-minded, devoid of a fault-finding spirit, virtuous, shorn of vices, (such as gambling, etc.), learned, heroic, capable

* The word in the Text is Sthulalakshyas. The Bombay Text has explained it as, vahupraddas, i.e., munificent. It may, also, mean, "learned, wise, competent to recollect both benefits and injuries." Or it may mean "experienced."

† The Text is Sattwasampanna: literally, 'virtuous'; particularly it means "who does not deviate from justice even under the pressure of difficulty."

‡ There is a difference in reading: dhritimán (intelligent), or smritimán, i.e., one who has mastered the Dharma-S'āstrá of keeping secrets, capable of hiding his own shortcomings, well-versed in logic, polity, Vārtā (economics), and Trayī (three [Védās]).* (309—311)

He should make his ministers, [of persons who are] wise, born in good families (i.e., of those who are hereditary ministers), grave and pure. With them, or with the Brāhmaṇās, and, afterwards, with himself [he should] deliberate the affairs of the State. (312)

He should make his priest, [of a person] who knows how to propitiate the Planets, is well-grounded in the S'āstras, born in a good family, well-versed in the theory of polity and in the rites of peace-making as laid down in the Atharvaṇ. (313)

He should appoint a few Brāhmaṇās for performing the rites [laid down] in the S'ruti and Smṛiti, and celebrate various sacrifices with profuse sacrificial presents. (314)

He should offer unto the Viprās various objects of enjoyments and riches. What is given to a Vipra, becomes an unending treasure to kings. (315)

It is said [that an oblation, offered to] a Vipra-Fire, is [more] purifying than, and superior to, those rites [Rājasūya, etc.], performed near fire, for in it there is no defect, no destruction of animals, and no penance. (316)

[He] should try to acquire, by fair means, objects not acquired; and keep carefully the acquired ones; multiply the protected ones, according to the laws of political economy; and distribute the surplus wealth amongst worthy persons. (317)

When making any gift of land, or making any permanent arrangement, he should have the terms committed to writing for the information of the future good king. (318)

Writing, on a canvass (made of cotton), or on a copper-plate, [the names] of his own family [three generations upwards from his father], their own (i.e., his own name and that of the recipient), the quantity of the gift, [the four] boundary lines of the land, and marking it with his own coin, his own signature and with the date [of the gift], the king should make the deed permanently valid. (319—320)

He should live in a country which is picturesque, where animals multiply, where living is cheap and which abounds in trees and hilly rivers. There he should make forts for the protection of his men (soldiers, followers, etc.), treasure and his ownself. (321)

He should appoint devoted, clever and honest men in posts suited to them and energetic men in the works of collection and disbursement. (322)

Whatever is acquired,* should be given to the Viprās; and protection [should be given] to the subjects; there is no religion higher than this for kings. (323)

Those who for [the protection of] lands (i.e., kingdom) are killed, without retreating from the battlefield, by weapons not poisoned, repair to the celestial region like the Yogins. (324)

The footsteps of the un-retreating, [even when] the army is routed, are like sacrifices;† the king takes the virtue of those who fly away for not being killed. (325)

* Some Texts read randrjitam, i.e., acquired in battle. We have adopted the Text yadupārjitam, i.e., whatever is acquired.

† i.e., Such persons reap the fruits of the As'wamedha Sacrifice at every footstep.

[One] should not kill him who says—"I am yours," a eunuch, one who is disarmed, one who is engaged in an encounter with another, one who has beaten a retreat from the field, nor should one lay his hands upon the visitors and others (i.e., the musicians, etc.). (326)

Having performed the work of protection and risen up early in the morning, he should himself look after the work of collection and disbursement; then, looking after the work of litigation, he should bathe and take his meal at ease. (327)

[He should, then,] deposit in the treasury all the gold brought in by persons engaged in the work, and, then, see the secret emissaries and the envoys (sent by other kings) along with his ministers and dismiss them. (328)

Thereafter he should either enjoy himself [his] leisure, or surrounded by [his] ministers. Then inspecting the army, he should, with the commanders, concert [measures for their improvement.] (329)

Then having finished his evening adoration, he should listen to the secret report of the confidential spies. [He should], then, enjoy singing and dancing, take his meal and study the Védās. (330)

He should go to sleep with the sound of bugles and arise similarly; and should deliberate mentally about the S'āstras (scriptural injunctions) and all his duties. (331)

Then, with respectful welcome, he should despatch emissaries to his tributary chiefs and other kings. Then, showered with blessings by the Ritwikās, the priest and the preceptor, he should see the astrologers and physicians, and confer on the S'rotriyās kine, gold, lands, maidens, and articles necessary for domestic use and household comforts. (332—333)

A king should be forgiving to the Brāhmaṇās and simple to the objects of love, wrathful to the enemies and be like a father to the servants and subjects. (334)

By protecting [the subjects] righteously, [a king] reaps the sixth part of their virtue,—for the protection of subjects is superior to all forms of gift. (335)

He should protect subjects oppressed by cheats, thieves, wicked people, robbers and specially the Kāyasthās. (336)

A king gets a moiety of the sin committed by unprotected subjects, since he receives a revenue from them [for the purposes of protection]. (337)

Learning through secret emissaries the movements of those who are in charge of administration, a king should honor the good (officers) and punish the wicked (ones). (338)

Having deprived the bribe-takers of their possessions, he should banish them, and should, always, settle the S'rottriyās with honour, gifts and good treatment. (339)

A king, who multiplies his treasury by unfair [taxation] from the kingdom, is, in no time, shorn of prosperity and meets with destruction along with his own people. (340)

The fire, engendered by the grief [consequent on] the oppression of subjects, does not return without consuming the family, prosperity and vital airs of the king. (341)

By bringing another's kingdom under his subjection, a king reaps the same virtue which he does by protecting his own kingdom. (342)

When [a foreign kingdom] is brought under subjection, he should observe the conduct, law and family practices obtaining in the same kingdom. (343).

Secret counsel is the root of a kingdom ; therefore, he should keep his counsel close, so that others may not get a scent of an action till its consummation, (i.e., the final result). (344).

Kings in the neighbourhood, those [residing] beyond that, and those [living in the territories] after that, [should be considered severally] as enemies, friends and Udāsīnās (unconcerned). Ascertaining the movements of these circles [of kings], [he should win them over by adopting,] in order, conciliatory and other [measures.] (345).

The expedients,—conciliation, gifts, dissension and punishment,—when duly applied, yield success. Punishment [should, always, be adopted] when there is no other means to follow. (346)

[A king] should duly apply the [sixfold] guṇās or modes of policy, vis., treaty, hostilities, attack, maintaining a post against an enemy, forming or seeking alliance and double-dealing.* (347)

He should, then, start [for conquering] a foreign kingdom, when it is prosperous with corns, the enemy is weak, and his own animals and soldiers are in most excellent state. (348)

The success of a work lies [both] in daivam† (divine grace) and manliness ; of them manliness of a pristine birth is manifested in daivam. (349).

* The word in the Text dvaidhibhāvam. According to some, it means 'double-dealing,' or 'duplicity,' 'keeping apparently friendly relations with the enemy.' According to others, it means 'dividing one's army and encountering a superior enemy in detachments, harassing the enemy by attacking them in small bands.'

† It is, sometimes, translated as Destiny.

Some [say that success originates] from divine grace; some, from nature; some, from time; and some, from manliness. But those, who are of clever understanding, desire fruits in the union of all these. (350)

As there can be no movement of a car with [only] one wheel, [even] so daivam does not succeed without manliness. (351)

Since the acquisition of friends is superior to that of gold and land, therefore, one should endeavour to secure a compact and steadfastly observe it. (352)

A [qualified] king, minister, subjects, fort, treasury, sceptre,* and friends are mentioned as the seven limbs (component parts) of a kingdom. (353)

Having obtained such [a kingdom], the king should hold out the rod of justice to the wicked. Formerly virtue was made by Brahmā in the shape of punishment. (354)

It is incapable of being righteously administered by an avaricious person of weak understanding, [but it can be so administered] by a truthful, pure and intelligent [person], who has good helpmates. (355)

When duly† administered, it delights all the universe consisting of the celestials, asurās and the human race; otherwise it fills them with compunction. (356)

Improper administration of punishment leads to the destruction of [the attainment of] the celestial and other regions, and of fame. Whereas proper administration of punishment secures [the acquisition of] the celestial region, fame and victory. (357)

* The word in the Text dandam. Some explain it as the fourfold division of an army, vis., the elephant-, the horse-, the car-, and the foot-, soldiers.

† The word in the Text is Yatha-S'dstran, i.e., according to scriptural injunctions.

Whether a brother, a son, a preceptor, a father-in-law, or a maternal uncle,—none, can escape from the punishment of the king, if he deviates from [the performance of] his own duties. (358)

The king, who punishes those who deserve punishment and kills those who deserve death, reaps the fruits of sacrifices well-performed with a thousand sacrificial presents. (359)

Having thus meditated upon [the courses of [law] like the fruits of a sacrifice, the king should, [himself,] daily look after the separate administration of justice, encircled by the members [of his court]. (360)

Having duly punished [men of his own] family, caste, division and class, and the subjects,* the king should place them in the [right] path. (361)

An atom of dust, which is [seen moving] in a sun-beam through the lattice, is called trasarēṇu. Eight trasarēṇus make one likshá; three likshás, one raja-s'arshapá; three rajas'arshapás, one goura; six of these, one madhya; three of these, one kṛishmalá; five of these, one máshá; and sixteen of these, one suvarṇa. A palam is said to consist of four or five suvarṇás. [The above is the standard of gold.]

Two kṛishmalás make one rupyamáshá; and sixteen, one dhuraṇan. (362—364).

With ten dhuraṇás, one shatamána or palam [is formed]. Four suvarṇás make one nishka. [This is the standard of silver].

* The word, literally, means—"people of the country," but, here it, refers to the people in general.

Copper, weighing a karsha (a weight of gold or silver equal to sixteen māshās), [makes] a pañas. (365)

Eighty thousand pañās is the penalty of uttam-sāhasas;* half of it, madhyama (i.e., second class); and half of the latter, adhama (i.e., third class or the lowest form). (366)

[There are various forms of] punishment; such as, saying "fie," using harsh words, imposing fine, and corporal punishment or death. One, or all, of these, should be dealt out to a culprit. (367)

Knowing [the nature of the] crime, country, time, strength, deed and wealth, [the king] should mete out punishment unto a culprit. (368)

Thus ends the First Chapter treating of A'chāra in the Dharma-S'āstra of Yājñawalkya.

* The highest of the pecuniary punishments,—a fine of 1,000, or, according to some, 80,000 pañas.

[LAWS AND REGULATIONS IN GENERAL.]

ALONG with the learned Brāhmaṇas, the king, shorn of anger and avarice, should look after law-suits according to the Codes of Law. (1)

The king should appoint, as his courtiers, [persons] possessed of Vedic knowledge, conversant with the laws of morality, truthful and impartial towards friends and foes. (2)

A Brāhmaṇa, knowing all forms of religious duties, should be appointed [as an administrator of justice] along with those members, if the king is unable, for some [pressing] cause, to look after the law-suits [himself]. (3)

The members,—if they, out of resentment, lust, or dread transgress the laws,—should be punished severally with double the penalty of the [person defeated in the] law-suit. (4)

If oppressed by enemies with means transgressing the law and the established usage, [a person] applies to the king,* it will form the subject-matter of a law-suit, (5)

What is said by the complainant should be written before the defendant and be marked with [the name of] the year, month, fortnight, day, name and caste [of the parties].† (6)

* The word in the Text is Rājne, literally, 'to a king ;' but it, also, implies here 'to any officer in charge of the administration of justice.'

† The following should never constitute the subject-matter of a law-suit, (1) vis., aprasiddha, vis., something uncommon; as, he has taken my flower formed in the sky and does not return it: (2) nirāvada, vis., frivolously vexatious; such as, such a person works in the light of my lamp: (3) nirārtha, i.e., some thing incomprehensible: (4)

Before the complainant, should be written the reply [of the defendant, after he has] heard the purport [of the complaint]; then the complainant should immediately write down the evidence in favour of his petition]. (7)

If [the evidence] is conclusive, he gains the case; otherwise the result is adverse. In cases [about money-lending, etc.], the legal procedure is pointed out as having four feet (i.e., four stages).* (8)

[EXCEPTIONAL REGULATIONS.]

Without having acquitted himself of the charge, [a defendant] should not bring a counter charge against him (i.e., the complainant), even when a charge is brought against him by another;† [nor should he] contradict his statement. (9) nishprajana, viz., useless; as, such a person reads in our quarter; (5) asādhyā, viz., impossible, such as, he laughed at me: (6) viruddha; as, such person has abused me.

* The four pādas or procedures are:—The first is bhāṣāpāda, viz., the petition of the complainant should be written down, as it is, before the defendant; the second is uttarapāda, viz., the reply of the defendant should be written down before the complainant; the third is kriyāpāda, viz., the complainant should have the statement of his evidence written down; the fourth is sādhyasiddhipāda, viz., success, if the evidence is proved, otherwise the result is adverse.

† i.e., A defendant should not bring a counter charge against the complainant till the charge, brought against him by the latter, is answered or that by any other person is properly defended.

The following interpretation of this śloka is given in Mitākṣarā:—“Another complainant cannot bring a charge against the same defendant till the case, instituted against him by the first plaintiff, is over, and the complainant should never contradict his statement both at the time of making his petition and of writing it down before the defendant.”

In kalaha (i.e., cases relating to the use of abusive language, vakpārushya, and those about beating, daṇḍaparushya) and sāhasa (i.e., destruction with poi-soned weapons), [one] can bring a counter-charge : bails capable [of paying the fine or the decreed amount] when the case is decided, should be taken from both the parties. (10)

In [the case of] denial [by the defendant, if the claim] is established [by the plaintiff by evidence, the defendant] must pay [to him] the amount [sued for] and to the king an equal amount [as a penalty] ; one bringing a false charge must pay double the amount sued for [as a penalty, to the king]. (11)

In offences about destruction by poisoned weapons, theft, the use of abusive language, livelihood and imprecation [where delay in the administration of justice may lead to the destruction of life and wealth], and in those about women (i.e., about vilifying a respectable lady or the right of a servant woman),—the defendant must answer the charge immediately ; elsewhere [the granting of time depends upon the will [of the judges] ; so it is laid down in the Smṛitis. (12)

He,—who goes about from one country to another, who licks the corner of his mouth, whose forehead perspires, whose face becomes discoloured, whose mouth is dried up, whose words falter, who gives vent to many contradictory words, whose words and looks do not please others, who bends his lips and naturally comes by disfigurement in word, deed, body and mind,—is described as a wicked person [both in the matter] of complaint and that of giving evidence. (13—15).

He,—who, resorting to a grandiloquent speech, tries to secure the questioned wealth,† who flies away,‡ who does not speak anything on being summoned§ [by a judge],—is described in the Smṛiti as being the weak party and is punishable. (16)

If witnesses of both the parties are present, those of the plaintiff [should be examined first; [but] if the plaintiff's party be weak, those of the other side|| [should get the precedence]. (17)

If any complaint with a wager (i.e., if I am defeated, I shall pay such a sum), is laid, the king should punish the defeated person with a penalty of fine, [to be paid] to the king, and the amount [of the wager], [to the successful] party. (18)

Having refuted the fraud || the king should unite his judgment with the true fact. Even a true fact when not

* The word is the Text is Svatantri, literally, depending on one's own self; but, here, it means 'one who, without giving any evidence, in support of his contention, tries to gain it by a grandiloquent speech.'

† The property belonging to a person of an inferior caste not acknowledged by him as his own.

‡ Literally, 'going away quickly;' but, here, it means 'who flies away when any charge is brought against him in a Law Court.'

§ i.e., When summoned by a Judge he appears before him to answer a charge.

|| The procedure is, that after hearing of the substance of the plaint, the deposition of the defendant should be taken down before the plaintiff. Then the plaintiff should produce his witnesses. But a doubt may arise whether the plaintiff should produce witnesses in support of his complaint after the defendant has given his reply supported by evidence or only after he has merely filed his statement. To remove this doubt the author of the Smṛiti has introduced this verse.

i.e., Having determined the true fact from the deposition and evidence of the defendant. We have given the literal translation in the body.

supported by evidence, becomes vitiated in a legal procedure. (19)

[If a defendant] denies [the possession of all the articles] mentioned [in the plaint], and if one is proved to be in [his] possession, he must be compelled by the king to surrender [all the rest]; but what is not mentioned in the [original] plaint should never be admitted.* (20)

If there is a conflict between two legal points, equity should supersede law. The rule is that a Religious Code is superior to a Legal Code. (21)

Written document, lawful possession and witnesses are described as the evidences [of a case] ; in the absence of even one of those, a divya (divine test or ordeal) is spoken of [as an evidence]. (22)

In all law-suits [about monetary transactions where the cases of both the parties have been proved], the defendant must be made to gain the case;† in [cases of] mortgage, acquisition by gift or purchase, the first party must gain the case.‡ (23)

* The s'loka is elliptical: The purport is:—Supposing a man makes a complaint that such and such a person has taken from him fifteen gold coins, fifty silver coins and two pieces of cloth, and the defendant in reply denies the charge absolutely. If it is proved that the defendant has in his possession even a single article amongst those mentioned in the plaint, he will be compelled to surrender all the rest, or what is equivalent to the same thing or pay their full value in cash. But if after the case is proved, the complainant mentions any more article besides those mentioned in the original plaint, his petition must not be entertained † Supposing a case comes up where the plaintiff says,—“A has borrowed Re. 1 from me.” The defendant A in reply says,—“Yes, I borrowed the amount, but I have paid it back.” In such a case, where the statements of both the parties are proved, the defendant must gain the case.

‡ A mortgaged his house first to B, and then to C; he is unable to release it; both B and C sue A to get possession of the house. The

The right [of a person] to a land (immovable property), when he [the owner], seeing his property encroached by another, does not question,* extends over twenty years; [the right in such a case] for movable property [is limited to] ten years. (24)

[But these limitations, of twenty and ten years [respectively], do not hold good in cases of] mortgaged articles or properties. boundaries, upanikṣhepa (articles deposited in trust with the names and numbers specified), properties of the invalid and minor, upanidhi (a sealed box, kept in trust without mentioning its contents), land-revenue, and the properties of women and S'rotriya Brāhmaṇas. (25)

[An administrator of justice] should make the person, who uses the mortgaged property, etc. (i.e., those mentioned above, against the knowledge of the owner), return the same to its [rightful] owner and pay, as penalty, to the king the same amount or what is consonant to his position. (26)

A'gama (acquisition by purchase or gift) [is a claim] superior to [that of] possession, but not to [that of] hereditary possession; but even a lawful acquisition by purchase or gift is not a strong claim if there is no [proof of] possession.† (27) mortgage, first to B and then to C, is proved. B must be given possession of the house. Similarly in matters of gift and purchase.

* i.e., Does not take any legal steps to recover it.

† The law is this:—In the case of the first owner the proof of purchase or acquisition as gift is the strongest evidence for establishing his claim; in the case of a hereditary owner of the fourth degree, the proof of possession is the strongest evidence. But in the case of one, who inherits it from his father or grandfather, the acquisition by purchase or gift must be supported by possession.

If any suit is brought against a person who has acquired [a property] by purchase or by receiving it as a gift, he must recover it [by proving his āgama or acquisition]; but not so in the case of his son or grandson; in the [latter] case [the proof of] possession is stronger. (28)

[If the first owner], being sued for, dies, his successor must recover it [by proving the lawful acquisition by purchase or gift]; there lawful possession is no instrument (or evidence of his right) unless it is supported by āgama. (29)

If āgama or lawful acquisition is [proved] valid, lawful possession becomes an evidence; but if āgama is not [proved] valid, possession does not form an evidence. (30)

In legal procedure for men Pugās (unions or corporations of citizens or villagers) appointed by the king, S'rénayās (corporate bodies), and, friends and relatives (Kulāni), are considered superior or competent in order (of precedence).* (31)

[But the king] can reverse the judgments, delivered through force or fear;—those [in cases, instituted by] women, conducted in the night, in close doors and outside the village;—and those decided by enemies. (32)

A law-suit, [instituted] by a drunkard, an insane person, a diseased person, one addicted to gambling, a

* For an appeal of a law-suit, decided by a Union of one's own people, the appellant should approach the Union of the Citizens or Villagers; for a second appeal, he should approach the Union of the Citizens or Villagers appointed by the King. These Unions are something like Law Courts. A man should approach, in order, the Higher Court for the decision of his law-suit and the judgment of the Highest Court is final. But even the judgment of the Highest Court can be quashed by the King in cases mentioned in the subsequent Couplet.

boy, one under the influence of fear, etc.,* and one instituted by a person having no personal connection is not maintainable. (33)

When any lost valuable article is obtained [in a brothel, etc.,] it should be given by the king to its owner [if he can, by pointing out distinctive marks, establish his claim]; but he, who presses his claim without [pointing out any] distinctive marks, deserves punishment equal [to the value of] the article [in question]. (34)

If the king comes by any [hidden] treasure, he must give half of it to a Brāhmaṇa. But, then, again, [when] a learned Brāhmaṇa [happens to find out any,] the whole [treasure] should go to him, for he is the lord of all. (35)

If any other inferior caste comes by a [hidden treasure], the king takes one sixth of it; [if, however,] without informing [the king of its acquisition, he attempts to appropriate himself [the whole], he should be punished and [the treasure] confiscated. (36)

When an article, stolen by a thief, [is recovered], it should be given by the king to the person [to whom it belongs]; if he does not give it, he is visited by the sin of [committing thefts]. (37)

[LAWS RELATING TO LOANS.]

IN a loan on mortgage the interest, every month, is one eightieth part [of the capital]; on other loans the interest is to run at two, three, four and five per cent., in order of the castes [taking such loans].† (38)

[Persons,] going to a dreary forest, [for carrying on trade, must pay] ten per cent., [as interest]; persons

* Such as, one instituted by a person who has rebelled against the city.

† i.e., If a Brāhmaṇa takes One Hundred Rupees as loan he shall have to pay interest at two per cent., and so on.

going to the sea, shall pay twenty per cent., but all castes should pay to all castes interest at the ratio of [their] respective [castes]. (39)

A young one [should be given as interest, in case of a loan] of female animals (as cow); [the interest on loans] of liquid substances (such as, clarified butter, oil etc.) should be eight times; [on loans of] cloth, grains and gold, [the interest should be] four, three and two times according to the Smṛitis.* (40)

One must try to realize [by any means] the money obtained [by another from him either as a loan or by any unfair means]; he must not be remonstrated with by the king; if [the debtor,] being pressed [to pay back the money], goes to the king [for a remedy], he must be punished and made to return the money. (41)

A debtor, [when sued for by a number of creditors of the same caste,] must be made to repay the money to the creditors in order [of the date of taking such loans]; [but when the creditors are of different castes,] the king, after having [first] paid the Brāhmaṇa [is to return the balance] to the other castes. (42)

A debtor is to be punished by the king [with a fine of] ten per cent. [of the amount] realized. The creditor, for having obtained [his money], should pay the king five per cent., [of the amount received].† (43)

* In this Couplet law is laid down about the highest amount of interest that can be taken on loans standing unpaid with interest for a long time. For example, A takes a five years old cow from B as loan on condition that he is to return such a cow. A cannot repay the loan and B, out of courtesy, does not demand the interest. When A returns the loan he must give a calf or its value as interest and not more.

† Some explain it as the tenth and twentieth part of the amount realized.

For [the satisfaction of his] debt, one, of an inferior caste, when his resources are exhausted, should be made to work [for his creditor]; if a Brāhmaṇa grows poor, he should be made to repay [his debt] gradually as his means permit. (44)

If a creditor, for the multiplication of his own money, does not take it when offered [back, by the debtor; and if the latter] deposits it with an umpire, interest ceases from that date. (45)

Any debt, contracted in a joint-family for the maintenance of the members [thereof, should be repaid by the head of the family]; on his death or on his departure to a foreign country, the members who inherit the property must repay it. (46)

A woman [is not bound to repay the debt] contracted by her husband or her sons; a father [is not to pay the debt] contracted by the son, nor a husband that contracted by the wife except when it is made for the maintenance of the family. (47)

A son is not to pay the debt, even though hereditary, if it is contracted for the purpose of drinking, debauchery or gambling, or if it is the residue of a fine or duty unrequited, or any thing idly promised. (48)

The debt, [contracted] by the wives of milkmen, wine-sellers, actors, washermen and hunters, should be liquidated by their husbands, for their livelihood depends upon them (i.e.) upon the earnings of their wives). (49).

A debt which she has promised to repay, that which she has contracted along with her husband, and what she has done herself, must be repaid by a woman; nothing else a woman is bound to repay. (50).

If the father or the grandfather be long absent in a distant country, be dead, or is suffering from an incurable disease, the debt [contracted by either] must be repaid by the son or the grandson; in case of denial, [the claim must be established] by evidence. (51)

One who inherits the property must repay the debt;* similarly. (i.e., in the absence of the former), the taker of the [debtor's] wife (Yoshitgrāha);† then the son, who, although qualified to inherit his father's property, does not do so; and, in the case of one who has no son, the person who inherits his property, [must pay his debt.]‡ (52)

Of brothers, the husband and wife, the father and son,—none, can become a surety, give or take loans, or appear as a witness, according to the law, [without the consent of others, so long] the property is undivided. (53)

Surety is sanctioned in darsana (presentation §

* Here it refers to a son, who by his father's will, inherits the property, even when other sons exist.

Colebrooke has translated this portion of the Text as, "But not the son whose (father's) assets are held by another." The Text would, then, be putronānanyāśritadravyas.

† There are three classes of Yoshitgrāha:—(1) One who marries a virgin widow; (2) the person to whom one's married and youthful wife surrenders herself under pressure; (3) the person to whom a woman, rich and mother of children, goes. Such a person, in the absence of a son inheriting the property, must repay the debt, contracted by the woman's former husband.

‡ Regulation is, also, laid down about the repayment of debt. It must be paid by the creditor himself; in his absence by his son or grandson. If the creditor has no issue, the debt must be repaid to the person, who inherits his property.

§ The first form of surety is when a person engages to answer for another's appearance in the Court.

pratyaya (creating confidence),* and dāna (giving).† The first two sureties, if their statements prove false, must be compelled to repay the money, [but not their sons (or their heirs), in case of their demise]; as regards the other (i.e., one who undertakes to repay the money himself), if it is not realized from the party, even his sons [are to repay the money] after his demise. (54)

If after the death of the surety, who promises to present the party when required, or if after that of the surety who creates confidence by a statement, their sons do not repay the money [advanced to the party on the assurance of their father], the latter will not be visited by any sin. (55)

If many persons [after having determined their respective shares stand as sureties, they shall have to repay the money according to the extent of their respective shares. In the case of joint sureties, the will of the capitalist prevails (i.e., he may realize whatever money he likes from any party.) (56)

A debtor must return double the amount that the surety publicly pays to the capitalist [on debtor's behalf]. (57)

In [the case of] female animals, [a female animal with] a calf, threefold grain, fourfold cloth, eightfold liquid substances, are said [to be given to the surety].‡ (58)

* The second form of surety is when a person creates confidence, in the party giving the loan, by saying,—“He is a very trustworthy person, you may accommodate him with the loan.”

† The third form of surety is when a person undertakes to repay the money himself if the party, for whom he stands surety, fails to do so.

‡ The Text is elliptical and requires elucidation. To a person, standing surety for another who takes the loan of a cow, the debtor must give if the money, [advanced on the mortgage of an article,] becomes double, [with the interest accrued,] and the mortgaged article is not released, it is lost (i.e., the right of the original owner is forfeited); time (i.e., the expiration of the period of contract,) vitiates (i.e., deprives the owner of) [his right] [over the article mortgaged on the condition of being released at] a fixed time. That of which the fruit is enjoyed, (such as land, etc.,) is never forfeited. (59).

No interest [is to be charged] on a mortgaged article, that should not be made known of, being used, or [on a mortgaged article rendered useless by continued use] or else it must be returned intact;* if it is destroyed (its value) must be made good, excepting [only] when it so happens by accident or when it is destroyed by the powers that be. (60)

Taking establishes [the acceptance of a] mortgaged article; even if kept [with proper care, a mortgaged article] suffers depreciation,† other articles must be mortgaged or the capitalist must be paid a portion of his due. (61)

If any mortgage is executed, [confiding in the] character [of the mortgagee,] the capital must be paid with interest. [The mortgagee] should pay double the

to the surety a cow with a calf; similarly, in the case of grain loans, twice the quantity should be given; in the case of cloth, four times the quantity, and in the case of oil, clarified butter, eight times the quantity, should be given to the surety.

* Some interpret this portion from another standpoint, and their version of the reading runs thus:—No interest is to be charged on a useful article kept in mortgage when it is made useless by the mortgagee.

† i.e., If the value of the articles does not cover the capital and the interest.

amount, if any article is mortgaged under an agreement.* (62)

[If the debtor] comes [with capital and interest], the mortgaged article must be released [by the creditor], or else [his conduct] will be [one of] theft, (i.e., he will be punished like a thief). If the money-lender is [himself] absent, [the debtor] is to pay the money to his trusted agent and bring the mortgaged article. (63)

The then value of the article being settled, it must remain there, [in the possession of the creditor,] without any further accumulation of interest. In the absence of a debtor, [the creditor] can sell the article keeping a witness.† (64)

When the amount of loan, [given without any mortgage,] is doubled [with the interest due], and at that time [a plot of land under cultivation] is mortgaged again [in satisfaction of the loan], the mortgaged

* The Text requires elucidation. If a debtor, knowing a creditor to be of good character, mortgages with him a valuable article, for a far lesser amount than its proper value, he is entitled to release the article by paying the capital and interest; and it shall never be forfeited. If at the time of the mortgage there is any contract between the parties, the mortgagor shall release the article by paying double the interest.

† A full elucidation of the Text is this:—The first line explains what a debtor should do, if the creditor or his duly constituted agent is not present to receive money from the former, or if he wishes to liquidate his debt by selling the mortgaged article. Under these circumstances the value of the article, at that time, should be determined and it must remain in the possession of the creditor but no further accumulation of interest from that time will be allowed. The second line describes the duty of the creditor when the capital, given as a loan on the mortgage of an article, is doubled with the interest accumulated thereon, but the debtor is absent. The creditor, under these circumstances, is empowered to sell the article before a proper witness, who will afterwards, when the debtor demands the article, attest to the amount received by the creditor from the sale of the article.

property may be released, if double the amount comes [to the mortgagee] from the produce.* (65)

[LAWS RELATING TO DEPOSITS.]

WHATEVER article, contained in a box, is made over, without giving any description [of its nature], to another's hands, that article is called Oupanidhikam (deposit); [and] it must be returned as such. (66)

But it must not be returned, if it is carried away by the king, [lost] by an accident, or [stolen by] a thief. But if there is loss [of the deposited article] after it is being asked for by the depositor and not returned [by the person with whom it is deposited], the latter must be compelled to make good [the value of the article] and pay a fine equal to that amount. (67)

By wilfully converting [the deposit] into his means of livelihood (i.e., if he uses it of his own accord or makes money by trading on it), [the person with whom the deposit is made,] must be punished and compelled to return it with the increase [made on it];† the same law holds good in the case of yāchita (i.e., raiments, ornaments, etc., brought from another, for use on the occasions of wedding, etc.,); āhita (i.e., a deposit,

* If any loan is given without any mortgage and the capital with the interest thereon doubles itself and the debtor mortgages to the creditor any land under cultivation, the former can release the property when his debt is paid off from the produce thereof. If there is no such contract between the parties as, "If there is greater produce, the creditor is to reap the benefit, and if less, he is to suffer loss," then the mortgaged property will be released when double the amount is realized from the produce, and not otherwise.

† If the person, with whom a deposit is made, wilfully converts it to his personal use, he must pay a monthly interest of five per cent; if he uses it for trading purpose, he must return it with the additional profit made by its use.

deposited again with another); nyāsa (i.e., an article which after being shown to the head of the family, is deposited with a member thereof); and nikshepa (i.e., a deposit made directly with another). (68)

[THE LAW OF EVIDENCE.]

THREE persons, at the lowest, must be cited as witnesses,—persons given to the practice of austerities, charitable, born in respectable families, truthful, preferring religion, simple, having children, possessed of wealth, [and, if possible,] of the same lineage (jāti) and caste (Varna). Law sanctions (also) [the production, as witnesses, of persons belonging to] all [the orders] in [the cases of] all [the castes when those of the same caste are not available.] (69—70)

Elderly S'rōtriyās, (persons well-read in the Védās), aged ascetics, religious recluses, and others (i.e., those of similar nature), are not to be cited as witnesses by virtue of a [Scriptural] Text; but no reason [thereof] is given. (71)

Women, old men, boys, gamblers, drunkards, mad men, persons defamed, actors or heretics, forgers, deformed persons, outcastes, friends, persons having some connection with the subject matter of the suit, persons who are helping in the case, enemies, thieves, reckless individuals, vicious persons, those forsaken by friends, and [such others] are not to be [produced as] witnesses. (72—73)

Even one virtuous man may be [produced as] a witness, if he is approved of by both the parties.* (74)

* Cases are cited in the Commentary where every body, even those who have been declared unfit in the preceding Couplet, may be cited as a witness; such as, abduction, use of abusive language, beating, theft, and administration of poison,

The plaintiff should make the witnesses, collected near the defendant, hear :—"The witness, who speaks an untruth, goes to all the regions [reserved] for perpetrators of heinous crimes, as well as those for the incendiaries and the murderers of women and children. (75—76)

"Know, all that little virtue, which you acquired in a hundred births, to be his, whom you falsely attempt to defeat." (77)

If any person does not give evidence about a loan, he must be compelled, by the king, to pay all, [both the capital and interest,] on the forty-sixth day; [and the king shall take] the tenth part of the money [réalized]. (78)

That wretch of a man, who, knowing all, does not give evidence, is visited by the sin and punishment of a false witness. (79)

[If witnesses are produced by] both the parties, the statement leaning on the majority [is admitted as evidence]; if equal number [of witnesses are produced, the statement] of accomplished persons [is accepted]; if [witnesses of] both the parties are equally accomplished, [the statement of] those superior in accomplishments [is held supreme.] (80)

He, whose [written] statement the witnesses speak of as true, becomes successful (i.e., wins the case). If they speak otherwise, his defeat is certain. (81)

If [a few] witnesses give [the same] evidence, and other more accomplished persons (i.e., witnesses) belonging to one's own party or the against party), or twice the number [of former witnesses, i.e., many more witnesses], make a contradictory statement, the former witnesses will be regarded as false ones. (82)

Every such false witness must be punished separately with double the penalty of the person defeated in the suit. Law lays down banishment [as the penalty] for a Brāhmaṇa (giving false evidence). (83)

He,—who, having been made to hear [the vow for giving] evidence, influenced by fear or by avarice, denies it to others,—shall be punished with a penalty eight times more than that [of the accused]. A Brāhmaṇa is to be banished. (84)

A witness may prevaricate in the instance of a religious student, if he is to be sentenced to death; for purifying himself [for the sin committed for this prevarication], a Brāhmaṇa should offer Sāraswata-Charu (an oblation of rice, barley and pulse boiled). (85)

[LAWS RELATING TO WRITTEN DOCUMENT.]

WHATEVER arrangement [about interest and time] is completed, [between the debtor and the creditor,] with their mutual consent, it should be committed to writing, [lest the parties might forget, in future, the terms of contract], with the names of witnesses. In that [document the name of] the capitalist (creditor) [must be written] first. (86)

[It] must be marked with (i.e., in the document should be written,) the year, month, fortnight, day, caste, gotra (family), [name of] the fellow-student,* the name of the (contracting) party, and of his father, etc. (87)

[The writing of] the terms of loan being finished, the debtor must write [on the deed] his own name in his own handwriting, and [the words] "what is written here (i.e., in this deed), is approved of by me who am the son of such and such person." (88)

* The word in the Text is Sabrahmachārika, i.e., a fellow-student studying a particular branch of the Vēda under the same teacher.

The witnesses, of whom there should be an equal number, must write, in their own hands, mentioning first the names of their respective fathers, "I am such and such person, a witness in this (document)." (89)

The writer of the deed should then write "this (document) is written by me, such and such person, the son of such and such person, being requested by both the parties (i.e., the debtor and the creditor)." (90)

A document, written by one's own hand, even if it is not attested by a witness, is regarded as an evidence in Smṛiti (Law), but not when it is executed by force or threat. (91)

A loan, contracted by a written document, is payable by three generations. [The creditor] may enjoy the mortgaged article so long the debt is not paid off. (92)

If a document is kept in another country, illegibly written, destroyed, becomes indistinct (i.e., the letters getting obscure or faded), lost, detached, burnt, or torn, one must have another written out. (93)

A doubtful document is to be considered valid by respective handwritings, etc., and by proofs; such as the specification of circumstances, as to time, place, etc.; production of witnesses, attesting to those facts; [any peculiarity of] mark, connection (i.e., longstanding connection between the parties as debtor and creditor), and acquisition [of the money.] (94)

A debtor must enter, on the back of the deed, the payments he makes; or the creditor should grant receipt, in his own handwriting, for the money received. (95)

After the discharge of the debt, the deed should be destroyed; or for the validity [of the transaction], another i.e., deed of release), executed. What is paid before a witness, must be re-paid before [another] witness. (96)

[DAIVI, OR DIVINE TESTS]

Tulā (weighing in the Balance), Agni (Fire), Jala (Water), Visha (Poison), and Kosha, are the ordeals [laid down for establishing the innocence of an accused] ; but these [are applied] in [cases of] serious crimes, when the accused agrees to accept himself the punishment [if his complaint is not proved]. (97)

Of his own accord, or if he is under a special compact with the complaint, the accused must go through the ordeal or submit himself to the punishment of a defeat. In cases of treason or heinous crimes [like Brahmanicide, etc.,] even when the complainant does not agree to take upon himself the punishment, [if he fails to prove the case,] the accused must have to go through the ordeal]. (98)

Before sunrise, [one should] summon [the person prepared to go through the ordeal], fasting from the day previous, bathed and clad in a wet cloth and make him go through the ordeal before the [Court presided by the King and the Brāhmaṇās. (99)

The Tulā, [ordeal of the Balance, is intended] for women, children, old men, blind and lame persons, the Brāhmaṇās and the diseased ; Fire and Water [ordeals are for] the S'udra as also Poison of the quantity of seven barley drops.* (100)

* Some Commentators explain that the Fire is for the Kshatriya, Water for the Vaishya, and Poison for the S'udra. Nārada says :—"A pitcher should be given to a Brāhmaṇa ; Fire, to a Kshatriya ; Water, to a Vaishya, and Poison, to a S'udra."

In transactions of less than a thousand panas, there must be no Ordeal of Fire, Poison, or of Weighing. But persons, who wish to prove their innocence, may, always, go through the ordeals in charges of treason or [other] heinous crimes [like Brahmanicide, etc.] (101)

[TULA' OR THE ORDEAL OF BALANCE.]

THE accused, after sitting on the scale [of a Balance] should have himself weighed by an expert in weighing, [such as, a goldsmith, etc.,] [with clods of earth or stones,] equalling in weight; then marking [the measured weight], he should get down [from the scale]. (102)

[He should then declare,] "O Balance! thou art the abode of Truth; formerly thou hadst been made by the Celestials. O thou of auspiciousness, do thou speak the Truth and free me from suspicion. (103)

"If I have perpetrated the crime, O mother, do thou bring me down, [making me heavier than the weight]; if I am pure, do thou take me up (i.e., make me lighter)." [The accused should] inspire the Balance with the above Mantram. (104)

[AGNI, OR THE ORDEAL OF FIRE.]

HAVING marked [with any dye, the wounded parts etc., of] the palms that had ground rice, one should place there seven fig leaves and encircle them with an equal number of threads. (105)

"O Fire, O purifier, thou dost range in the hearts of all creatures. Thou art, O Kavi,* the witness of virtue and sin; do thou speak out the Truth relating to me." (106)

[After the accused] had recited [this Mantram, the Judge] should place, on both the palms [of the accused,

* Meaning Sage, Intelligent.

two] redhot even [iron] balls, of the size of fifty pals [each].* (107)

Having taken them, he (i.e., the accused) should gradually pass through seven Maṇḍalas (circles); each circle is to consist of sixteen fingers in extent and is to be severally placed at an equal distance (i.e., of sixteen fingers each). (108)

If after having thrown off the burning iron balls and ground rice, [it is seen that, the palms] are not burnt, [the accused] establishes his innocence. If the balls are thrown within the limit or any suspicion arises, [the accused] must, again, have to undergo the ordeal. (109)

[THE ORDEAL OF WATER.]

HAVING inspired the water with the Mantram, "O Varuṇa, protect me with Truth," and held a person, standing navel-deep in the water, [the accused] should drown himself in it. Simultaneously an arrow should be discharged [from that place] and a strong man should be despatched [where it falls and be made to return with the shaft]. [If, after his return, he sees the accused] underneath the water, it establishes his innocence. (110—111)

[THE ORDEAL OF POISON.]

"O POISON! thou art the son of Brahmā, established in the practice of Truth. Save me from this accusation; displaying the Truth, be like ambrosia unto me." (112)

Having recited [this Mantram, the accused] should drink the Poison formed on the summit of the Himālayā. His innocence is established, who survives [the ordeal] without undergoing the least physical change. (123)

* A particular weight equal to four Kroshas.

[THE ORDEAL OF KOSHA.]

HAVING adored the dreadful Divinities, [the Judge] should bring water for their bathing; and inspiring it with Mantram, [he should make the accused] drink, out of it, three handfuls. (114)

If within fourteen days, [the accused] is not visited with a dreadful calamity, divine or regal, he will be, forsooth, declared innocent. (115)

[DA'YABHA'GA, OR DIVISIONS OF PROPERTY AMONG HEIRS.]

IF a father takes upon himself the division of [his property], he can do so: [and] at his free will [divide his self-acquired property] amongst his sons, either giving a larger share to the eldest-born, or making all the shares equal. (116)

If he makes the allotments equal, his wives, to whom no Stridhan has been given by their husband or their father-in-law, must be rendered partakers of like portions. (117)

[The son], who is capable and reluctant to take his father's property, may be separated on being given a moiety. A lawful distribution, made by the father amongst his sons separated with greater or lesser allotments, is pronounced valid. (118)

After the demise of both the parents, the sons should, equally, divide the properties and the debts [amongst themselves]. After paying off their mother's debts, the daughters should, [equally, divide] their mother's [Stridhan-property]; in their absence, the sons. (119)

Without impairing the ancestral property, whatever else is acquired by one by one's exertions, whatever is got by one from one's friend or by one's marriage must not be partitioned [amongst the co-sharers]. (120)

No share, of the ancestral property, seized by others, which one rescues, is to be given to others ; nor that of what is acquired by one by one's learning.* (121)

The younger brothers, receiving education, are entitled to a share of what the eldest brother multiplies [on the ancestral property], after the death of their father.† (122)

Whatever accumulation is made, [on the joint property] by joint labours, must be, equally, divided. To grandsons by different fathers shall be allotted the portions of their respective fathers.‡ (123)

The ownership of father and son is the same in land which was acquired by father's father, or in corody,§ or in effects. (124)

When the sons have been separated, a posthumous son, born of a woman equal in class, shares in the distribution His allotment must positively be made

* All those properties are not to be partitioned, if they are acquired without taking any advantage of, or without impairing, the ancestral property, otherwise not. But if one multiplies the joint property by resorting to agriculture or merchandise, the additional property must be divided amongst the co-sharers.

† This S'loka does not occur in the body of the Bombay Text. But it is quoted in the Commentary as being a part of Nārada's Text.

‡ To grandsons, of whom the fathers are different, shall be allotted portions, in right of their several fathers ; all the grandsons succeed to the proper shares of their respective fathers : consequently, so many shares should be formed, as there are sons of the original proprietor, and each shall be given to their respective sons ; and let them take these shares, whether they be uterine brothers or born of different mothers, and whether they live together, or sub-divide the shares, according to the number of their own brothers respectively : such is the meaning of the Text.

§ What is fixed by a promise or assignment.

out of the visible estate - corrected for income and expenditure.* (125)

Whatever articles are given by parents to a son, are his. If a partition is made after the demise of the father, the mother takes a share equal [to her son's]. (126)

Uninitiated brothers should be initiated by those for whom the ceremonies have been already performed but sisters should be disposed of in marriage, giving them as an allotment a fourth part of a brother's own share. (127)

The sons of a Brāhmaṇa, in order of the caste, are entitled to four, three, two and one, shares of the property; the sons of a Kshatriya, to three, two and one, shares; those of a Vaishya, to two and one, shares. (128)

If any portion of the property, which has been [previously] stolen by one, is found out after partition, it must be, equally, divided amongst all the co-sharers; for such is the Law. (129)

A son, begotten on his own wife by a sonless person through another with the permission of his preceptor, is morally entitled to inherit the properties of, and offer funeral cakes for, the both (i.e., the person who procreates and the person on whose wife he does so). (130)

The legitimate son of the body, is one who is produced by a lawful wife; the son of an appointed daughter, is equal to him; the son of the (soil or) wife, is one begotten on her by an appointed kinsman sprung from the same original stock (with her husband), or by another person duly authorised; a male child, secretly brought forth (by a married woman) in the mansion

* In some Texts there is the word pas'chātva, instead of dris'yātva; the former means,—“after the death of the father,” i.e., a son, so born, is, also, entitled to a share.

(of her lord), is considered as a son of concealed birth; the Kānina or a son born of a young woman unmarried, is considered as the son of his maternal grandfather; a son of the twice-married, is one born of a woman (by a second marriage), whether she be at the time of marriage deflowered (virgin) or not; a son given, is one received, as a gift, from one's natural father or mother; a son bought, is one sold by one's parents; a son made, is one (born of other parents and) adopted by a man for himself; a son self-given, is he who [voluntarily] gives himself to another; a son of a pregnant bride, is one accepted while yet in the womb of the bride; a deserted son, when taken [by another], becomes his apaviddha son. In the absence of the preceding one, the succeeding one is entitled to offer* pinda and inherit the property. (131—135)

* These are the twelve classes of sons, according to Yājñawalkya. According to the calculation of some authorities, the number, of sons, including the Ouras'a, is extended even to fifteen, as in the following Text of Law quoted in the Dattaka-Mīmāṃsā :—" 1. The legitimate son; 2. the appointed daughter; 3. the son begotten on another's wife; 4. the son of the wife; 5. the son of an appointed daughter; 6. the son of a twice-married woman; 7. the damsel's son; 8. the son received with (in the womb of) a pregnant bride; 9. the son of hidden origin; 10. the son given; 11. the son purchased; 12. the son self-given; 13. the son made; 14. deserted son; 15. one born of a woman of unknown caste."

Of these, however, in the present age, all are not recognized. Of the several sons, only the Dattaka (the son given) can, at present, be made a substitute for the Ouras'a son. The observations of Sir Thomas Strange and Sir William Macnaghten will explain the point more clearly :—" And now, these two, the son by birth emphatically so-called (Ouras'a), and (Dattaka) meaning always the son given, are, generally speaking, the only subsisting ones allowed to be capable of answering the purpose of son; the rest and all concerning them, being parts of Ancient Law, understood to have been abrogated as the causes arose, at the beginning of the Kali Age."—Strange, Hindu Law, Vol. I, p. 63.

This law holds good in [the cases of] sons of the same caste. [A son,] even if begotten on a S'ūdra maid-servant, is entitled to a share [of the property], [if the father] so desires it. (136)

After the demise of the father, the [other] brothers are to give him (i.e., the son of the S'ūdra-wife) half [of each of their respective shares]. In the absence of other brothers, or of the sons of daughters, he (the son of the Sūdra-wife) is [solely] entitled to the entire property. (137)

If a person dies without a male issue, his wife daughters, father, mother, brothers, their sons, or one born in the same family, a friend, a disciple, or a fellow-student, would inherit his property by gradation,—the next party succeeding in the absence of the previous one. This law is applicable to persons of the same caste.* (138—139)

The preceptor, a qualified disciple, a brother of the same religious persuasion and an associate in holiness (one living in the same hermitage and belonging to the same order), shall, in order, inherit (i.e., the next succeeding in the absence of the previous person) the properties (books, clothes, etc.) of a Vānaprastha,† Yati,‡ and a Brāhmachārīn (religious student.) (140)

A re-united parcener,§ [and in the case of a brother of whole blood being included in the party,] or [the

‡ An ascetic who has renounced the world.

§ The word in the Text is Samsrisāthi: or re-united. The term re-union is thus explained by Vrihaspati:—"He, who being once separated, dwells, again, through affection, with his father, brother, or paternal uncle, is termed re-united."

re-united] brother, shall keep the share of his re-united co-heir or brother, who is deceased; or shall deliver it to a son subsequently born. (141)

A re-united brother, born of another mother, shall take the property of the [deceased] step-brother, [if the latter has no uterine brother]. [A brother,] even if not re-united, shall take [the property of his deceased uterine [brother], but not a re-united brother born of another mother.* (142)

An impotent person, an outcaste and his son, one who is lame, a madman, an idiot, one born blind, a person afflicted with an incurable disease and such like others, must be maintained without any allotment of shares. (143).

But sons of such persons, whether born of their own loins or on the soil, being free from similar defects, shall obtain their fathers' shares of the inheritance; the daughters must be maintained until they are not provided with husbands. (144)

Their childless wives, who are of good conduct (i.e., chaste) should be maintained; but disloyal and Ātmā-Vāhana says:—"Father, son, brothers, paternal uncles and the rest, are, when re-united, reckoned re-united partners. The term 'the rest,' means son and nephew. The partnership of traders is no re-union. The parties are said to be re-united when they form one household. The meaning of Vrihaspati's Text is that persons, who by birth, have common rights over the estate acquired by the father or by the grandfather, or by the both, as father (and son), brothers, uncle (and nephew), etc., are said to be re-united, when after having a partition made, they come, again, live together through mutual affection.

* The meaning is:—If there be only half-brothers, the property, of the deceased, must be assigned, in the first instance, to the re-united one, but, if there be none such, to the half-brothers, not re-united. But, if an uterine brother, even not re-united, lives, the half-brothers, even when re-united, shall not inherit.

traitorous wives must be banished from the habitation. (145)

What has been given to a woman by the father, the mother, the husband, or a brother, or received by her at the nuptial fire, or presented to her on her husband's marriage with another wife,* is denominated Strīdhan or a woman's property. (146)

What has been given to her by her kindred (i.e., persons who are related through the father, or the mother), as well as her fee or gratuity, or what has been presented to her, after marriage, by her husband's, or her father's, family,† [is also known as Strīdhan]. If she dies without any son or daughter, her kinsmen must inherit [her Strīdhan. (147)

The separate property of a childless woman, married according to the four forms denominated Brāhma, etc., (Daiva, A'rshya and Prajāpatya), goes to her husband. [In other three forms, viz., Asura, Rākshasa and Paishācha], the mother [inherits the Strīdhan] of the daughter, failing her the father. (148)

If after having promised a maiden [to be given away in marriage to one man, her father] does not do so [in the interest of a better bridegroom], he must be punished and be compelled to return, to the bridegroom elect, whatever he has spent, with interest. On the demise [of such a maiden, the bridegroom] should take back all,‡ after having re-paid what [the bride's father] had spent. (149)

* That wealth, which is given to gratify a first wife by a man desirous of marrying a second, is called ādhiwedānika.

† The word in the Text is anvadhaja, i.e., gift subsequent.

‡ Some Texts read dattam for sarvam, meaning "the bridegroom should take back what he had presented to the bride."

A husband is not liable to make good the property of his wife, taken by him in a famine, or for the performance of a duty, or during illness, or under restraint [which a creditor or other person imposes on him for the purpose of recovering his right.] (150)

To a woman whose husband marries a second wife, let him give an equal sum, as a compensation for the supersession, provided no Stridhan has been bestowed on her; but, if any has been assigned, let him allot half. (151)

If partition is denied, it must be determined by kinsmen, friends, witnesses, written documents, and separated dwelling-house, lands, etc. (152)

[LAWS RELATING TO DISPUTES ABOUT BOUNDARIES.]

IN disputes relating to boundaries of land under cultivation, persons residing in surrounding villages, aged men and other [competent persons], cow-herds, persons cultivating boundary lands and all persons living on forest produce, should determine those boundary [disputes.] It (i.e., the boundary) should be determined by elevated lands, charcoal, chaff, huge trees, bridges, ant-hills, ditches, bones and piles of stones. (153—154)

Or persons from neighbouring villages, equal in number (i.e., two or four villagers)—four, eight or ten,—wearing red garlands and red raiments, and carrying earth, should settle the boundary lines. (155)

If [this settlement of the boundary be proved] false, each [implicated] person should be punished by the king with the second of the three penalties (i.e., with a fine of five hundred and forty coins). In the absence of persons knowing the facts or landmarks [noted above], the king should [himself] determine the boundaries. (156)

This should, also, be known as the Law in disputes relating to fruit, gardens, temples, villages, tanks, pleasure-gardens, dwelling-houses and drains. (157)

[In cases relating to] the destruction of landmarks, transgression of the boundary lines and misappropriation of field, one should be punished with the lowest, middling and highest penalty. (158)

[If a person] encroaches upon another's land [for the construction of a bridge], he must not be prevented; for [though] a bridge affects [one's land], to a slight extent, yet it serves a great many useful purpose; [similarly, in the case of sinking a well]; for a well occupying a small space contains profuse water. (159)

If a person constructs a bridge upon another's land, without informing the owner thereof, the latter, and, in his absence, the king, is entitled to all the benefits accruing therefrom. (160)

He, who, having ploughed a plot of land, does not [himself] sow seeds [thereon] or make [another] sow them, must pay [the owner] that quantity of corns which it would have yielded; [and the owner] shall make over the land to another. (161)

[LAWS RELATING TO DISPUTES AMONGST THE KEEPERS.]

IF a buffalo destroys 'another's corn, [its owner must be fined] eight Māshās; if a cow, with half of it (i.e., four māshās); and a if goat or a lamb, with half of the half (i.e., two māshās.) (162)

Animals sitting [in the field], after having eaten up the crops, are to be punished with double the fine. The same amount [of fine is to be levied] when destroying a plot of land covered with grass, etc. [The penalty] for an ass or a camel is what is for a she-buffalo. (163)

The quantity of corns destroyed must be made good to the owner. The keeper of the cattle must be chastised, but the owner must pay the penalty mentioned before. (164).

[If a keeper or a owner of cattle allows them [to graze] unwillingly on fields situated at the outskirts of a highway, or a village, or a plot of land covered with grass, he commits no offence. But if he does it willingly, he is to be punished like a thief. (165)

Huge bulls; animals discharged [by their owner for religious purposes]; kine that have, recently, given birth to young ones; those coming from other villages; and those that have keepers but have been distressed by a king, or afflicted with diseases;—are to be released. (166)

A keeper should, in the evening, return his cattle [to the owner] as they had been committed to his charge. If any is lost or killed, [the keeper], who is paid, must re-place it. (167)

In case of destruction, owing to the negligence of a keeper, [a fine of] half of thirteen panas is the punishment to be inflicted upon him and he must make good the loss to the owner. (168)

According to the desire of the villagers and with the permission of the king, a pasturage should be set apart for the kine. A twice-born person is allowed to collect grass, sacrificial fuel and flowers from every where, as if they are his own. (169)

A distance of a hundred dhanus (a measure of length, equal to four cubits) should be kept on all sides between a village and fields; [that of] two hundred between a village covered with thorns [and fields]; [and that of] four hundred [dhanus] between a city [and fields.] (170)

[LAWS RELATING TO SALE OF ARTICLES BY ONE WHO IS NOT ITS LAWFUL OWNER.]

ONE should [at once] take possession of his own article [from the purchaser] that has been sold by one who was not its owner. The purchaser commits an offence in a secret [purchase]. [If a person purchases an article], from a person who has acquired it by unfair means, secretly, at a reduced price and untimely, [he is to be treated] as a thief. (171)

Having obtained a lost or stolen article, one, (i.e., the purchaser) should have the thief arrested. If he is dead, or gone to an unknown country, the purchaser should himself make it over [to the owner]. (172).

By pointing out the seller, [the purchaser is declared] innocent. And from the seller the [rightful] owner shall obtain the article, and the purchaser his money; and the king must punish him. (173)

[The owner] must establish his claim, on the lost article, by producing evidence of its acquisition and possession, or else (i.e., if one lays a false claim), the king must punish him with a fine to the extent of one-fifth of the value. (174)

One, who takes a lost or stolen article, from another's hands, without giving information to the king, shall be punished with a fine of ninety-six panas. (175)

The owner can lay his claim within one year from the date when a lost or stolen article is brought by custom officers or guards. After that it goes to the king. (176)

[The owner should give, as duty to the king,] four panas for an animal whose hoof is not cloven (such as a horse, an ass, etc.); five, for men; two each, for a buffalo, camel and a cow; and one, for a goat or a lamb. (177)

[LAWS RELATING TO GIFT AND ITS ACCEPTANCE.]

ONE can give away his own property, if [such gift] does not interfere with the maintenance of his kinsmen, besides his wife and son; but not all, if son and grandson exist, nor what has been promised to another. (178)

Let the acceptance be public, specially of immovable property: and delivering what may be given and has been promised, let not a man resume it. (179)

[LAWS RELATING TO RECISSION, OR RETURNING A THING PURCHASED TO THE SELLER.]

TEN days, one day, five days, one week, one month, three days and a fortnight, form, in order, the time for the examination [and return, if the purchaser repents for it] of seeds, iron, beasts of burden, gems, female-servants, milch-cows and man-servants (180)

Gold does not suffer deterioration in fire; the deterioration of silver is two, of tin and lead eight, of copper five, and of iron ten, palas per hundred. (181)

Ten palas for every hundred is the increased weight of a cloth made of rough woolen texture, as well as of a cloth made of similar thread of the middling quality, and three (i.e., palas is the increased weight) of very fine texture. (182)

One thirtieth part is the deterioration of raw materials when they are done into a cloth with embroidery work or that set with false wool. In silk cloth and bark there is neither increase nor deterioration. (183)*

[When any article is spoilt,] the artisan is bound to pay, without any doubt, the amount of compensation determined by experts considering the time, place, enjoyment, and the intrinsic value of the article. (184)

[LAWS RELATING TO BREACH OF CONTRACT, OR ENGAGEMENT
BETWEEN MASTER AND SERVANT]

ONE, who has been made a slave by force, or one sold by a thief, shall be released ; [similarly, the slave] who saves the life of his master, and one, who has accepted slavery for being fed, shall be released on paying the money [spent by the master for his slave]. (185)

One, who has returned from the life of a religious mendicant, shall be a slave to the king till one's death. Slavery is to be accepted] in the natural order of caste (i.e., an inferior caste shall be a slave to a superior one), and not in the reverse order (i.e., a higher casteman shall never be a slave to a lower one). (186).

Even if one has learnt the art [within the prescribed time], he must live in the house of one's teacher for the full period of contract. The student, desirous of learning an art, who has received his board from the teacher, must make over to the latter the fruits of his labour [during the period of his pupilage]. (187).

* The purport of these S'lokas is that when raw materials, such as gold, or silk textures, are made over to an artisan for making ornaments or raiments, the latter, when made ready must be weighed under these regulations. If there be any increase or decrease, in the weight the artist an is to be punished.

[LAWS RELATING TO THE BREACH OF ESTABLISHED USAGE OR CUSTOM OF A PUBLIC BODY.]

HAVING made [suitable] houses in [his city], the king should make the Brāhmaṇas settle there. And having granted them stipends for learning the three Védās, he should say,—“Follow your own vocation.” (188)

He (i.e., the Brāhmaṇa), following, without any hinderance, his own vocation, should, with care, satisfy those which time brings on,* as well as those imposed on him by the king.† (189)

He, who robs the wealth of the villagers or breaks the established custom of the society, should be banished from the kingdom, after having been stripped off all his possessions. (190)

All should follow the words of persons who speak in the interest of a public body. He, who acts otherwise, shall be punished with the first form of penalty. (191).

The king should finish the business of persons who approaches him in the interest of a public body and send them away after having honoured them with gifts and [other] marks of royal favour. (192)

Whatever a person, sent out by a public body [on a public work] gets, he must make it over [to that body]. If he himself does not give it, he must be punished with eleven times [the amount]. (193)

Persons, conversant with Védās, pure-minded and shorn of avarice, should be placed at the head [of a public body] to administer its affairs. All should follow the words of those persons speaking in the interest of a public body. (194)

* Such as during an accidental calamity like a famine, etc., he should spend his money to help others and visit other peoples' houses.

† i.e., Study of a particular subject or the celebration of a particular religious rite required by the king.

This, also, is the Law for (S'reṇi) a guild or company of traders and artisans, (naigama) persons of various castes coming from different countries for trading purposes and (pās'āndis) heretics. The king should prevent dissensions [from taking place amongst them] and make them follow their previous callings. (195)

[LAWS RELATING TO NON-PAYMENT OF WAGES.]

[If a servant,] receiving wages, refuses to do the work [stipulated for], he must pay double the amount [to his master], and in case of not receiving any payment an amount equal [to the wages]; all household articles and implements must be protected by the servants. (196)

A person, who makes [a servant] work for him without settling his wages, must be punished by the king with the tenth part [of the profit, to be realized] from his trade, cattle or corns; [and it must be paid to the servant]. (197)

To pay wages to [the servant], who transgresses time and place (i.e., who does not cultivate properly and in due time), and who decreases the amount of profit [by over expenditure], depends upon the will of the master. Something more [than the fixed wages] should be paid [to the servant], if he makes a greater out-turn. (198)

If two persons cannot, jointly, finish a work, wages should be paid to them according to the extent of the work done. If they can finish it, the stipulated wages must be paid. (199)

If a carrier breaks a vessel without any accident or oppression of the king, he shall be made [to pay for it] By putting obstacles to carrying articles for a bridal party, he must be made to pay double the amount of his (own) wages. (200)

[If a servant gives up the work] at the time of his departure, [but while there is still time for engaging another servant, he should forfeit] one-seventh of his pay [as penalty]; if on the way, a fourth part; and if half way, all his wages. A master, dismissing [a servant under similar circumstances,] shall be punished. (201)

[LAWS RELATING TO GAMBLING AND BETTING WITH LIVING CREATURES]

IN a gambling match, where increase is made by a hundredfold betting, the keeper of the gambling-house should take five per cent. [of the earnings made by] a fraudulent gamester and ten per cent. [of the bet] from others (i.e., those defeated.) (202)

He (i.e., the keeper of a gambling-house) should, always, be protected [by the king from the fraudulent gamesters], and he must pay to the king his share as stipulated for. He should pay to the winning [gamester his due after collecting it] from the losing party. He should speak the truth and be forgiving. (203)

After having exacted his royalty, the king should make the losing party pay the winner his due in a place where the party consists of fraudulent gamesters and keepers; otherwise not. (204)

[Some gamesters should be appointed by the king] as judges of gambling-suits; and some, as witnesses. The king should make those, who play fraudulently or with a motive to cheat, first undergo the operation of the brandiron and then banish them [from the kingdom]. (205)

In order to keep information about thieves [who generally frequent there] a person should be appointed as a superintendent of gambling-houses; this should, also, be known as the Law in betting with living animals. (206)

LAWS RELATING TO THE USE OF ABUSIVE WORDS AND DEFAMATION.

WHETHER truly or falsely or by way of joke, if one vilifies another [of the same caste] as having a defective limb, or a defective organ, or suffering from a [vile] disease [like leprosy], he should be punished with a fine of half of thirteen panas. (207)

A king should punish, with a fine of twenty-five panas, [a person] vilifying another, by saying,—“I have known your mother or sister.” (208)

Half [is the penalty of a superior caste, using abusive language] towards inferior castes. Double is the penalty, [for one who vilifies] other people's wives and persons of superior castes. Punishment should be meted in order of the superiority of Varnas (Brāhmaṇa, Kshatriya, Vais'ya and S'ūdra), and castes (i.e., mixed castes.) (209)

In the case of a person, of an inferior caste, using abusive language towards one of a superior order, the punishment should be double or threefold. But when a superior caste vilifies an inferior one, he should be punished in order with half the penalty. (210)

In a case where one uses words destructive of [another's] arms, neck, eyes or thighs, the penalty should be a hundred panas. But in the event of hands or feet, ears or nose, the penalty should be half [the amount] (211)

An incapable person, caluminating thus, should be punished with a fine of ten panas. But a capable person [on being punished] should have to furnish a surety for the protection of the person [abused]. (212)

When any defamatory language is used [against a person] which is likely to estrange him from his society, [the person using such a language] should be punished with the second form of pecuniary penalty. When the defamation relates to the second form of sin, the lowest form of pecuniary punishment should be his portion. (213)

Use of abusive language towards a person who has mastered the three Védās, towards a king or a deity [shall bring on] the highest form of pecuniary punishment. The second form of pecuniary punishment is [for the use of abusive language] towards caste and corporate bodies; and the lowest, for vilifying a village or country. (214)

[LAWS RELATING TO ASSAULT OR VIOLENCE]

A JUDGE should try a case, where there is no eye-witness, after carefully examining the marks and the motive [of assault], depending upon the rumour and fearing lest a false mark is made. (215)

When one throws, on another's person, ashes, clay or dust, the punishment, laid down in the scriptures, is a fine of ten panās. In the case of polluting by touches of an unholy thing, heel or saliva, [the fine] should be double [the amount]. [216]

This [Law] holds good in cases between persons of the same order and equal rank; double [between] other people's wives and persons of superior caste; and half [when the offence is committed towards] persons of inferior castes. There should be no punishment, [if the offence is committed] out of mental derangement or drunkenness. (217)

The limb, of a person other than a Brāhmaṇa (i.e., of an inferior caste), which inflicts pain on a Vipra, should be cut off; when any weapon is uplifted [for the purpose], the penalty should be the lowest form of pecuniary punishment; when it is merely touched [the fine] is half the amount. (218)

The penalty is a fine of ten and twenty panas [severally] when the hand or foot is raised up [for striking a person of the same caste]. The second form of pecuniary punishment [is the penalty] for all when they take up arms [for striking one another]. (219)

Ten panas [is the fine when one] pulls another [of the same caste] by holding his feet, hands, cloth or hand. [A fine of] a hundred panas [shall be imposed on a person] binding another with a cloth, handling him roughly, or pulling or striking him with his feet. (220)

A person, striking another with a piece of wood, etc., but without shedding any blood, should be punished with a fine of twenty-two panas. The penalty is double when marks of blood are seen. (221)

When hands, legs, or teeth are broken, ear or nose is lopped off, any wound is rendered fresh, or a person is beaten almost to death, [the person, who so strikes, should be dealt] with the second form of punishment. (222)

[If, by the assault,] one is rendered incapable of moving about, eating or speaking, if eyes, etc., are bored through, if neck, arms or thighs are broken, the second form of penalty [is to be imposed]. (223)

Double is the penalty, as mentioned before, when one person is assaulted or struck by many. Whatever is taken away, during an affray, must be returned [to the owner]; Law lays down that [the person who takes the article] must be punished [with a fine] double [the value of the article]. (224)

A person, who thus inflicts an wound [on the person of another], should be made to pay the cost of healing it and must be punished with the fine laid down for a particular affray [in which he may be involved]. (225)

For extirpating, rending, dividing into two parts and pulling down a wall, [the perpetrator] should be fined ten, twenty, or thirty-five, panas [respectively as compensation to the owner]. (226)

For throwing articles, that may give pain, into another's house or those, that may destroy life, [the person committing] the first [offence], should be compelled to pay sixteen panas; and the second [should be punished with] the second form of penalty. (227)

For striking small animals (as goat, etc.), shedding their blood, cutting their horns and severing their limbs, one should be made to pay a penalty of two panas and others in order. (228)

For cutting off their organs of generation or killing them, [one should be punished with] the second form of punishment and made to pay the owner the price [of the same]. Double is the penalty in offences relating to big animals like bull, etc.) (229)

[In offences relating to] the cutting of branches, and trunks and to the entire destruction of huge trees (like fig, etc.), and those which yield livelihood [to the owner, such as mangoe, etc.], the penalty is double the twenty panas (i.e., twenty forty and eighty panas in order. (230)

Double is the penalty laid down [for cutting] trees grown near a monument, a cremation-ground, a boundary line, a sacred place, or a temple. (231).

Half, of what has been laid down before, is the penalty for cutting down groves, bushes, creepers, plants and medicinal herbs grown in places mentioned before. (232)

(LAWS RELATING TO ROBBERY)

To take a joint property or one not belonging to him, is designated sāhasa (robbery) in the Smṛiti. [A person, committing such an act but admitting it], should be punished with a fine double [the value of the article]; on denial, the penalty should be fourfold. (233)

He, who makes [another] commit theft or robbery, should be punished with [a fine] double [the value of the article. He, who makes [another] commit it by saying,—“I shall give you money,” should be made to pay a penalty] four times [the value of the stolen article]. (234)

He,—who abuses and transgresses the orders of persons deserving respect, who beats his brother's wife, who does not give a promised amount, who opens the doors of a closed house [without the permission of the master], who injures his neighbouring landholder, persons born in the same family, or his own villagers,—should be punished with fifty panas. Such is the Law (235—236)

He,—who of his own accord knows a widow who does not exert to help a person seeking his protection from fear of thieves, who cries without any cause a Chandāla, who touches a high-caste person, a S'ūdra, who feeds religious mendicants at rites [performed for] the deities and departed manes, who swears improperly, who being himself unqualified performs a rite worthy of being celebrated by a qualified person, who cuts off the generative organ of a bull or of small animals, who misappropriates a public property, who destroys the embryo of a female servant, who without any justification renounces any amongst the following, a father, a son, a sister, a brother, a husband, a wife, a preceptor or a disciple,—should be punished with [a fine of] a hundred panas. (237—240)

For wearing a cloth, belonging to another, [brought for washing], a washerman should be fined three panas. For selling, hiring, mortgaging or giving it to another for use when solicited, [he should be fined] ten panas. (241)

Three panas is the penalty for persons giving evidence in quarrels between a father and son. He, who stands as a surety to them, is to pay a penalty of eight times three (i.e., twenty-four) panas. (242)

He, who counterfeits or forges scales, or plates inscribing grants of land, or standards of measure and coins and makes use of them [as genuine], should be punished with the highest form of pecuniary punishment. (243)

The examiner of coins, and articles stamped with impression, who passes a counterfeit or a false or forged article for a real one, and a real one for a false one, should be punished with the highest form of pecuniary punishment. (244)

A quack [a physician without any pretence to the knowledge of the healing art], when meddling in the treatment of the feathery tribe or the quadruped, and making a muddle of the same, should be punished with the lowest form of pecuniary punishment; [when meddling in the treatment] of ordinary mortals, the second form, [and when] of the king's officers, the highest form, of pecuniary punishments should be his portion. (245)

He, who binds a person who should not be bound, or who releases one fettered [by the king] before the final disposal of the case, should be punished with the highest form of pecuniary punishment. (246)

He, who pilfers [by a trick] one-eighth part of [grains, etc.,] while weighing by a standard measure, or in the scale [of a balance], should be made to pay two hundred panas [as fine]; [the penalty] is laid down according to the higher or lesser [weight of the article stolen] (247)

For mixing spurious articles with (i.e., adulterating) medicinal drugs, oily substances (i.e., oil, clarified butter, etc.,) salt, scented rice, treacle, etc., one should be fined sixteen panas. (248)

[One], making a spurious imitation of earth, leather, threads, iron, bark or cloth, should be punished [with a fine] eight times the value of the saleable article. (249)

For mortgaging or selling a box closed,* or a vessel containing imitations of valuable articles, (such as musk, etc.), one should be punished according to Law. (250)

[If it is sold or mortgaged] for a lesser amount than a pana, [the penalty] is fifty; if for a pana, a hundred; and if for two panas, two hundred. [The amount of fine increases] with the increased value [of the articles.] (251)

The highest form of pecuniary punishment is laid down for them, who, knowing the standard value (of a thing) settled by the king, in a body so increase or decrease its value as is painful to the artist or the artisan. (252)

The highest form of pecuniary punishment is laid down for those merchants, who in a body obstruct the sale of foreign articles, (i.e., do not purchase them at the price fixed by the king, in order to buy them cheap) and those who sell them [at a higher price.] (253)

Sale and purchase shall be conducted daily according to the value fixed by the king. The surplus, on the fixed value, is to be recognized as the profit of the trade. (254).

On indigenous articles, the trader, who sells them immediately after purchase, shall make a profit of five per cent., and ten per cent., on those coming from other countries. (255)

Calculating the intrinsic value of commodities and the charges for bringing them, the king shall so fix their price that the seller or buyer may not suffer any loss. (256)

[LAWS RELATING TO NON-DELIVERY OF ARTICLES SOLD.]

He, who having received the value of a commodity, does not make it over to the buyer [when he demands it], shall be called upon to pay the value with profit or interest. If the purchaser comes from another country, the seller shall be made to pay [to the buyer] the profit that might have been made in that country. (257)

If the first purchaser [after having paid the price], does not take delivery of the article sold, it should be sold again [by the seller]. Any loss [sustained in this transaction], because it is occasioned by the negligence of the first purchaser, must be his. (258)

But any deterioration, caused to the commodity by a calamity divine or regal, must be [compensated by the seller, if he does not deliver it [to the purchaser. when asked to do so. (259).

If one re-sells [to another] an article, sold [to one]. or a defective article for a sound one he, should be punished with double the value [of the article in question]. (260)

Having purchased commodities of trade, not knowing their exact value, a trader should not repent : if he does, he makes himself liable to a penalty of one-sixth [of their value.] (261)

[LAWS RELATING TO JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES, OR A NUMBER OF PERSONS CARRYING ON A TRADE.

A NUMBER of traders, carrying on a trade for making profit, shall share profit and loss according to their respective shares, or according to the compact made [between themselves.] (262)

[If any member of a company] does an act, forbidden [by the general body], or without their permission, or carelessly, and thereby causes a loss, he shall have to make good the same. [If one] protects [its interests] at a time of imminent danger, he shall be entitled to [an additional share of] one-tenth of the profit as his reward. (263)

The king shall levy a twentieth part [of the profit] as his royalty, because it is he who rules the market as the appraiser [of commodities]. What has been forbidden for sale and what is worthy of the royalty, even when sold, should go to him (264)

He, who makes a false statement regarding the quantity of articles [in order to evade payment of proper duty], or he, who goes away from the place where duty is collected,—such a deceitful seller or buyer,—should be punished [with a fine] eight times the value [of the article]. (265)

If a person, engaged in the collection of customs duty, collects the same on articles carried on land, should be made to pay a fine of ten panas. [Similar should be the punishment of a person,] who, renouncing a neighbouring Brāhmaṇa, invites another. (266)

[If one of the partners,] after going to a foreign country, dies there, his share shall revert to his sons, relatives, kinsmen, or to his other partners who have returned; and, in their absence, to the king. (267)

They (i.e., the members of a company) should drive away a deceitful partner, after having deprived him of his share, and should appoint, for an incapable one, another to conduct the business [on his behalf]. This law is, also, applicable to priests, cultivators and artisans. (268)

LAWS RELATING TO THEFT.

A PERSON, with whom stolen property is found, who has a special mark of a thief in him, who had been previously convicted of theft, and whose whereabouts are not known, may be arrested as thieves by officers who are empowered [for so doing]. (269)

Some others may be arrested on suspicion, (such as) those who do not give out their name or caste; those, who are addicted to gambling, women and drinking persons, whose mouth dries up and voice [falters on being questioned]: persons, who enquire [without any apparent cause] about another's property and house; those, who secretly move about ; those, who are lavish in their expenditure, without having any source of income ; and those, who sell broken articles. (270—271)

If a person, who is arrested, on a suspicious charge of theft, cannot establish his innocence, the king shall compel him to return [or compensate] the stolen article and punish him like a thief. (272)

After having compelled him to return the stolen property [or to compensate its value], the king should destroy the thief with the various means of destruction. Having branded [the forehead of] a Brāhmaṇa [thief, he] should banish him from his kingdom. (273)

[If a person] is killed, or [any article or an animal] is stolen, the offence is to be laid at the door of the master [or protector] of the village, if he cannot find out the way by which the thief has made his escape. [If any theft is committed on a pasturage, the blame lies] with the master of the pasturage ; if on a road or on lands other than a pasturage, the guard thereof [is responsible]. (274)

[If any theft is committed] on a boundary, the villagers are [either] to produce [the thief, or the master of that village], where his footmarks end. If, at a distance of two miles [and] in the midst of many villages, [the theft is committed,] five villages or ten villages (i.e., the residents thereof, are to be held responsible).* (275)

[A king] should put to the operation of a S'ūla (iron pole), persons, who snatch away a prisoner, who steal elephants and horses, and who kill another forcibly. (276)

* Responsibility, as described in this couplet and the preceding one, means that the persons, referred therein, are to make good the loss of the owner. It is, furthermore, mentioned, in a Commentary, that the king himself should make good the loss, if the parties responsible are unable to do so.

A pilferer of clothes and a pickpocket should have their thumbs and forefingers cut off. If, they commit the same offence, a second time, they should have a hand and a leg cut off. (277)

In thefts of trifling articles, (earthen vessel, etc.,) ordinary ones (clothes, etc.,) and valuable ones (gold etc.), the punishment is [to be determined], according to value (of things stolen). While inflicting punishment, place, time, age and power should be taken into consideration. (278)

The highest form of pecuniary punishment is [for the person], who knowingly gives food, residence, fire (for cooking, etc.), water, advice, implements and expenses either to a thief or a murderer. (279)

The highest [form of] punishment is for him who strikes another with a weapon or destroys an embryo. The highest or the lowest form of punishment [is to be determined, according to the merit of the murderer and the person killed] in killing a male or a female person. (280)

A dissolute woman, killing an embryo or a man, or destroying a bridge, if she be not en ciente [at the time], should be made to enter into the water, having a stone tied round her neck. (281)

A woman, who administers poison or puts fire [for destroying a house], who kills her husband, spiritual guide, or her children, should be killed by an ox, after having her ears, fingers, nose and lips cut off. (282)

The sons and friends, of a person, who has been surreptitiously murdered, should be immediately and severally accosted, if [the murdered person] had any quarrel [with any person], and if his wives had been visited by other persons.* (283)

[Enquiries should, also, be made,] whether he had a longing for another's wife and possessions, and what sort of livelihood he did seek for and with whom he had gone out. Persons, living near the place of murder, should be gradually accosted [on the subject]. (284)

One, who puts fire to a field full of corns, a house, a forest, a village, a pasture, or a thrashing-floor, and one, who knows a king's wife, should be burnt down with the fire of Veerana (a kind of fragrant grass). (285)

[LAWS RELATING TO ADULTERY AND SEDUCTION]

A MAN is said to commit adultery, when he is found holding the hairs of another's wife, when marks, immediately made or otherwise, of a lustful embrace, [are found on the person of the implicated man or woman or of both of them], and when both the parties admit their guilt. (286)

The holding of a cloth, worn round a woman's waist or of a covering of her breast, catching her by the hair or the hip, or by the thigh, holding an unseasonable and untimely tete-a-tete at an improper place, or sitting with her on the same seat, [also goes to establish the charge of adultery.] (287)

If a woman does a forbidden act, she should be made to pay a fine of a hundred panas; if a man, a penalty of two hundred panas, should be imposed on him. If they both commit forbidden acts, their punishment should be like that of adultery. (288)

* It may, also, mean his wives and other dissolute women should be separately asked.

The highest form of pecuniary punishment is the penalty, if adultery is committed by a man with a woman of the same caste; the second form is [the penalty, when a similar offence is committed with] a woman of a lower caste; and death [is the penalty, when it is committed] with a woman of a higher caste. The cutting of the nose, etc., [is the penalty] for women. (289)

[A king] should inflict the highest form of pecuniary punishment [upon a person], who carries away a maiden, of the same caste, adorned [for marriage]; in ordinary cases the lowest form of pecuniary punishment should be his penalty. [In the case of carrying away] a maiden of a higher caste, sentence of death is laid down by Law. (290)

No offence is committed, if a maiden, of an inferior caste, is lustfully disposed; otherwise, there is a penalty [for the offence]. [If a woman, of an inferior caste,] is ravished [against her will with scratches on her person], made by nails, the cutting off of fingers [is the penalty] Death [is the penalty, if a similar offence is committed with] a woman of a higher caste. (291)

For making known the real defects of a maiden, [one should be made to] pay [a fine of] a hundred panas; for making a false accusation, two hundred; for holding a sexual intercourse with a beast, a hundred panas. [The penalty, for a person], who knows a woman of an inferior caste or holds an intercourse with a cow, is the second form of pecuniary punishment. (292)

For knowing female servants, who are prevented, from holding sexual congress, by being shut up, by their husbands as well as those who live with their husbands, a man must be made to pay a penalty of fifty panas. (293)

For committing rape on female servants (who are prevented by their husbands to visit other people), one shall have to pay a fine of ten panas, according to Law. If many persons know a woman against her will, each of them should be fined twenty-four panas. (294)

If a public woman, after having received her hire, declines [to submit to a man's embraces], she shall have to refund double the amount; on her not receiving any consideration, [she] shall have to pay a like sum; similar is the punishment for a man. (295).

A person holding an intercourse [with his wife] at any other place but the sexual organ, or voiding water at the face of another person, or knowing a female religious mendicant, should be punished with twenty-four panas. (296)

The king, after having had [a person], knowing [a woman of] a degraded caste, branded on the forehead, with a [triangle-shaped] figure, [like] the generative organ of female, should have him banished [from the kingdom]. A S'ūdra [committing a similar offence], becomes degraded to the same caste. Death [is the penalty for] a degraded caste-man, who knows a woman of a higher caste. (297)

[MISCELLANEOUS RULES.]

THE highest form of pecuniary punishment [is the penalty of a person], who, while writing out the order of his king, makes additions or alterations therein, who knows another's wife, or who releases a thief. (298)

The highest form of pecuniary punishment is laid down for him, who [falsely] makes a Brāhmaṇa eat the forbidden food; the second form, if a Kṣatriya; and the lowest, if a Vaishya; and half is the penalty, if a S'ūdra [is made to take such forbidden food]. (299)

One, who uses false gold;—or one, who sells forbidden meat;—should have their limbs severed, and be punished with the highest form of pecuniary punishment. (300)

[The driver] shall not be responsible for the offence committed by a four-footed animal (horse, etc.), if he cries out [go away, go away; [nor a thrower] for [that] committed by a piece of wood, a clod of earth, an arrow, a stone, arms and horses when in pair. (301)

If any harm is committed by a bullock, the string of whose nose has been torn off;—by a carriage, the yoke of which has been broken;—or by a cart, proceeding in an opposite direction;—the owner shall not be held responsible. (302)

If an owner, being himself capable, does not release others [from the attacks of] tuskers and animals having horns (like bulls or buffaloes,) he shall have to undergo the lowest form of pecuniary penalty; and twice as much, if he does not extend his help on being invited to do so. (303)

A person, calling a thief the paramour [of the lady of a house, in order to hide his shame], shall have to pay a fine of fifty panas. If he lets go [such a person], on receiving a gratuity, he shall be made to pay eight times [more than the amount of his illegal gratification]. (304)

One, who indulges in talks affecting the interests of royalty;—one, who vilifies the king;—or one, who discloses his secret counsels;—should have their tongues cut off, and be banished. (305)

One, who sells articles, lying on the body of the dead;—one, who strikes his preceptor— or one, who sits on a royal car or throne;—shall have to undergo the highest form of pecuniary penalty. (306)

He, who pierces both the eyes [of another person];—he, who issues a proclamation hostile to the king;—or he, who being a S'ūdra secures his livelihood by falsely displaying the marks of a Brāhmaṇa;—shall have to pay a fine of eight hundred panas. (307)

Having re-tried the cases, that had been unfairly tried [for some improper consideration], the king shall punish the members [forming the Court], and the victorious] parties with a fine double of that of the defeated person. (308)

He, who being legally defeated, thinks “I am not defeated,” and comes, again, [for an appeal], should be defeated (i.e., should have his appeal dismissed) again, and be made to pay a double penalty. (309)

The fine, that has been realized by the king illegally, he shall make thirtyfold, and, after dedicating the same to Varuna, shall make it over to the Brāhmaṇas. (310)

CHAPTER III.

[REGULATIONS ABOUT As'ouch OR IMPURITY.]

[A BOY], less than two years old, [when dead] should be buried; thereafter no oblation of water should be offered [for him]. Persons, of a higher age, [when dead] should be followed, by their kinsmen, to the cremation ground. Reciting Yama *Sukta and Yama Gāthā,† he [i.e. the dead body] should be burnt [by them] with Loukika (ordinary) fire. [If the person dead] had been invested with the sacred thread, or if he had been a Brāhmaṇa, who had consecrated the sacred fire, [the dead body should be consumed with the āhitāgni or the sacred fire], or else according to one's own means.‡ (1—2)

Within the seventh or the tenth day, kinsmen (i.e., persons qualified to offer oblations of water and funeral cakes), with their faces turned towards the quarter of the departed manes (i.e., the south), shall approach [a pool of] water, for offering water [to the departed person] with the Mantram,—"Apanas Shoshuchadagham." (3)

The rite, of offering water, should be performed for the deceased maternal uncle and preceptor. If one wishes, he can offer water for a deceased friend, a daughter, a sister, a sister's son, a father-in-law and a Ritwij a (priest). (4)

Having controlled their speech, they should, once daily, offer water, [mentioning] the name and family [of the deceased]. [The rite, of offering] water, should not be performed by Brahmachāriṇs or outcastes. (5)

Heretics; persons, who being qualified do not enter into any order; thieves; a woman, who kills her husband; one, who kills her embryo; those women, who drink wine; and those, who commit suicide;—are persons for whom no impurity is to be observed and no water is to be offered. (6)

[Elderly persons] should remove their grief [by reciting anecdotes] from ancient histories, after they had bathed, offered oblations of water, got up from the bathing place, and sat upon a place covered with tender grass. (7)

He is foolish, who considers, as eternal, the existence of human beings, which is [as worthless] as the trunk of the plantain tree and as transient as bubbles. (8)

If this body, originated from the five elements, by the fruit of deeds acquired by one's own person, is dissolved into the five elements, what is there to repent for? (9)

The earth shall meet with destruction, [so shall] the surging deep and the deities. Why shall not then the world of mortals meet with destruction? (10)

The departed person shall, reluctantly, eat the phlegm and tears discharged by his own people. Therefore one should not weep, and must perform funeral rites proportionate to one's might. (11)

Thus hearing [many counsels, they] should go home [the elders being] preceded by the boys. [Arrived] at the gate of the house, they should cut Nimva leaves with their teeth. (12)

Having rinsed their mouth, touched fire, water, cow-dung, white sesame seeds, and placed their feet on a stone, they should gradually enter the house. (13)

This rite of entering the house [is ordained] for all persons touching the dead body. Wishing for immediate purification, one should bathe and perform [the yogic process] prāṇāyama (suppression of vital-airs). (14)

By performing the funeral rite for his preceptor, parents and teacher, a Brahmachārin continues to be such. But he should not live with, or partake of the food of those [who are impure]. (15)

[Kinsmen] should partake of food purchased or acquired [without solicitation] and sleep separately for three days. Funeral cakes and boiled rice should be offered to the departed manes, according to the rite of *pitriyajña (16)

Water and thickened milk, [kept] in earthen vessels, should be placed in the sky (i.e., a loop or swing made of rope). The rites of Vaitana† and Upāsana‡ should be performed according to the Vedic injunctions. (17)

[The period of] impurity, consequent upon death, is three nights, [for those who are qualified to offer oblation of water]; and ten nights, [for those who offer funeral cakes].§ [Impurity, consequent upon the death of a child,] less than two years old, [affects] both the parents. Impurity, consequent upon a birth, is for the mother only. (18)

The impurity, consequent upon the birth of a son, is for the parents, [but not for Sapinda kinsmen]. But the impurity of the mother remains unaffected (i.e., lasts for ten nights), on account of her having seen the blood.* The day [on which a son is born], is not considered impure [for the father to perform any rite], for ancestors are born [as sons.] (19)

If, within the period of impurity, [another], consequent upon [any domestic occurrence like] birth or death [takes place in the family], purification is effected with the last day of the first impurity. In an abortion, the nights, equalling in number the months of conception [form the period of impurity and], will bring about purification. (20).

Immediate [is the purification for the death of] those who are killed by the king, a cow or a Brāhmaṇa, [as well as] those who commit suicide. A person, residing in a distant country, shall observe the remaining period; when the full term is completed, purification [is obtained] by offering water.† (21)

The interpretation of the Bombay Text is as follows:—"If a person, living in a distant country, hears of the death of a Sapinda, he must observe the days, remaining to complete the full term, as the period of impurity. If he hears of it, after the expiration of the full period, he must observe ashoucha or impurity for three days."

S'ūdra is thirty days, and half of that period is for well-behaved [S'ūdras.]* (22)

Immediate is the purification, [if a child dies] before teething; one day and night is laid down in the Smṛitis, [as the period of impurity, if a child dies] before the Chūddā† ceremony is performed; three nights [form the period, if he dies] before being invested with the sacred thread; and after that, ten nights [constitute the period of impurity.]‡ (23)

A day [effects] purification, [on the death of] a maiden,§ not given away in marriage; a child; a preceptor; a pupil; a person, well-versed in the Védās with their angas (auxiliaries); a maternal uncle; and a person, studying the same branch of the Védās. (24)

[On the death of] sons other than ouras'a (own begotten); a wife, living with another person; and on the death of the king of the country;—one day [effects] purification. (25)

[The dead body of a S'ūdra shall never be followed by a Brāhmaṇā; nor [that of] a twice-born one. If he follows, he shall be purified by bathing in water, touching fire and eating clarified butter.|| (26)

* There is, again, a difference in reading. The first line of the 22nd couplet, as found in the Bombay Text, does not occur in the Bengal Edition. Its interpretation is as follows :—If one hears of a death after the expiration of full one year, he attains purification by offering water only.

† The ceremony of tonsure.

‡ This S'loka does not occur in the Bombay Text but it has been given in a foot note of the A'nandās'rama Edition.

§ According to the Text of Vrihaspati, the period of impurity, on the death of a maiden, extends to the fourth generation.

This S'loka does not occur in the Bombay Edition.

There is no impurity for kings ;* for persons, killed by lightning ; [for those killed] for kine and Brāhmaṇās ; and in the battlefield, [as well as for those] whom the king wishes [to have for state business]. (27)

[Purification is immediate] for sacrificial priests, for those initiated for the celebration of sacrifices, for those engaged in the performance of sacrificial rites, for those, who constantly perform sacrifices, for those, who practise penances, for religious students, for those, who make gifts and for those who know Brahma. (28)

Immediate purification is laid down in a gift, marriage, sacrifice, war, devastation of the country, calamity and distress (famine). (29)

[Purification is effected] by bathing, [of a person] touched by a woman in her menses, or by one who is impure [on account of a birth or death] If touched by such a person, [one] should rinse the mouth, recite the Mantrams,—(Apohistha, etc.,) and the Gāyatrī, once, mentally. (30)

Time (ten days), fire, action (bathing, etc.), earth, air, mind, spiritual knowledge, austerity, water, repentance and fasting,—all these are the instruments of purification. (31)

Charity purifies the perpetrators of forbidden acts ; current, the rivers ; earth and water, those articles that are worthy of being purified ; and renunciation, the twice-born. (32)

Austerity [purifies] those, who are well-versed in the Védās ; forgiveness, the learned ; water, the body ; recitation [of the sacred verses], those, who have their sins concealed ; and truth, it is said, the mind. (33)

* The meaning is that impurity does not prevent a king from transacting State business.

Practice of the duties of one's own caste and order, and worship of the Brāhmaṇas, are [the instruments of] purification of a soul that considers this body as [one's] own; knowledge [is the purifier of] intellect; and the knowledge of Is'vara (the Creator) is the purifier of individual soul. This is approved by great men (i.e., like Manu and others. (34)

PROCEDURE NOT USUALLY PROPER FOR A CASTE BUT ALLOWABLE IN TIMES OF EXIGENCY OR CALAMITY.]

IN times of extreme distress, a Brāhmaṇa can live by the occupation of a Kshatriya (i.e., by adopting a military life), or by that of a Vaishya (i.e., commerce and agriculture). Getting over that (distress), he shall, after purifying his own self [by penances], wend a [righteous] way. (35)

Even when [adopting] the life of a Vaishya for maintenance, he shall never sell fruits, precious stones, linen cloth, Soma-Plant, men, Apupa (a small round cake of flour), a creeper, sesame seeds,, boiled rice, treacle, any corrosive or acid substance, curd, thickened milk, clarified butter, water, weapons, spirituous liquor, wax, grapes, honey, shell-lac, Kus'ā-grass, earth, hide, flowers, blanket, hairs, butter-milk, poison, land, silk-cloth, indigo-dye, salt, meat, a whole-hoofed animal (as a horse, etc.), lead, vegetable leaves, wet medicinal herbs, incense, [wild] animals, as well as scents. But for religious purposes he can sell sesame seeds by taking an equal quantity of rice [in exchange]. (36—39)

Shell-lac, salt and meat, when sold [by a Brāhmaṇa] make [him] outcasted. [The selling of] milk, curd and wine degrades [him] to an inferior caste (i.e., makes him a S'ūdra). (40)

If a Brāhmaṇa, in times of extreme distress, accepts gifts [from any one,] or takes his food anywhere, he is not affected by sin, for he is like the Fire or the Sun. (41).

Agriculture, fine arts, teaching for money, usury, driving carts for hire, use of hilly woods and twigs, service, [use of articles grown in a] marshy place, [seeking refuge with] the king, and begging alms, are the means of livelihood in times of extreme distress. (42)

Remaining hungry for three days, he may steal rice from a caste other than a Brāhmaṇa. When after taking it, he is charged [with theft], he must speak out all religiously. (43)

Being informed of his conduct, family, character, his knowledge of S'ruti, his studies, austerity, [and the number of] his family members, the king shall settle on him an honest mode of living. (44)

[REGULATIONS RELATING TO VA'NAPRASTHA, OR THE THIRD STAGE OF LIFE]

ENTRUSTING the son with the care of his wife or followed by her, a Vānaprastha, (i.e., a person desirous of entering upon the third stage of religious life,) renouncing carnality, shall, with [his] Sacred Fire, and intent on performing religious meditation, proceed to a forest. (45)

With corns, grown on a field not tilled, he shall offer oblations to the Fire, to the departed manes, to the Deities, guests and servants. Bearing nails, matted locks and beards, he should meditate on his own self. (46)

Amassing money [sufficient to meet the expenditure] for a day, or a month, or six months or a year, he should distribute the remnant in the month of As'vin (September). (47)

[He should] be shorn of pride, bathe thrice, must not accept gifts, [and should be given to Vedic studies, be charitable and devoted to the well-being of all creatures. (48)

He should use his teeth for a mortar (grinding grain to be eaten between his teeth), eat fruits ripened in proper time, and break every thing on stones. He should perform the rites laid down in the Védās Smṛitis and other [S'āstric works], with the juice of fruits. (49)

He should spend his time with the celebration of *Chandrāyana or should always live with hardship.† He should take his meals after the expiration of a fortnight or after the day is over. (50)

Being purified, he should sleep in the night on an open ground and spend the day with [standing on] the fore-part of the foot, or by standing, sitting, travelling or practising Yoga. (51)‡

* A religious observance or expiatory penance regulated by the moon's age; in it the daily quantity of food, which consists of fifteen mouthfuls at the Full Moon, is diminished by one mouthful every day during the dark fortnight till it is reduced to zero at the New Moon, and is increased in like manner during the bright fortnight.

† The word in the Text is Krichha, which may mean hardship or bodily mortification. The Commentators mention Prajāpatya as one of the forms of hardship, i.e., a person must give up the whole of his property before he enters upon the life of an ascetic and must, therefore, put up with all sorts of hardship originating from want of money.

‡ The Bombay reading as quoted in the Text differs from it—but the purport is almost the same.

He must live within five fires* during the summer, sleep on the bare sacrificial ground in the rainy season, [always] put on wet cloth in the dewy season, [and thus] practise austerities according to his might. (52)

He must not be enraged with him who pierces him with a thorn, nor pleased with him who pastes him with sandal, but he should be impartial towards him and him (i.e., towards the both.) (53)

Or putting the fire within his own self, he should dwell under a tree and live on a restricted diet, or he should beg from the retreats of [other] Vānaprasthas [the quantity of food which may] keep the body and soul together. (54)

Or collecting it from a village, he should, having controlled his speech, eat eight handfuls. Or leaving on air, he should proceed towards the north-east quarter till the destruction of his body. (55)

[DUTIES OF A YATI, OR ONE WHO HAS RENOUNCED THE WORLD.]

HAVING performed duly the Prājāpatya Sacrifice (i.e., giving away his entire property) with all the Védās as presents, and thereafter, having placed all the Fires within his own self, [one is entitled] either from the Forest (i.e., Vānaprastha order) or from the House (i.e., Gārhastya or Domestic order) [to enter upon the life of a Yati]. (56)

[He, alone, is qualified to do so], who has studied the Védās, who has practised recitations [of the sacred verses] who has a son, who has given food, who has maintained the Sacred Fire, who has celebrated Sacrifices according to his might, and who has concentrated his mind upon [the acquisition of] emancipation. (57)

He should be given to the well-being of all creatures, be of a quiescent soul, carrying three staffs* and a Ka-maṇḍalu (water pitcher), should live alone, wander about and resort to a village for begging alms. (58)

Being attentive, without having his qualifications noticed [by the householder] and shorn of avarice, he should, in the last part of the day, beg alms in a village where no mendicant had gone before, sufficient to keep his (body and soul together). (59)

The vessels [used by a Yattī], should be made of earth, bamboo, wood or bottle-gourd. Their purification [is effected] with water or the touch of down grown on a cow's tail. (60)

Having withdrawn the senses from their objects, relinquished attachment and envy, removed [all sources of] fear to creatures, a Brāhmaṇa becomes immortal. (61)

The purification of the mind should be particularly made by a Vikṣu (mendicant) for the purpose of acquiring true knowledge and singular power [in the practices of meditation, concentration, etc.]. (62)

Residence in the [mother's] womb, as well as going To hell, brought about by [the perpetration of forbidden] acts, mental afflictions; diseases, miseries, decrepitude disfigurement (brought about by lameness, blindness, etc.), birth in a thousand species, non-attachment for

* A religious mendicant or a Saṁnyāsī, who has renounced all worldly attachments and who carries three long staves tied together so as to form one in his right hand. According to Manu, "one, who has obtained command over his mind speech and body (or thought word and deed).

desired for objects and attainment of what is not liked, should be thought of. By the yoga of meditation he should see the subtle soul abiding in the Great Soul. (63—64).

(Following a particular ās'rama (stage or mode of life) is not the cause of religion. He, alone, is [a religious man], who practises [all the regulations laid down for each order]. Therefore, one should not treat another in a way which is distasteful to his own self. Truthfulness, non-stealing, absence of anger, modesty, purity, intellect, patience, absence of pride, restraint of the senses and spiritual learning—all these are spoken of as religion. (65—66)

[SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND THE FORMATION OF* HUMAN BODY.]

AS scintillations come out from a red-hot iron ball so individual souls emanate from the Great Soul. (67)

Of them, every individual soul does some deed, righteous or sinful, either of its own accord, or by nature, or by habit (the outcome of pristine Karma) (works). (68)

The imperishable [Soul is] the cause [of the universe]; the conscious [Soul] is independent; Brahma is the master of gunās† and not subject to any. It is

* In the Bombay Edition this Chapter has been included within that on Yati.

† We find three universal tendencies, or forces acting on the face of creation. There is the chaotic or disorganizing tendency which leads everything into confusion; there is the isolating tendency, by which every object tries to secure an individual position of its own and there is the harmonising tendency by which every object gravitates to a centre in creation and which tries to bring all objects of creation into one universal order. These three universal tendencies are inherent in creation, both, animate and inanimate, and every form of growth is dependent upon the working of these tendencies. They are not the unborn but is being described as born for its having assumed a body. (69)

As at the beginning of creation he creates ether, air, fire, water and earth, successively investing [them] with one more guṇa (quality),* so he himself takes those [elements] when he takes birth.† (70)

The Sun is gratified with oblations; from it [originates] rain; from it grow corns and herbs [forming] the food-stuff, which, in the shape of rasa (constituent fluid of the body) becomes semen. (71)

In pure (i.e., not affected by bad bile, etc.) blood and semen [originating] from the union of a man and woman, the sixth (i.e., the ātman or soul), the lord [of the universe,] takes himself, simultaneously the five elements. (72)

[The five] instruments of sensation (i.e., the eye, the ear, the nose, the tongue and the skin), the instruments of action (i.e., the organ of speech, the hands, the feet, the organ of excretion and the organ of generation), the mind, [the five] vital airs, knowledge, duration of life, happiness, steadiness, the faculty of retention, passion, sorrow, desire, egoism, exertion, form, color, vice, envy, materials or ingredients which form all the objects of nature but the laws that regulate their creation—the inherent energies or tendencies. The first is called the Tama-guṇa; the second, Raja; and the third, Sattma.—M. N. DUTT'S Outlines of Hindu Metaphysics.

* Five elemental particles produced the five elements, namely, (1) ether or the vehicle of sound; it has the property of audibility; (2) air, sensible to hearing and touch; (3) fire, sensible to hearing, touch and sight; (4) water, sensible to hearing, touch, sight, and taste; (5) earth, sensible to hearing, touch, sight, taste, and smell.

† In this S'loka the author describes the method by which the soul assumes a body.

prosperity and adversity,—all these are born with the soul [as the result of its pristine deed] when the limitless [Great Soul] wishes to be limited (i.e., born as the individual soul). (73—74)

In the first month [of conception], [the sixth] dhātu (i.e., the soul), being invested [with the five elements], remains in a liquid form. [In the second month, it is converted into] a ball of flesh ; in the third, it is invested with limbs and the organs of sense. (75)

The unborn soul takes, in the third month, from ether, lightness, subtleness, and audibleness, the organ of hearing and strength ; from air, the organ of touch, the power of exerting, the movement of limbs and hardness ; from fire, the organ of seeing (eye), the digestive power, heat, form and beauty ; from water, the organ of taste (tongue), watery substance, coolness, tenderness and liquidity ; from earth, the organ of smelling (the nose), the power of smelling, heaviness and the corporal frame. Thereafter it moves. 76—78)

By not giving what a woman, in pregnancy, wishes for, the embryo meets with some shortcomings, either [in the shape of] disfigurement or death. Therefore what is liked by [a pregnant] woman must be gratified. (79)

The limbs attain to firmness in the fourth month, and blood is engendered in the fifth. In the sixth, originate strength, color, nails and hairs. (80)

In the seventh, it is invested with mental faculties, consciousness, arteries and nerves. In the eighth, skin and flesh become hardened, and [the embryo] is invested with the retentive faculty. (81)

[In the eighth month,] ojas (vitality-giving liquid) runs, again and again, towards the mother and the embryo. Therefore, a child, born in the eighth month, is deprived of its life. (82)

Either in the ninth or the tenth month, [the foetus] comes out in a feverish state, [driven] by the wind of labour-pain, through the canal of the organ, like an arrow. (83)

His six sorts of body* contain six skins,† six limbs. and three hundred and sixty bones. (84)

There are sixty-four [bones at] the teeth with those at the roots thereof (Sthāla); nails are twenty; S'atākās (bones, forming the root of the fingers and toes,) [are, also, twenty]; their position is fourfold (i.e., two feet and two hands). (85)

.Sixty bones [form] the fingers (i.e., each finger having three bones); two bones [belong to each] heel; four [bones], are in the [four] ankles; elbow-bones are four; similar [is the number of bones, existing in] the legs, from the ankle to the knee. (86)

To the knee, cheek, thigh, hip, shoulder, the part between the ear and the eye; the palate, and the buttock,—to each of these have been assigned two bones. (87)

There is one bone in the organ of generation and forty-five [bones] are on the back; fifteen bones [are in the] neck; collar-bones are two; and there is one bone in the chin. (88)

[Two are], at the root of the jaw, and the same, in the forehead and the ganḍa (i.e., the whole side of the face including the temple). There is a (thickset) bone called ghana in the nose. Sidebones (i.e., those in the part of the body below the armpit), with those at the roots and arvudās (smaller bones connected therewith), are seventy-two [in number] (89)

There are two bones in the temples; four, in the skull; and seventeen, in the breast. This is (i.e., three hundred and sixty) the aggregate collection of bones in a man's [body]. (90)

Savour, color, odour, tangibility and sound are called vishayās or the objects of perception. The nose, ear, tongue, skin and the eye are the [five] Indriyās or the instruments of sensation. (91)

The hands, the organ of excretion, the organ of generation, the organ of speech and the feet, are the five [instruments of action]; and mind is to be known as both the organ of sensation and action. (92)

The navel, *ojas (vitality-giving liquid), the organ of excretion, semen, blood, the two temples, the head, the shoulder, the throat and the heart are [briefly] the abodes of Prāṇa (the vital air.) (93)

Marrow, flesh, the lungs, klomā (the organ of thirst), the liver, the spleen, the finer intestines, the two kidneys, the urinary bladder, the receptacle of excreta, the receptacle of undigested food, the heart, the grosser intestines, the anus, the belly, and the abdomen are mentioned in detail [as the abiding places of Prāṇa.] (94—95)

loins just above the hips, the two hipjoints, the two testicles, the two kidneys, the thorax, the breast, the tonsil, the buttock, the balls of flesh lying on the hips and the thighs, the palate, the belly, the receptacle of urine, the urinary bladder, the head, the two cheeks, the two uvulas, any low or depressed part,—all these parts of the body, as well as the two white parts of the pupils, the two feet, the two hands, the heart, and the nine apertures (vis., the two eyes, the two ears, the mouth, the organ of excretion and the organ of generation),—are the abiding places of Prāṇa. (96—99)

[Besides these, there are, in this body,] seven hundred arteries, nine hundred ligaments, two hundred vessels and five hundred muscles. (100)

The vessels known, as s'irās and dhamanī, are twenty nine laks, nine hundred and fifty six [in number.] (101)

The beards and hairs of human beings are known as being three laks [in number] ; there are one hundred and seven vital parts and two hundred joints. (102)

The extremities of the hairs of the body, together with the pores for letting out perspiration,—each being of the size of an atom and separated from each other by the measure of an atom floating in the sunbeam,—number fifty-four kotis, sixty-seven laks and fifty thousand. If any [of you, O hermits,] knows the number and position of all these, [he is, indeed, the foremost of Yogins.] (103—104)

[Under normal condition of things,] nine handfuls of (rasa) lymph or chyle, ten handfuls of water, seven of excreta, and eight of blood, have been mentioned [as existing in the body.] (105)

Six [handfuls] of phlegm ; five, of (pitta) bile ; four, of urine; three, of (vasā) myosin; two, of (meda) fat; and one, of marrow;—[are in the body]; half handful of (marrow, as well as of phlegm,) ojas (vitality-giving liquid), and semen, is in the head. He only is conversant with [the road to] emancipation, who knows this body to be frail. (106—107)

There are seventy-two thousand vessels, emanating from the heart, called Hitāhita. In their midst is a plexus, effulgent like the Moon, at the centre of which is stationed the soul like a stationary lamp. He, who knows it, is not born, again, in this world. (108—109)

The A'ranyaka, that I have received from the A'ditya, should be known, as well as the Yoga system expounded by me, by him who wishes to practise Yoga. (110)

Having withdrawn the mind, understanding, retentive faculty and the senses from all their objects, the soul,—the lord, that is stationed like a lamp in the heart, should be meditated upon. (111)

Duly studying the eternal Sāma hymns and from a careful practice thereof, one [gradually] knows the great Brahman. (112)

Aparāntaka, Ullopya, Madraka, Makari, Ouveṇava, Sarovindu, and Uttara—these Gāthās of the Rik, besides Paṇikā, Daksha and Brahma hymns—should be sung accompanied with a thought for emancipation [which is acquired] by the practice thereof. (113—114)

Persons, conversant with the science of Vinā music, experts in S'ruti (a division of the octave) and Īāti (the seven primary and eleven subsidiary notes of Indian Gamut), and those proficient in the knowledge of Tāla (Time), arrive, without any exertion, at the road which leads to emancipation. (115)

If a vocal musician, by his singing, does not attain to the most exalted station, he, however, becoming an attendant of Rudra, sports with him. (116)

The soul is without any limitation; it is called limited, when it assumes a body; from the [Great] A'tman emanates the entire universe and from the universe springs the body. (117)

(The Audience putting the Question :)—Tell us how this universe, consisting of the celestials, asuras and the mankind, emanates from the [Great] Soul and how the body springs into existence from the universe; we cannot conceive it [properly]. (118)

(Yājñawalkya replies :)—The Purusha,—having a thousand hands, feet, eyes and heads, and effulgent like the Sun, that is seen by removing the net of (moha) delusion (which makes men regard the body as the soul), —is the Soul, Yajña and Prajâpati of the universal form. He is identical with the universe and becomes Yajña in the shape of food. (119—120)

Most excellent juice originates from the food that is dedicated to a Deity. This juice, propitiating the Deities [unites] the sacrificer with the fruits (i.e., desired-for objects). (121)

[Driven] by the wind, [it] reaches the Moon; aided by its rays, it reaches the solar region, replete with the Rich. the Yajus and the Sāman. (122)

Then from its own region the Sun creates the most grateful nectarine juice, from which originates this universe consisting of the mobile and the immobile and the means of sustenance (i.e., anna or food-stuff). (123)

From that food-stuff originates again sacrifice, again food, and again sacrifice,—thus the wheel [of the universe], without any beginning or end, [is continually] revolving. (124)

The soul is without any beginning; nor the Great Soul (or Purusha) has any beginning. But the Purusha has a relation [with the body] acquired by deeds—the result of delusion, desire and envy. (125)

The [four] Varṇas (the Brāhmaṇa, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya and the S'ūdra) have, in order, originated from the mouth, the arms, the thighs and the feet of that [Purusha], the First Deity having a thousand head, etc., described by me before. (126)

The Earth has originated from his feet; the celestial region or heaven, from his head; the vital airs, from his nose; the quarters, from his ears; the wind, from his skin; and fire, from his mouth. (127)

The Moon [has originated] from his mind; the Sun, from the eyes; the sky, from the navel, as well as the entire universe consisting of the mobile and the immobile. (128)

(The Audience putting the Question :)—O Brāhmaṇ,* if this be so, why is he born in the lower order of beings? Why should that I's'vara† be affected by evil deeds and desires?‡ (129)

Why [shall] not pristine knowledge [come to a person], who is invested with the instruments thereof, (such as the mind, etc.)? And why does not the Omnipresent (Purusha) feel the miseries of all creatures? (130)

* One conversant with the knowledge of the Supreme Brahman.

† When the Supreme Brahman is invested with the guṇās, he is called I's'vara or the Creator.

‡ The argument is:—While that Purusha is I's'vara, the Supreme Lord and Creator, why should he be then, under the influence of evil deeds, begotten by stupefaction, desire or envy, which, alone, may explain for his birth in the lower order of beings?

(The following are the Replies:)—The Jīva (individual soul), [affected] by the sins, begotten of acts, the mind, speech and the body, comes by birth [to live amongst] degraded people, birds and stable objects,* and in hundreds of other species. (131)

As there are endless mental tendencies of embodied creatures in [various] bodies, so are the forms of bodied beings in all [their] births. (132)

The fruit (good or bad), of [some] deeds, comes in the next birth; that of some, in this world; and that of some, either in this, or in the next, birth. There (i.e., in the appearance of the fruits of deeds) the inclination of the mind is necessary (133)

[One] thinking steadfastly of robbing another's wealth, one thinking of injuring [others], or one given to the pursuit of unreal objects, is born in degraded orders (as Chandālās, etc.). (134)

An untruthful person, a slanderer, one giving vent to harsh words, or one speaking of contradictory statements (mentioned in the Purāṇās), is born in the species of birds and animals. (135)

One, who is addicted to theft; one, who knows another's wife; or one, who slaughters animals unfairly;—is born amongst stable objects. (136)

One, who knows self, is endued with purity, is self-restrained, practises austerity, has controlled his senses, performs religious rites, has mastered the Védās; or one, who is pervaded by the sattwa (harmonizing tendency); is born amongst the Celestials. (137)

One, who is given to evil deeds, is impatient, is addicted to worldly objects; or one, who is pervaded

* It has, after all, now, been proved that there is life in stationary objects like the stone.

by the rajas (self-centering tendency), comes by a human birth after death. (138)

One, who is always sleepy, cruel, avaricious, atheistic; [or one], who always begs, is shorn of the power of discrimination, performs forbidden acts, and is pervaded by the tamas (disorganizing tendency);—is born amongst birds. (139)

Travelling in this world under the influence of the rajas and tamas and endued with many harmful mental tendencies, [the individual soul] attains [repeatedly] to Samsāra (the cycle of births and the miseries consequent thereon). (140)

As an unclean mirror cannot admit of form and light [being reflected on it], so the soul, not fully developed by the result of former acts, cannot come by the knowledge [of pristine deeds]. (141)

As the sweet juice,—though existing in an unripe sour cucumber,—is not perceived, so the knowledge,—derived from the meditation of the higher problems of existence,—[is not perceivable although existing] in a soul not fully developed. (142)

As an embodied creature experiences all sorts of pleasure and pain,—which are felt by all,—in his own body, so a Yogin (i.e., one who has withdrawn his mind from all external objects and conquered the sentiment of mine,)—who is liberated,—does not come by the pain which [affects] all. (143)

As the sky (ākāśa),—though itself one,—appears diversified [as reflected] in various vessels; as the Sun [appears as multiform] in various pools of water;—so the one soul appears as many [being subject to upādhis or limitations]. (144)

Brahma (the soul), ether, air, fire, water and the earth are [the six] elements; these [i.e., the five elements, excepting the soul,] are to be apprehended (i.e., gross); and the soul [is the apprehender*];—from them has emanated [the universe consisting of] the mobile and the immobile. (145)

As a potter makes an [earthen] pot by placing an earthen clod on his wheel; as a builder builds a house with twigs, earth and wood; as a goldsmith makes articles of [various forms] merely with gold as his ingredient; as a silkworm makes a web with its own saliva;—so the soul, taking all the elements (earth, etc.), and the instruments of sensation (eye, etc.), creates, in various orders, bodies—fettered by the fruits of deeds. (146—148)

As the great elements (sky, air, etc.) are real (i.e., their existence is an established fact), so is the soul. Otherwise (i.e., if the soul be not other than an organ of sensation), who sees, with another, [the same object] seen by one, eye † (149)

Who, hearing again the words—heard once before, can recognise them [to be the same]? Who gets the recollection of past deeds and who sees dreams ‡ (150)

* The soul is the conscious element, that apprehends and perceives all; the other five elements, which are unconscious, are also, perceived by the soul. The conscious soul uses the five elements, which are by nature unconscious, in the work of creation.

† If the soul be identical with the organs of sensation, then a person, seeing an object with one eye, cannot perceive it to be the same when seen by another.

‡ Herein are set forth arguments by which the separate and independent existence of the soul is proved. If it be identical with the body, then consciousness will not disappear after death; for, body is not destroyed after death. Nor is it to be identified with the organs of sensation; for, then with the destruction of a particular organ, consciousness would disappear.

[If the soul be an organ of sensation, who] would be proud of caste, beauty, age, character and learning? And who would exert with deeds, mind and speech [to enjoy] the objects [of senses,] such as the sound, etc? (151)

He, (influenced by egoism) doubts whether the consequence of an act (religious or otherwise, Karmaphalam) exists or not; he takes this body as the soul, and considers himself successful, even when [he is] unsuccessful. (152)

He thinks,—“These are my wife, sons and ministers, and I am theirs.” And he has, always, a contrary notion of deeds, leading to his well-being and otherwise. (153)

He does not discriminate between the soul, nature and her productions. He tries to fast, enter into fire and water, and jump down from an elevated place. (154)

A person, thus engaged in improper acts, of uncontrolled mind and attentive to unreal deeds, is fettered by envy, stupefaction and desire [begotten by his deeds]. (155)

The service of the preceptor, consideration of the meaning of the Védās and other Scriptural works, [and] the performance of the rites laid down therein, association with the pious, healthy conversation with the good,

Again, the soul is not transient. If it be so, it cannot preserve the recollection of past deeds, nor can it see dreams. When any external object is perceived, it leaves an impression on the conscious soul. Power of recollection is nothing but knowledge, derived afterwards, from this impression. Again, knowledge of objects, perceived in the waking state, is, during the sleeping state, Sapna or dream. During sleep all the organs lie dormant. If the soul be identical with the organs of sensation dreaming is not possible for it.

avoiding sight and touch of women, regarding all creatures as one's own self, renouncing of what is accepted, wearing on a shattered linen, withholding the senses from their objects, shaking off of lethargy and dormancy, disregarding the impurities of the body and the perception of sinfulness in mental proclivities, non-attachment to rajas and tamas; purification of the mental faculties (by Prāṇāyama, etc.) non-attachment, and the control of the senses;—purified by [all] these expedients and endued with sattwa (harmonizing tendency), one becomes immortal (i.e., acquires emancipation). (156—159)

The yoga (realization of spiritual union between the individual soul and the Divine Soul,) of the good originates from the destruction of action (i.e., of avidyā, nescience, its root), brought about by the meditation of the nature and being of the Real and its adoration and by purified yoga. (160)

He, whose mind, at the time of the destruction of the body, remains centred, in a purified state, on I's'vara, and is shorn of the delusion of mineness, acquires a perfect recollection of pristine deeds [in the next birth.] (161)

As an actor, for exhibiting various characters, paints his body with various colours, so the soul assumes [various] bodies begotten by [multifarious] acts. (162)

The disfigurement of the body and the absence of limbs, that is seen [in an embryo] from its birth, are owing to the defects of time, deed, seed (i.e., father's semen), and of the mother. (163)

The soul is never [renounced] by egoism, the mind the course of events, the consequence of deeds and the corporal frame, before the attainment of emancipation. (164)

As the existence of a light is owing to the union of the wick, lamp and the oil; [and as it is, sometimes,] seen [put out], owing to an adverse event, such as a strong gush of wind)*;—so is the untimely destruction of life. (165)

He, who resides in the heart, has endless rays of variegated colours, such as white, black, twany, blue, reddish, and dark-blue. (166)

Of them one is situated upwards, which piercing the solar disc, runs beyond the region of Brahmā; [with its help, [the individual soul] acquires the most excellent condition (i.e., emancipation.) (167)

By the other century of rays, which are situated upwards, [it] acquires the forms of the [various] Deities together with their respective regions. (168)

The various other mild rays, which are situated downwards, are for reaping the fruits of deeds. By them [the Jīva], having no control over itself, comes to this Samsāra (the world). (169)

[You should] understand [the independent] existence of the soul [and consider it] as the cause of the universe [by the study of] the Védās and the Smṛitis; by discriminative knowledge; birth; death; diseases; movements caused by knowledge and desire; [knowledge of] truth and falsehood; emancipation; happiness and misery; good and evil deeds, evil protends, (such

* The meaning is:—A light continues to burn so long the materials exist, such as the wick, lamp and the oil. But even these materials existing, it is, sometimes, extinguished by an unexpected wind, etc. Similarly, life continues to run on its fixed course, though, sometimes, it is, cut off untimely by an extraordinary calamity as earthquake etc.); an omen presaging good and evil, presented by birds; conjunction of the planets and their effects; the movements of stars and the planets; movements of the limbs, in a waking state, indicating good or evil; those in a dream; by the sky, air, fire, water, earth, darkness, etc.; [change of] cycles, manwan-tarās (periods of Manu); and the effects of Mantrams (mystic syllables) and medicinal herbs. (170—173)

Egoism, the faculty of recollection, intelligence, envy, understanding, happiness, endurance, the perception of one object of sense by another, desire, the holding of body and vital airs, the celestial region (i.e., its enjoyment), dreaming, the engagement of understanding, etc., to their respective actions, mental proclivities, visible manifestation, consciousness, exertion, the acceptance of the five elements in the body,—these are the characteristic marks, seen of the Great Soul. Therefore there exists a soul different from the body. He is omnipresent and I's'vara (Creator.) (174—176)

[The aggregate of] the instruments of sensation with their objects, Manas (the mind or the organ of volition and imagination), the instruments of action, ahankāra (self-consciousness), the intellect, earth and other elements and pradhāna (the universal and the material cause), is called Kshetra (the body, regarded as the field of the working of the soul); the ātman is called Kshetrajña. It is the lord, stationed in all creatures and identical with the existent and the non-existent. (177—178.)

Buddhi or intellect originates from the unmanifest (i.e., Prakṛiti or the material cause). From it originates ahankāra (self-consciousness); from ahankāra the tanmātrās (the five subtile particles perceptible to beings of an higher order, but unapprehended by the grosser senses of mankind), their objects being multiplied by the each succeeding one. Their objects are sound, tangibility, colour, savour and odour. Each [object] disappears [in the] same [element] from which it emanates. (179—180)

Although it is the creator itself, it has been, by me, described before, how the soul creates itself by the influence of actions (sāttvik, rājasik and tāmasik). (181)

Sattwa, rajas and tamas are its guṇās or universal tendencies. Possessed of rajas (self-centering tendency) and tamas (disorganizing tendency), it (the individual soul) comes again and again in this world. (182)

That Great Purusha, [although himself] without any limitation, becomes limited [when he assumes a form]; and with this change, he is described as having his form perceived by the senses. (183)

The intervening space between the sign Aries and the star Canopus is called Pitṛiyāna (or the road of the departed manes); by that the Agnihotriṇās (i.e., those who consecrate and maintain Sacred Fires), desirous of heaven, go to the celestial region. (184)

Those, who practise charities; those, who are properly endued with eightfold accomplishments, (viz., absence of pride, mercy, forgiveness, absence of envy, purity, desire for doing good, liberality and absence of greediness); and those, who practise the vow of truthfulness,—also [proceed to the celestial region] by that road. (185)

Proceeding to the celestial region (dévaloka), through the quarter situate between the constellation Saptarshi (Ursa Major) and Nāgavithi (i.e., the collection of three stars on the south of the Saptarshi) eighty-eight thousand ascetics, leading the domestic mode of life,—who again come to the world,—become the seeds of creation and institute the religion of action. And all those ascetics, avoiding all actions and endued with asceticism, the virtue of celibacy and spiritual knowledge, and disassociated from company, live there till the dissolution of the elements. (186—188)

The Vēdās, the Purāṇās, the auxiliary sciences, the Upanishadas, the S'lokās, the Sūtrās the commentaries and every other [branch of learning], orally proceed from them. (189)

The study of the Vēdās, sacrifice, celibacy, penance, self-control, faith, fasting and control over the senses are the instruments of the knowledge of self. (190)

He (i.e., the self) should be enquired into, seen, meditated on and listened to, by the twice-born living in all the ās'ramās or orders. (191)

Those twice-born ones,—who, resorting to the study of [spiritual science], called āranyaka, and endued with great faith, worship this real self,—know it [truly]. (192)

They gradually approach [the presiding Deities of the] fire, the day, the light half month, the northern solistice, the celestial region and the sun with lightning. (193)

Thereupon the mental Purusha, meeting them, takes them to the Brahma-region, from which there is no return. (194)

Persons,—who have conquered the celestial region by sacrifice, penances and charities,—are born, in order, in [the regions of the presiding Deities of the] smoke, night, dark fortnight, the southern solistice, the region of the departed manes, of the moon, the air, the rain, the water and the earth and return again [to the world]. (195—196)

He, who does not know these two roads of the soul, becomes [in another birth, either] a reptile, a bird, a worm or an insect. (197)

The feet should be placed on the thighs ; [on the right foot] should be placed the left palm, on which is to be spread the right one ; the mouth should be firmly fixed by [the help of] the breast and be raised up a little ; the eyes should be shut up ; [the mind should] be placed in Sattwa (i.e., be shorn of all disturbing tendencies and be steadied ; [the lower row of] the teeth should be touched by [the upper row] ; the tongue should be firmly fixed on the palate ; the mouth should be shut up ; [one] should be perfectly steadied ; the entire number of senses should be withheld [from their objects] : the seat should neither be low nor high ; [one] should practise Prāṇāyāma (suppression of the vital airs) twice or thrice ; thereupon the Lord, who is stationed in the heart like a lamp, should be meditated upon. A wise man, having practised concentration, shall fix the soul in the heart. (198—201)

Disappearance (i.e., assumption of an invisible body) ; recollection [of pristine events] ; physical grace ; vision [of the past, present and unforeseen events] ; knowledge of the ear (i.e., hearing of the past, present and unheard of sound) ; [the power of] entering into another's body, after renouncing one's own body ; the power of creating objects, according to one's own will ;—are the marks of the consummation of yogic power. The renouncement of the body, after the consummation of yoga, leads to immortality. (202—203)

One, who has studied a Vēda, who has renounced his desire, who lives in a forest, who lives on unsolicited food and who is of restricted diet, acquires the highest Siddhi (super-human power).* (204)

One, who acquires wealth by fair means, who is given to spiritual knowledge, who receives guests, who performs S'rāddha and who speaks the truth, even though a householder, is emancipated. (205)

BRAHMANICIDE.]

HAVING visited dreadful hells—the result of heinous crimes [like Brāhmaṇicide, etc.,] persons, perpetrating heinous crimes, are born again [in this world] after the dissipation of Karma. (206)

A person, slaying a Brāhmaṇa, is born in the species of deer, dog, hog or camel. One, drinking spirituous liquor, is born in the species of ass, or amongst Pukkāsa (one begotten by a Chañḍāla on a higher S'ūdra woman), or Veṇa (mixed caste). There is no doubt in it. (207)

One, stealing gold [owned by a Brāhmaṇa] attains to the state of a vermin, insect or bird. The violator of a step-mother or a preceptor's wife, gradually becomes grass, bush or creeper. (208)

[And when they attain to human birth,] the slayer of a Brāhmaṇa [is seen] suffering from consumption; the drinker of spirituous liquor, as having black teeth;

* Supernatural faculties or perfections which are eight in number, namely, animan or the supernatural power of becoming as small as an atom, mahiman or the power of increasing the size of the body at will, laghiman or the power of assuming extreme lightness at will, gariman or the power of making oneself heavy at will, prāpti or the power of obtaining every thing, prākāmya, irresistible will or fiat, i'sitva supremacy, vas'itva subjugation or subduing by magical power.

the stealer of gold, as having bad nails ; and the violator of a preceptor's bed, as having ugly skin [on his organ of generation]. (209)

Of them, one, associating with a particular [sinner], is born with the same marks [on his body] ; one, who steals food, gets weak digestion ; and one, who steals a book or learns a lesson stealthily without the permission of the preceptor, becomes mute. (210)

One, who pilfers corn and mixes a spurious article with it, gets an extra limb ; one, who slanders another, gets a nose emitting bad smell ; the stealer of oil becomes a cockroach ; one, who announces another's shortcomings, gets a mouth emitting foul smell. (211)

One, who seduces another's wife, or one, who robs a Brāhmaṇa's property, becomes a Brahma-Rākshasa in a solitary and dreary forest. (212)

One, who robs another's jewel, is born in a degraded caste ; one, who pilfers a vegetable consisting chiefly of leaves, [is born as] a peacock ; one, who pilfers sweet scents, becomes a musk-rat. (213)

The pilferer of corn [becomes] a mouse ; that of a conveyance, a camel ; that of fruits, a monkey ; that of water, a duck ; that of milk, a crow ; and that of implements for constructing a house, a chātaka bird. (214)

[The pilferer of] honey [becomes] a gadfly ; that of meat, a vulture ; that of a cow, an alligator ; that of fire, a crane ; that of a raiment, [becomes subject to] white leprosy ; that of juice, a dog ; and that of salt, a chiri (a kind of insect). (215)

To show [the result of theft, these instances] have been cited by me. For theft, one is born amongst animals, according to the nature of the article [stolen]. (216)

After reaping the fruits of Karma and being born in the species of birds, when persons, with the cycle of time, are [re-born amongst men], they [become] poor and wretched, shorn of all good marks. (217)

Thereupon, having their sins washed off, the Yogins are born in a great family, gifted with learning and possessed of wealth and grains. (218)

Owing to negligence in the performance of prescribed deeds (duties), perpetration of forbidden works and failure to govern the senses, a person goes to hell. (219)

For purification, therefore, penance should be performed by him in this world. The inner self of such a person, as well as the world, become pleased. (220)

If persons, addicted to sinful deeds, do not expiate and repent for their sins, they go to dreadful and distressing hells. (221)

Those wretches of men,—who, having been visited by sins consequent upon the perpetration of dreadful crimes and minor offences, do not make penances,—go to [hells] Tāmisra, Lohas'anku, Mahāniraya, S'ālmali Rourava, Kutma, Pootimrittika, Kālasutra, Samhāta, Lohitoda, Savisha, Sampratāpana, Mahānaraka, Kākola, Samjivana, Mahāpatha, Avichi, Andhatāmisra, Kumbhipāka, Asipatravana—[these twenty],—and Tāpana, [forming] the twenty-first. (222—225)

Any sin, committed unknowingly, is expiated by penances. But a sin, committed knowingly, [is not expiated by a penance]; but by virtue of a text, [he] can associate with his community. (226)

A destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa, a drunkard, a thief and a violator of a preceptor's bed, as well as those who associate with them, are [all] Mahāpātakaṇs (i.e., perpetrators of heinous crimes. (227)

Vilification of a preceptor, that of the Védās, the destruction of a friend and forgetting what has been studied, should be known [as sins] equal to Bráhmaṇicide. (228)

To eat forbidden food ; to bring a serious, but false, charge against a person, before the king ; to speak falsehood, for establishing the superiority of caste ; and to drink the saliva of a woman in menses ;—[are tantamount to the sin of] drinking spirituous liquors. (229).

To steal a horse, a jewel, a man-servant, or a female-servant, [a piece of] land, cow, or that which has been kept in trust is equal to the stealth of gold. (230)

To know a friend's wife, a maiden, a sister, a woman of a degraded caste, one of the same family or the wives of a son,—is described [as sins equal to that of] violating a preceptor's bed. (231)

A person, knowing [his] father's sister, mother's sister, maternal aunt, daughter-in-law, mother's co-wife, sister, preceptor's daughter, preceptor's wife, and his own daughter, is a gurutalpaga (i.e., a sinner of the worst kind). He should be killed, after having his generative organ cut off. [Similar is the penalty] of a woman who is a willing party. (232—233)

Killing of kine ; non-performance of the principal Saṁskárās or purificatory rites (especially the rite of investiture of the sacred thread) ; theft ; non-satisfaction of debt ; failure to consecrate sacred fires ; selling of forbidden articles ; the marriage or consecration of sacred fire by a younger brother before an elder ; receiving lessons on payment of a fee ; teaching by taking fees ; knowing another's wife ; remaining unmarried while a younger brother is married ; usury ; manufacture of salt ; killing of women, S'údrās, Vaishyās and Kshatriyās ;

sustenance by forbidden means; absence of faith in the existence of God; failure to observe the vow [of celibacy]; selling of children; theft of corns, metal and cattle; officiating as a priest for a person for whom no such rite should be performed; renouncement of father, mother and preceptor; selling of tanks and gardens; accusation of a maiden; performance of religious rite for a younger brother married before an elder; giving away a daughter in marriage to such a person; fraud; breach of vow; cooking for one's ownself; living with a woman, who drinks spirituous liquor [even if she be one's wedded wife]; renunciation of Vedic studies, sacred fires, sons and kinsmen; cutting of a huge tree for making fuel; sustenance by converting one's own wife into a courtesan, as well as by slaying animals, or by giving medicines; handling the instrument for grinding sesame and sugarcane; vices of gambling, hunting, etc.; selling of one's ownself; serving a S'udra; contracting friendship with a degraded person; living with a woman of an inferior caste; failure to live in an a's'rama or order; growing fat on food supplied by another; study of impure works (i.e., such as the philosophy of Chārvāka, etc.); owning mines [by order of the king]; and selling of one's own wife;—all these are Upapātakas or minor sins. (234—242)

By placing the skull [of the Brāhmaṇa, so killed], on his head, or holding it on a flag-staff; by living on alms and proclaiming his sin;—the destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa, [should live] for twelve years on a restricted fare; [and thereafter, he] shall attain purification. (243)

Or by saving a Brāhmaṇa, [from the jaws of a tiger,] or of twelve kine, or by bathing at the end of a Horse-Sacrifice, he may attain purification. (244).

Or when he sees a Brāhmaṇa or a cow, on the roadside, suffering from long-standing and painful diseases, and relieves him or her of the same, a destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa may attain purification. (245)

By restoring the stolen property of a Vipra, or being killed on that account, or on being wounded by weapons [for that purpose], although living, [one] attains purification. (246)

Or he should offer oblations to Fire [in honour of all the parts of] the body, beginning with the hair on the body and ending with marrow, in order, with the Mantrams,—" Lomavya Swahā (i.e., I offer this to the hair, etc.). (247)

Or by being killed in a battle* with his aim well-directed, or being almost dead with strokes and thereafter living, one attains purification. (248)

Or by continually reciting the three Védās with their Samhitās in a forest, or by sojourning to all the opposite streams of the Saraswatī, living [all the while] on a restricted diet, [one is] freed from his sins. (249)

Or by conferring upon a [worthy] person wealth enough [for his life-long maintenance], one attains purification. [The performance of a] Vaiswānara-Sacrifice is laid down in the Smṛitis for the purification of the taker. (250)

The killer of a Kshatriya or a Vais'ya, initiated into the celebration of some sacrifice, shall practise the vow (i.e., penance) of the destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa. The destroyer of a foetus or that of a woman in menses [must perform penance] as laid down for his caste. (251)

* Some Commentators explain it as "giving one's life, for purification in battle on behalf of the King." Others interpret it as "a duel undertaken with an expert archer."

[If a person] comes for killing, but does not kill, him, (i.e., if one strikes a Brāhmaṇa with a weapon, but does not kill him,) he must perform the [usual] penance. [For killing a] Brāhmaṇa, engaged in a sacrifice, he must perform double the penance. (252)

[PENANCE FOR DRINKING SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS.]

A DRINKER of spirituous liquors must seek purification by drinking either wine, water, clarified butter, cow's urine or milk, heated like fire, and meeting with death. (253)

Wearing a woolen garment and matted locks he should perform the penance of Brahmanicide; he should eat, in the night, cakes of sesame seeds or particles of rice for three years. (254)

For drinking wine, seminal-fluid or urine, or eating excreta, unknowingly, the three castes, called the twice-born, must perform the Samśkārās or the purificatory rites. (255)

A Brāhmaṇa-woman, who drinks spirituous liquors, does not go to the region of her husband. She is [re-born], in this world, [either] as a bitch, a female vulture or a she-hog. (256)

[PENANCE RELATING TO THE THEFT OF GOLD.]

A PERSON, stealing gold owned by a Brāhmaṇa, should make over, to the king, a mace, proclaiming his own misdeeds. Killed or saved, [he attains] purification. (257)

By performing the penance [prescribed for] a drinker of spirituous liquors, [he may attain] purification, even without communicating [his sin] to the king. He should give away gold equal to his body [in weight] or what encompasses the gratification of a Brāhmaṇa.* (258)

* This is the penance for stealing gold unknowingly

[PENANCE RELATING TO THE VIOLATION OF A PRECEPTOR'S WIFE OR A STEP-MOTHER.]

[A PERSON, committing such a crime,] should lie down on a red-hot iron bed with a female figure made of iron ; or cutting off his testicles and taking them up, he should renounce his body in the south-western quarter. (259)

A violator, of a preceptor's bed, must perform the most distressing penance of Prajāpatya for a year ; or he should study the Vēda-Samhitā and perform the Chândrāyana for three months. (260)

He, who lives a year in the company of such [sinners] must perform the same [penance]. Fasting [for a day and night before the ceremony] and accepting no present, one may marry a maiden related to these. (261)

[PENANCE FOR ORDINARY SINS.]

FOR slaying all the degraded castes, one must perform the Chândrāyana. Even a S'ūdra, who is not qualified [to study the Vēdās and offer oblations to the Fire], becomes purified [by its performance for the prescribed] time. (262)

Twofold is the sin of a person, who makes a false accusation ; equal is that of his, who speaks of a real charge. For false accusation, one is visited by the sin of the falsely-accused person. (263)

[PENANCE FOR COW-SLAUGHTER.]

THE slayer, of a cow, must drink the Pañchagavya (the five products of the cow taken collectively, i.e., milk, curd, clarified butter, urine and the dung), and remain self-restrained for a month. By sleeping in a cow-shed, by following a cow, and by giving away a cow, he may [also] attain purification. (264)

Or being controlled, he must perform the hardest or the most difficult of penances; or fasting for three nights, he shall give away eleven kine with bulls. (265)

[PENANCE FOR MINOR SINS.]

THE purification, of minor sins, is brought about by the Chāndráyana, or by living simply on water for a month or by the Parāka-Penance. (266)

For killing a Kshatriya, a person shall give away a thousand kine with bulls, or he should perform, for three years, the penance consequent on Brahmanicide. (267)

The slayer, of a Vais'ya, should perform this penance for a year, or he shall give away a century of kine; the slayer, of a S'ūdra, should perform [the penance] for six months [consecutively], or ten kine, he should make a gift of [in its stead] (268)

[PENANCE FOR KILLING WOMEN.]

FOR slaying [unknowingly] an unchaste Brāhmaṇa-, Kshatriya-, Vais'ya-, or a S'ūdra-, woman, one should, in order, make a gift of a vessel made of hide, a bow, a goat and a lamb, for the purification [of his sin]. (269)

For slaying a woman, who has gone a little astray, one should perform the penance consequent on slaying a S'ūdra. [Similar is the penance for killing] a thousand animals having bones, and a cart-load of those having no bones. (270)

For killing a cat, an alligator, a frog, a crow or other birds, [one] should drink milk for three days, or perform the penitential rite of the Pādākrichchha. (271)

[For killing] an elephant, five dark-blue bulls; a parrot, a two years' old calf; an ass, goat or a lamb, a bull; or a Krouñcha-bird, a three years' old calf [should be given to a Brāhmaṇa] (272)

For killing a swan, a vulture, a monkey, beasts living on raw flesh, birds living in water and on land, peacocks, or a Bhāsa (a kind of cock),—one should make a gift of a cow; [for killing] animals not living on flesh, [one shall give away] a calf. (273)

[One shall give away] an iron-rod, [for the destruction] of reptiles; for that of animals having no sex, lead weighing a māsha; for that of a hog, a vessel full of clarified butter; for that of a camel, gold weighing a guṇja ($2\frac{3}{16}$ grains); and for that of a horse, a parrot. (274)

[For the destruction] of Tittiri-birds, [one shall give away] sesame seeds to the weight of one maund and twenty-four seers; if one is incapable of making a gift, as laid down for the destruction of elephant and other [animals], [as mentioned before], one should perform a penitential rite, for the purification of each sin. (275).

For the destruction of insects, sprung into being from fruits, flowers and juices of sugar-cane, etc.;—one should drink clarified butter. Something must be made a gift of, for the destruction of insects having bones, and the Prāṇāyāma [should be performed for that] of those having no bones. (276)

For [uselessly cutting] a shrub or a plant, a bush, a caeper or a huge tree, [one should] recite the Rik (i.e., the sacred verse of the Gāyatrī) for a hundred times. [And for a ruthless] destruction of a medicinal herb, one should live on milk and follow a cow for a day. (277)

An unchaste woman, when bitten by a monkey, ass, camel, crow or by a jackal, by performing the Prāṇāyāma in the water and drinking, clarified butter, attains purification. 278)

[A person,] consecrating, with the Mantrams,—“Yan.mé adya rétas” (that my semen which to-day etc.), the semen dropped without any cohabitation with a woman, and taking it up with the nameless finger, should touch the parts between the two breasts and the two eye-brows. (279)

Having seen his own reflection in the water, he should recite the Mantrams,—“Mayi téja iti.” Seeing unholy objects, displaying fickleness of limbs, etc., or speaking falsehood, [he should recite] the Sāvitri (Gāyatri). (280)

For knowing a woman, a Brahmachārin becomes Avakirni (i.e., a religious student who has committed an act of incontinence): [and] by sacrificing an ass in honour of the Naiḥṛiti Deity, he attains purification. (281)

If without being disabled [a Brahmachārin] discontinues the practice of begging alms and adoring the Sacred Fire for seven nights [consecutively], he should offer two oblations to the Fire with the Mantrams, “Kāmāvakirṇa, etc.” (282)

He should, then, worship the Sacred Fire with (the Mantram,—) “Samasinchatu, etc.” [Drinking] honey or eating [interdicted] meat, [he should perform] the most difficult penance [of Prajāpatya] and other penitential rites in the end. (283)

For disregarding the injunctions of the preceptor, purification is attained by gratifying him [again]. If he (i.e., the religious student) dies while sent out, on business, to some other place, the preceptor should perform three distressing penances. (284)

There is no sin, if a Brāhmaṇa meets with his death while doing good to him, (i.e., a parson), while cows and bulls are in danger, while administering medicine, or while worshipping the Sacred Fire. (285)

He, who falsely attributes [the commission of] heinous and minor crimes to another person, should spend a month, having controlled his senses, living on water and reciting [the purifying Mantram]. (286)

The person, falsely accused, must perform a difficult penance, [and] offer, in a sacrifice, a cake to the Deity of Fire or an animal to the Wind-God. (287)

For knowing an elder brother's wife, without being appointed, a person should perform [the penitential rite of] the Chāndrāyana. For knowing his wife during her menstrual period, [a person] attains purification by drinking clarified butter after the expiration of three nights. (288)

For performing any religious rite for a person belonging to any of the three higher castes, who has been out-casted for the non-performance of purificatory rites or for the employment of spells for malevolent purposes, one should perform three most painful penances. One, desecrating the Védās; or one, renouncing a person, who seeks refuge with him ;—should live, for a year, on barley-cakes. (289)

A Brahmachārin, who lives in a cow-pen, shall live on water and recite the Gāyatrī for a month. [Similarly one is, also,] freed [from the sin of] accepting presents from a degraded person. (290)

One, who rides a conveyance, drawn by an ass or a camel; one, who bathes or eats in a state of nudity; and one, cohabiting with a woman in the day-time ;—should bathe in the water and then perform the Prāṇāyama (291)

For thou-theeing an elder or treating him haughtily with the exclamation of Hum, for defeating a Brāhmaṇa with words or tying him quickly with a cloth, one should gratify them and fast for a day. (292)

One should perform a painful penance for raising up a rod [for striking] a Brāhmaṇa; for striking him therewith, a more painful one; for causing bloodshed, a most painful one; and for [striking a blow which] makes the blood congealed within, the painful penance (of Prajāpatya). (293)

By carefully taking into account time [and] place, age and ability [of the perpetrator and the nature of] the crime, [one should] lay down the penitential rite. The rite, for getting freedom from sins not mentioned there, (i.e., in the Law-Books), should, also, be pointed out]. (294)

[If a person refuses to perform any penance,] his own kinsmen should make the female-servant, of such an outcaste, carry his water-vessel [filled with water] to the outskirts of the village and ostracise him from all works (social and religious). (295)

If he returns after performing the penance, [they] should throw a new pitcher [into a tank], accuse him no longer and associate him [thenceforth] in all works. (296)

This law has, also, been laid down for outcasted women; but accommodation near the dwelling-house, food, raiment and protection, should be given [to her]. (297)

Cohabitation with a person of an inferior caste, destruction of the foetus and slaying the husband, require, forsooth, special ostracism for women. (298)

One should never live with those who kill persons seeking refuge with them, boys and women as well as with those who are ungrateful, even if they have performed penances. (299)

After the pitcher has been thrown, [the person who has performed the penance,] being surrounded by his kinsmen, should, first of all, offer barley-cakes to the kine; [his kinsmen,] after he has been honoured by the kine, should welcome him, [by taking the food offered by him]. (300)

One, whose crime has been made public, should perform a penance laid down by the *Parishad (assembly of learned men). One, whose crime has not been made known, should perform a secret penance. (301)

[REGULATIONS RELATING TO SECRET PENANCE.]

THE slayer, of a Brahmaṇa, should fast for three nights and recite, in the water, the Aghamarshana Sūkta; [and] thereafter, making a gift of a milch-cow, he attains purification. (302)

Or living on air during the day and spending [the night] in the water, he should offer forty oblations of clarified butter to the Fire with the Mantram,—Lomayya Swāhā." (303)

Fasting three nights and reciting the Kushmandi-Rik.—"Yaddevā devahedanam") [and offering oblations of] clarified butter, the drinker of spirituous liquors [attains] purification; and a stealer of gold, by reciting the Rudra-Mantram, being stationed in water. (304)

* Parishad, or the assembly of learned men, must, at least, contain ten persons, viz. one proficient in the Rig-Vēda; one, in the Yajusha; one, in the Sāma-Vēda; one, in the Purva, and Uttara-, Mīmāṃsās; one learned in the Nyāya; one, in the Nirukta; and one, in the Dharma-Sāstrās; and three persons from the three A's'trams.

The violator of a preceptor's bed, is freed [from sin] by reciting the Sahasraś'irsha-Mantram (the Purūsha Sūkta). After the termination of the proper rite, a milch-cow should be presented by each of them (i.e., by the sinning parties). (305)

For the purification of all crimes, and minor sins, and of those which outcaste a person and those which have not been mentioned, the prāṇāyama should be performed a hundred times. (306)

By taking [unconsciously] semen, excreta or urine, the foremost of a twice-born one should drink the purifying Soma-Juice consecrated with Om. (307)

Whatever sin is unconsciously accumulated during the day or night is all dissipated by reciting the Sandhyā-Mantrams at the three periods [of conjunction]. (308)

The recitation of the Sukriya-Mantram,—"Vis'vāni dēva Savitas," of the A'ranyaka, [and] specially of the Gāyatrī of the hymn addressed to the eleven Rudras, purify all sins. (309)

A twice-born one should recite the Gāyatrī and offer oblations of sésame in all those matters wherein he considers himself sullied with sins. (310)

Neither these [minor] sins, nor those resulting from [the perpetration of] heinous crimes touch a person, who is given to the study and teaching of the Védās, endued with forgiveness and devoted to the performance of rites relating to great sacrifices. (311)

By living on air during the day, remaining within water during the night, and reciting the Gāyatrī a thousand times after sunrise, one is freed from all sins—except that of the Brahmanicide. (312)

[THE OBSERVANCES RELATING TO YAMA AND NIYAMA.]

CELIBACY, mercy, forgiveness, charity, truthfulness open-mindedness, abstention from injury, faith, sweetness of temper and restraint of the external senses are known as Yamas. (313)

Bathing, silence, fasting, celebration of sacrifices, Vedic study, control of the generative organ, service of the preceptor, purity, absence of anger and vigilance are called Niyamās (or self-imposed religious observances). (314)

[THE VARIOUS VRATAS, OR RELIGIOUS OBSERVANCES.]

AFTER having drunk cow's urine, cowdung, thickened milk, curd, clarified butter and Kus'a-Water, one should fast the next day and thus practise the most painful rite of Sāntapana. (315)

Taking each of the articles necessary for Sāntapana for six days, one should fast on the seventh day. This is called the penitential rite of Mahāsāntapana. (316)

To drink, every day each, of the extracts of Palāśa-, Udumvara-, Lotus [and] Bel-, Leaves, and Kusa- Water is called Parṇakṛichchha (the penitential rite of taking leaves) (317)

One should drink, severally, every day, hot milk, hot ghee and hot water [for three days] and then fast for one night [on the fourth day]. This is called Taptakṛichchha (the penitential rite of taking hot articles). (318).

[The penitential rite that is performed) by taking one meal in a day for one day, one meal in the night for one day, unsolicited food for one day and by fasting for another day, is called Pādakṛichchha. (319).

[When this penitential rite is rendered] threefold by any means, whatsoever, it is called Prajāpatya. This penance, which is performed by taking rice filling up the palms, is the most difficult and distressing one. (320)

[The penance of] Kṛichchhâtikṛichchha i.e., the most painful of, painful) [is performed] by living on milk for twenty-one days. [The one performed] by fasting for twelve days is called Parāka. (321).

To eat or drink, every day, severally, saffron, foam of boiled water, butter milk, water and barley-meal and then to fast for one night, is called Soumya-kṛichchha. (322)

One should take each of these articles (mentioned above i.e., saffron etc.), in order, for three nights. [This penitential rite,] extending over fifteen days, is known as Tulāpurusha. (323)

In the light half-month, one should increase the [number of the] balls of cooked rice, each being of the size of the egg of a pea-hen, with the day, and decrease the same in the dark fortnight, while performing the Chandrāyana. (324)

Or one should somehow eat two hundred and forty balls in the course of a month. This is another mode of Chandrāyana. (325)

Bathing thrice-a-day, one should perform the Prajāpatya and other difficult penances, as well as the Chandrāyana. He should recite the purifying Mantrams and consecrate the balls with the Gāyatrī. (326)

The purification, of sins for which no penance has been laid down, is effected by the Chandrāyana. He, who performs it for religious purposes, attains the lunar region. (327)

He, who, wishing for virtue and being restrained performs the most difficult penances, comes by great prosperity, and reaps the fruits of great sacrifices. (328)

Hearing of these religious duties described by Yājñawalkya, the Rishis said that to that foremost of Yogins, of incomparable energy. (329)

Those who, shorn of idleness, will preserve this Religious Code, will acquire fame in this world and repair to the celestial region [in after life]. (330)

One, seeking learning, attains the same ; one, wishing for wealth, gets it ; one, longing for longevity, becomes possessed of the same ; and one, hankering after prosperity, gets the same. (331)

The departed manes, of the person, who will, on the occasion of a S'rāddha, make others listen to, at least, three couplets [of this Code], will, forsooth, attain to unending gratification. (332)

By following this Religious Code, a Brāhmaṇa becomes a worthy person ; a Kshatriya, virtuous ; and a Vais'ya, possessed of wealth and corns. (333)

He, who will make the twice-born listen to it on every Parva-day, will reap the fruits of a Horse-Sacrifice. Do thou accede to this our request. (334)

Hearing the speech of the ascetics and being delighted, Yājñawalkya, too, saluting the Self-sprung Brahma, said " so be it." (335)

Here ends the Third Chapter, dealing with Penances in the Yājñawalkya Samhitā.

A PREFATORY NOTE ON HA'RITA SAMHITA'.

HA'RITA originally wrote his Law-Treatise in Prose. But the original work is not available and the one, now extant, is a metrical abridgment of the same. The metrical work is also regarded by the Hindus as an authority on Achâra or duties in general. What is popularly called positive law is not to be found in this Treatise. The work consists of Seven Chapters and contains a hundred and ninety-four S'lokas or couplets.

The king Amvarisha asks the Rishi Mârkandeya about the duties of various castes and orders. In reply to his question the Rishi describes the conversation that took place between Hârita and the Rishis in days of yore.

It is evident from this statement occurring at the commencement of the book that Hârita delivered his discourse on Law in Prose and the Rishi Mârkandeya subsequently put the substance in verse. The work, that passes under the appellation of Hârita Samhita, is really a treatise written in verse by Mârkandeya embodying the substance of the original exposition of Hârita.

HA'RITA SAMHITA'.

THE DUTIES OF BRA'HMANA.

[THE KING AMBARISHA PUTS THE QUESTION TO THE RISHI
MA'RKANDEYA.]

IT has, before, been said by thee that the foremost of the twice-born ones,—residing on the earth, the atmospheric and the celestial regions, performing the duties laid down [in the ordinances] for the various castes and orders,—are [said to be] devoted to Kes'ava. (1)

O foremost of the good, do thou describe unto us the duties of castes and orders by which the eternal Deity Nara-Simha (Man-Lion) is gratified. (2)

MA'RKANDEYA said :—I shall here recount the ancient and the most excellent conversation that took place between the high-souled Hârîta and the Rishis. (3)

Having saluted Hârîta, conversant with all forms of religion and effulgent like fire, all the ascetics, desirous of questioning about religion, said : (4)

“O thou endued with lordly powers, O thou conversant with all [forms of] religion and the institutor of all religions, do thou, O son of Bhrigu, describe unto us the duties of various castes and orders. (5)

O thou endued with lordly powers, do thou describe unto us, in brief, the Yoga-S'âstra and every thing else that goes to create firm faith in Vishnu Thou art our great preceptor.” (6)

Having been thus accosted by them, the ascetic Hārīta said to them:—Hear, O ye all ascetics, I shall describe the eternal duties. (7)

O foremost! ones, by following the duties of castes and orders, as well as [the precepts of] the Yoga-S'āstra, a mortal is freed from the fetters of birth and Saṁsāra (mundane existence.) (8)

Formerly (i.e., before the creation) the Divine Creator of the Universe, the Great Soul [Vishṇu], was laying asleep with [his Consort] S'ree (the Goddess of Prosperity) on a bed of serpent in water. (9)

From the navel of that Deity, lying asleep, originated a huge Lotus. Within that Lotus sprang into existence Brahmā having the Védās and the Védāṅgās for his ornaments. (10)

He (i.e., Brahmā) was, again and again, asked by the god of gods, saying,—“Create the universe.” He, too, having created the entire universe consisting of the Celestials, Asurās and the human beings, brought out from his mouth the sinless Brāhmaṇās for successfully performing sacrifices; the Kshatriyās, from his arms; and the Vais'yās, from his thighs. (11—12)

Hear, O ye foremost of the twice-born, I shall describe the words,—capable of giving wealth, fame, long life, the celestial region and the fruit of emancipation,—which the Divine Grand Father Brahmā addressed to them all, in order of succession, after having created the S'ūdrās. (13—14)

Those begotten by the Brāhmaṇās on Brāhmaṇa-women are known in the Smṛitis as the Brāhmaṇās. I shall describe their duties and the country worthy of being inhabited by them. (15)

O ye foremost of the twice-born, [a Brāhmaṇa] should live in a country where the antelope moves about freely by nature, [for there only] religious practices become successful. (16)

Sixfold works have been laid down for a high-souled Brāhmaṇa. He, who always lives with them (i.e., performs them) attains to happiness. (17)

Teaching, religious study, officiating as a priest at sacrifices, celebrating sacrifices, making gifts, and accepting gifts are mentioned as the sixfold duties of a Brāhmaṇa. (18)

Teaching is threefold, [namely,] for virtue or wealth, and service is described as the third [object.] (19)

In the absence, of at least one, of these works, a Brāhmaṇa becomes a Vṛishāchāra, (i.e., one acting like a bull). Learning should not be bestowed, by a person, on him who seeks [only] his [own] advancement. (20)

One should teach a worthy disciple and discard an unworthy one. For successfully performing a religious rite, one should accept a gift from a householder who is known as being freed from sins. (21)

One should, in a purified place, daily attentively study any Vēda. Dharma-Sāstrās should be [similarly] studied by the pure-minded Brāhmaṇās. (22)

They should be daily and nightly studied and listened to like the Vēdās. To make a gift and offer food unto a Brāhmaṇa who is ignorant of the S'ruti and the Smṛiti, encompasses the destruction of the giver's family. Therefore a Brāhmaṇa, with all care, should study the Dharma-Sāstrās. (23—24)

The S'ruti and the Smṛiti are the two eyes of the Brāhmaṇās created by God. If deprived [of the knowledge] of the one, [a person] is called one-eyed; and if of the two, a blind. (25)

A good Brāhmaṇa should zealously attend upon his preceptor and worship the Vivāha-Fire, morning and evening. (26)

Having bathed properly, he should offer, every day, oblations to the Vishwadēvās, and adore the in-coming guests, to the best of his power, and without any distinction. (27)

A person, leading the domestic mode of life, who is always devoted to his wife, and shuns other peoples' wives, should, also, adore other in-coming Brāhmaṇa-guests to the best of his power. (28)

An intelligent person should take his meal in the evening, after having performed the Homa. He should be truthful, have control over his passion, and never fix his mind on irreligion. (29)

Having undertaken the performance of his own duty, he should not neglect it from carelessness. He should always speak truthful words conducive to the well-being of all and in the next world. (30)

This is the duty of a Brāhmaṇa described in brief. He, who performs this duty, attains to the station of Brahman, (i.e., emancipation). (31)

O ye foremost of the Brāhmaṇās, as accosted by you, thus the Code of Religious Regulations, which dissipates the entire multitude of sins, has been described by me. Hear, I shall now describe the duties of the Kshatriyds and severally of other castes. (32)

CHAPTER II.

[THE DUTIES OF THE KSHATRIYA'S, VAISHYA'S AND S'UDRA'S]

I SHALL describe, in order, from the beginning to the end, [the duties of] the Kshatriyas and others, by following which regulations all come by most excellent condition. (1)

When placed in [charge of] a kingdom, a Kshatriya should protect his subjects righteously, be devoted to study, and should duly celebrate sacrifices. (2)

A king, endued with a righteous understanding, should always make gifts unto the twice-born, (i.e., the Bráhmaṇás), be always devoted unto his own wife and take a sixth part [of the income of his subjects as revenue.] (3)

He should be proficient in the Laws of Polity, well-informed in the true spirit of making peace and dissension, devoted to the Deities and the Bráhmaṇás, and be intent on performing rites for the Pitris (the departed manes). (4)

He should perform sacrifices righteously and shun irreligious works. By acting thus a Kshatriya attains to the most excellent condition [in after life]. (5)

A Vaishya should duly tend cattle, drive trade and agriculture, make charities and feed the Bráhmaṇás according to his power. (6)

He should be shorn of pride and stupefaction, [and] even by words he should not injure others, be devoted to his own wife and self-restrained, and avoid other people's wives. (7)

Having fed with his money, the Bráhmaṇás, and the priests at the time of sacrifice, he should live, without lording over, in religious matters till the fall of his body (i.e., till his death) (8)

He should zealously celebrate sacrifices, study religious books, make charities, perform the rite for the Pitris and worship the Man-Lion, (i.e., Vishnu.) (9)

This is the duty of a Vaishya. He, who follows the duty of his own caste, and acts thus, forsooth, repairs to the celestial region. (10)

A S'ūdra should, with care, serve the three Varnas and particularly act like a servant unto the Brāhmaṇas. (11)

He should make gifts without being solicited, earn his livelihood by hardship, and zealously worship the Deity according to the rules of Pāka-Yajña, (a simple or domestic sacrifice). (12)

Furthermore he should adore the S'ūdras, who wend righteous and just ways. He should put on a tattered cloth, eat the remnant of a Brāhmaṇa's food, find pleasure only in his own wife and avoid another's wife. (13)

A S'ūdra should always do this with his mind, words and deeds. Having performed righteous deeds and having his sins dissipated [thereby], he attains to the dignity of Indra. (14)

The duties of the various Varnas have, thus, been described by me, as they formerly emitted from the mouth of Brahmā. O ye lords of ascetics, listen now to the duties of the first A's'rama (i.e., the order of religious students) as I go on narrating them one after the other. (15)

CHAPTER III.

[BRAHMACHARYYA, OR RELIGIOUS STUDENTSHIP.]

HAVING been invested with the sacred thread, a person (i.e., one of the three castes) should live in the family of his preceptor and do good unto it by deeds, mind and words. (1)

[He should] lead a life of celibacy, sleep on [the bare] earth, adore the Fire, and offer, unto his preceptor, pitchers full of water, sacrificial fuels and go-ghrāsha (i.e., morsels of grass for his cow). (2)

A Brahmachārin should study [the Védas] with propriety without which he does not attain the fruit of Vedic studies. (3)

A wicked-souled person, divorced from regulations, even when he performs righteous deeds, disregarding the proper rules, does not attain the fruits thereof. (4)

Therefore for attaining success in his Vedic study, he should perform the rites laid down in the Védas. He should learn, from his preceptor, the many and varied rules [for attaining] purification. (5)

Being careful and attentive, a Brahmachārin should use a deer-skin [for his waist cloth] a piece of wood for cleansing the teeth, mekhalā, (i.e., the triple girdle worn by the first three castes), and the sacrificial thread. (6)

For procuring food, he should, having restrained his senses, beg alms in the morning and evening. Rinsing his mouth carefully every day, he should not cleanse his teeth.* (7)

* I.e., He should not rub his teeth with wood, after having rinsed his mouth at the time of bathing.

He should renounce umbrella, shoes, scents and garlands ; and must, also, abstain from dancing and singing, useless conversation and sexual intercourse. 8)

Having restrained his senses, he should abstain from riding on elephants and horses. Observing his vow, a Brahmachārin should perform his evening adoration. (9)

After the termination of the evening adoration, he should salute the feet of his preceptor and reverentially meditate upon his parents (i.e., adore them mentally). (10)

These three (i.e., the preceptor, the father and the mother) being lost (becoming displeased), all the Deities are displeased. Shorn of pride a Brahmachārin should abide by the commands of all these. (11)

Having studied either the one, two or the three Vēdas from the preceptor, he should make the usual present to him, and then being self-controlled, [he should] live in his village. (12)

A Brāhmṇa, whose tongue, generative organ, belly and hands, have all been controlled, should, resorting to Sannyāsa (renunciation), lead a celibate life near the same preceptor, as long as he lives ; in his absence, near his (preceptor's) son ; [in the latter's absence,] near his disciple or in his family. Neither marriage nor [absolute] renunciation is laid down for the Naishthika.* (13—14)

A Brahmachārin, of firm vows, who, carefully following this regulation, renounces his body, is not born again in this world. (15)

* A perpetual religious student, who continues with his spiritual preceptor even after the prescribed period, and vows life-long abstinence and chastity.

A Brahmachārin, who, being self-controlled and devoted to the service of his preceptor, moves about on this earth, acquires an auspicious learning, so difficult of attainment, and comes by its fruit (i.e., virtue, worldly profit, desire and emancipation) so easily attainable [by such a person]. (16)

CHAPTER IV.

[GA'RHASTYA, OR THE DOMESTIC MODE OF LIFE.]

AFTER having completed his Védic studies and being acquainted with the true import of Dharma-Sāstras, a person should wed a maiden of a different family, having a brother, endued with auspicious marks, perfect limbs and a good character. That foremost of the twice-born must do so according to the most excellent rite of Brāhma. (1—2)

Various other forms of marriage, according to caste and order, have been spoken of. Having duly collected sacrificial fuels, the foremost of the twice-born, being all the while wide awake, should offer oblations [to the Fire] in the morning and evening. Thereupon [he] should daily bathe after having previously cleansed his teeth. (3—4)

Having got up from bed at dawn he should duly perform [all] the purifying operations. The mouth remaining stale (i.e., not washed) every day, a person loses control over his own self. (5)

Therefore one should eat (use) a piece of wood, dry or wet, for cleansing the teeth. Karanja,* Khadira, Kadamva, Kurava, Saptaparni, Prisṇiparni, Jāmva,

* Name of a tree used in medicinal preparations.

Apāmārga, Vilwa, Arka, Udumvara,—these are mentioned as the most suitable woods in the operation of tooth rubbing. Thus is described, in brief, the wood which should be used for rubbing the tooth. (6—8)

All thorny woods yield virtue ; and milky ones, fame. It is said that the wood, for rubbing the tooth, should be of the measure of eight fingers. Or it should be of the size of a span, measured from the tip of the thumb to that of the forefinger. With such [a piece of wood], one should cleanse one's teeth. (9)

If the teeth are touched with a twig on the first day of a lunar fortnight, the fifteenth day of the dark fortnight, the fullmoon day, the sixth and the ninth lunar day, one's seven generations are consumed. (10)

On the interdicted days, the mouth should be rinsed with twelve handfuls of water instead of a twig. (11)

Having rinsed the mouth, as laid down in the Mantram, one should again rinse it. Then sprinkling one's own self with water, as described in the Mantram, one should throw palmfuls of water. (12)

By virtue of the boon conferred by Brahmā, whose birth is not known, the Rākshasās Māndeha fight every morning with the Sun. (13)

The handfuls of water, thrown by the Brāhmaṇās and inspired with the mystic verse Gāyatrī, destroy all the Rākshasās passing under the appellation of Māndeha. (14)

Thereupon protected by the Brāhmaṇās, the Sun proceeds along with the Yogins headed by the great Marichi and Sanaka. (15)

Therefore one should not studiously neglect the morning and evening adorations. One, who neglects

he came out of stupefaction, forsooth, goes to [the infernal region of] hell. (16)

Having rinsed one's mouth, sprinkled one's own self with water, according to the Mantram, and offered handfuls of water in honour of the Sun, one should perform the rite of circumambulation and then purify one's self by touching water. (17)

Even when the stars are visible, one should duly perform the first Sandhyā adoration and recite the Gāyatrī till the Sun is not seen. (18)

Then having duly performed the evening Sandhyā, even when the Sun remains visible, one should recite the Gāyatrī till the stars are not seen. (19)

Thereupon reaching the house and performing the Homa, a learned and sage person should think of measures for supporting those who depend on him. (20)

Thereupon, for the behoof of his disciples, he should conduct Vedic studies for a little while; then a good Brāhmaṇa should approach his king for business. (21)

Then repairing to a distant place, he should fetch Kus'a, flowers and sacrificial fuels. Then he should perform the midday adoration at a holy and charming place. (22)

I shall [now] describe, in brief, the regulations, destructive of sins, [of that form of bath] by bathing according to which, one is freed from all sins. (23)

Having brought, for bathing, earth, together with pure rice and sesame, one should then, with a careful mind, go to a river having profuse pure water. (24)

A river existing, one should not bathe in another water. One should not bathe in little water while there exists a profusion of it. (25)

The water of a river is the best. One should bathe in the river, standing against the current. In its absence, one should bathe in a tank or in other pools. (26)

Sprinkling a pure spot with water, one should place one's all clothes there. Then carefully washing one's own body, one should rub it with earth and water. (27)

Just before bathing, a learned person should rinse his mouth. Then entering into water, controlling his speech duly, and mentally thinking of Hari, he should immerse himself in thigh-deep water. (28)

Then returning to the bank and rinsing his mouth according to the Mantram, he should sprinkle his body with water [reciting] the Varuṇa-Mantram and the Pavamani Rik. (29)

Then having carefully sprinkled his own body, with the water taken by the tips of Kus'a-grass, [and reciting the Mantram,—] "Syona prithivī," the twice-born should rub it [his body] with earth [reciting the Mantram,—] "Idam Viṣṇu" (30)

Then, when immersing in water again, he should meditate on the divine Nārāyaṇa. Then entering into water properly, he should recite [the Mantram,—] "Aghamarshaṇam." (31)

Having bathed, he should offer, as usual, oblations, of water with rice and sesame, to the celestial saints and the departed manes; then pressing out water [from his cloth] and reaching the bank, being self-controlled, he should put on two pieces of white cloth and Uttariya (cloth to cover the body). He should not shake his hairs. 32—33)

A dark-blue or a blue cloth is not preferable. A learned person should always avoid a dirty cloth [and one] that does not emit a good smell (34)

Thereupon a learned person should wash his feet with clay water. Then, again converting the right palm into the shape of a cow's ear, he should see the water inside, drink it thrice and rinse the mouth twice therewith. Then sprinkling his head and feet with water, he should touch his mouth with three fingers. (35—36)

With the thumb and nameless finger, he should touch the two eyes. Then being self-restrained, he should touch his head with five fingers. (37).

Having rinsed his mouth, according to this regulation, a pure-minded Brāhmaṇa, shorn of idleness, should, with Kuśa in hands and his face directed towards the east or the north, perform the Prāṇāyāma thrice, and thereafter perform the sacrifice of the recitation of the Gāyatrī, the mother of the Vēdas. (38—39)

There are three kinds of Ṣapa-Yajña; understand their secret meaning. Vāchika, Upāms'u and Mānasa are the three forms. (40)

Of these three forms of Yajña, each succeeding one is superior to the preceding one. (41)

What is performed by reciting the Mantrams, the various parts and letters being distinctly sounded either high or low, is called Vāchika Ṣapa-Yajña. (42)

That, in which the Mantrams are recited slowly, the lips quiver a little, and the sound becomes audible to a slight extent, is known as Upāms'u-Ṣapa. (43)

That, in which the words and letters [of the Mantrams] are comprehensible by the intellect, [though the words and letters are not audible, and the meaning of the words is meditated on, is called Mānasa. (44)

Being daily lauded with the recitation, the Deities become propitiated. They being pleased, the sages acquire a large family. (45)

When the recitation is performed, the Rākshasās, Pis'āchās, and the dreadful huge serpents do not come near but fly away from a distance. (46)

Knowing the metre and the Rishi (saintly author), one should zealously recite the Mantrams. And knowing their meaning, a twice-born one should mentally recite the Gāyatrī, day and night. (47)

He,—who daily recites the Divine Gāyatrī, the highest [form of recitation] being a thousand times; the middling, a hundred times; and the lowest, ten times;—is not sullied by sin. (48)

Then offering, with upraised arms, handfuls of flowers to the Sun, he should recite the Sūkta,—Udu-tyan etc., and then Tatachakshu 49

Performing the rite of circumambulation and covering [his face] with hands, a twice-born one should bow unto the Sun and then propitiate the other Deities with the Tirtha-Water. (50)

Then pressing water out of the cloth with which he had bathed, he should rinse his mouth again. Bathing and making gift by a devout follower has been described here like that (i.e., they should be accompanied with the rinsing of mouth.) (51)

Seated on Kus'ā-grass, with Kus'ā-grass in hands and with his face directed towards the east, a person should reverentially perform Brahma-Yajña, according to the rites thereof. (52)

Thereupon having got up and placed his joined hands on his head, he should, reciting the Rik,—S'uchishadi, offer Arghya of sesame, flowers and rice to the Sun. (53)

Thereupon having saluted the Sun-God he should again return to his house. And, going there, he should adore Vishṇu, according to the rite laid down in the Purusha-Sūkta. (54)

Thereafter he should offer Vali (offerings of food) to the Vis'wadevās according to the rite thereof. A householder should wait for a guest till the hour of milching the cow. (55)

If a guest, not seen or known before, comes, he should, rising up, adore him with a welcome, offer of water and a seat. (56)

[On a guest] being welcomed, the Fires of a householder become gratified. On a seat being offered, the King of the Celestials becomes pleased. (57)

Water, for washing the feet, being offered, the departed manes attain to gratification which it is so difficult to secure. On food being offered, Prajâpati is pleased. (58)

Therefore, after the adoration of Vishṇu, the guests should be daily worshipped by a householder with respect and according to his might. (59)

He should give unto the beggars and the mendicant Brahmacharins alms consisting of undedicated curry and rice. (60)

If a mendicant arrives at a house before food is offered to the Vis'wadevās, then keeping a part thereof for them, one should dismiss him by giving him alms. (61)

A mendicant, being fed, can remove the mischief done by the Vis'wadevās. But the Vis'wadevās can never remove the mischief done by the mendicants. (62)

Therefore when Yatins arrive at a house, one should respectfully offer them alms, for he should think without a shadow of doubt that Vishṇu is himself a Yatin. (63)

After having fed well-dressed maidens, aged persons and children, a householder should then take his meal. (64)

With his face directed either towards the east or the north, abstaining entirely from speaking or controlling his speech, he should, with a delighted heart, salute the boiled rice in the beginning. (65)

Then offering oblations to the vital airs with different Māntrams, he should, being self-restrained, take sweet food. (66)

Then rinsing his mouth and remembering his Tutelary Deity, he should touch his belly. Then a wise person should spend his time in the study of history and the Purāṇās. (67)

Then going out, he should duly perform the evening adoration. Then performing the Homa and feeding the guests, he should take his meal in the night. (68)

Eating in the morning and evening has been sanctioned by the S'ruti for the twice-born. But they cannot take any intermediate meal. The rule for the Agni-hotrins is [to take meals only in] the evening. (69)

A Brāhmaṇa should teach his disciples but dismiss them on those days on which no religious studies are to be prosecuted. All the days mentioned in the Smṛitis and the Purāṇās [are to be accepted]. (70)

On the Mahānavamī (the ninth day in the bright half of the month of A's'vin, sacred to the worship of Durgā), the twelfth day of the fortnight, Bharaṇi, the Parvā-days (Fullmoon, and the last day of the dark fortnight, and the third day of the bright half of Vaiśākha, a Brāhmaṇa should not teach his disciples. (71)

On the seventh day of the fortnight in the month of Magha, on Rathya Saptamī, while rubbing oil, and at the time of bathing, one should avoid teaching. (72)

Seeing a dead body carried or placed on earth and hearing the sound of weeping in the evening, the foremost of the twice-born should not study [the Védās]. (73)

O ye the leading twice-born ones, charities must be made by a householder—the gift of gold, cow and earth. (74)

This is the essence of the duties of a householder described [by me]. He, who satisfies them with reverence, attains to the dignity of Brahma. (75)

By the favour of the Man-Lion, he acquires the most excellent knowledge. And, by it, a Brāhmaṇa attains emancipation, O ye twice-born ones. (76)

O ye Viprās, thus the eternal Code of Duties has been described, in brief by me, to you. If a householder carefully performs the duties laid down for the domestic mode of life, he becomes united with [the God] Hari (77)

CHAPTER V.

[THE DUTIES OF THE VA'NAPRASTHA MODE OF LIFE.]

O YE great and most excellent Rishis, hear, I shall, hereafter, describe the duties of a Vānaprastha or a hermit. (1)

Having seen sons and grandsons and his hairs grow grey, a householder, consigning the care of his wife to his sons or with her, should enter into a forest. (2)

Having nails, hairs of the body and white skin covering the body, a hermit, living in a forest, should duly offer oblations to Fire. (3)

He should carefully daily offer oblations with paddy grown in the forest, unimpeachable rice growing without cultivation, leaves, roots and fruits. (4)

Having bathed thrice, he should practise austere penances. Either after a fortnight or a month, he should take his meals, cooking the food himself. (5)

Or he should take his meals at the fourth, eighth, or the sixth, period;* or he should sustain himself with air. (6)

Stationed in the midst of five fires in the summer, living without shelter in the rainy season and remaining inside the water in the dewy season, he should spend his time practising penances. (7)

That person of well-formed religious understanding, who performs these rites in order, shall, taking his own Fire, repair to the northern quarter. (8)

An ascetic, going to a forest, who, abstaining from speech, meditates on Brahman—who is beyond the ken of senses—till the destruction of his body, becomes glorified in the region of Brahmā. (9)

He,—who, living in a forest and being endued with mental abstraction and self-restraint, practises penances,—goes, freed from sins, purified and endued with a quiet mind, to the ancient, divine Purusha. (10)

* The fourth period is the evening of the second day, after fasting for a day; the eighth period is the evening of the fourth day, after fasting for three days; and so forth.

CHAPTER VI.

[THE DUTIES OF THE FOURTH ORDER, SANNYA'SA.]

I SHALL, hereafter, describe the most excellent fourth A's'rama or order, by following which with reverence, one is released from the fetters [of worldly existence]. (1)

Living in the Vânaprastha A's'rama as mentioned before and dissipating all his sins, a twice-born one should enter upon the fourth order according to the rules of Sannyâsa (renunciation). (2)

Having carefully made gifts unto the departed manes, the celestials and the human beings, performed S'râddha for the departed manes and the human relations and performed the funeral rites of his own self, and taking the Sacred Fire with his own self, one, knowing the Mantram, should again enter upon the life of mendicancy. (3—4)

Since then he should desist from cherishing attachment for sons and conversing with them. He should give assurance of safety unto his kinsmen and all creatures. (5)

A triple staff, made of bamboo, of equal knots, measuring four fingers and covered with the down of a black calf, has been highly spoken of by the ascetics for physical and mental purification. A small strip of cloth [is allowed] for covering the body and a wallet for protection against cold. (6—7)

He should also take a pair of sandals and must not collect any thing else. These all, that have been described, are always his marks. (8)

Collecting all these, leading a life of renunciation and going to a most excellent shrine, [he should] bathe

there and rinse his mouth with water inspired with the Mantrams. (9)

Then offering oblations to the Deities, he should bow unto the Sun according to the Mantram. Then with his face directed towards the east and abstaining from speech, he should perform the prāṇāyāma thrice. (10)

Having recited the Gāyatrī according to his might, he should meditate on the Para-Brahman. And, for supporting his own self, he should daily go out for receiving alms. (11)

Having arrived in the evening at the residence of the Brāhmaṇās, he should, with his right hand, beg for a mouthful of food. (12)

Then returning, the self-controlled [mendicant] should place the bowl elsewhere. Then being self-controlled, he should take rice, containing all sorts of curries with four fingers and keep it in another vessel. Then sprinkling it with water and offering it to the elemental Deities headed by the Sun, the Yatin should take his meal either in two vessels or in one. He should never eat from a vessel made of fig-leaves, or one made of Kumbhi, Tainduka, Kovidāra and Kadamva. The Yatins, who eat from vessels made of belmetal, are all described as being covered with dirt. (14—17)

The Yatins, [who take their meals from a belmetal vessel], are visited by the sins of the householder, who cooks food in a belmetal vessel, as well as of all those [persons] who make others eat from the same (18)

A Yatin should daily wash the vessel, with Mantrams, in which he takes his meal. Like the chāmāsa-vessel (ladle), of sacrifice that vessel is never sullied. (19)

Thereupon having rinsed his mouth and performed deep meditation, he should adore the Sun. A sage man should then spend his day in recitation, meditation, and the study of history. (20)

Then performing the evening adoration, he should spend the night in a temple and meditate on the eternal Brahman in the lotus of his heart. (21)

If [a Sannyāsin] be thus religiously bent, be of a quiescent soul, impartial unto all creatures and self-restrained, he attains to the highest station from which he does not return. (22)

The holder of the triple staff,—who, withholding the senses from the external objects, gradually acts thus,—attains to the most exalted station of Vishṇu, freed from the fetters of worldly existence. (23)

CHAPTER VII.

[ESSENCE OF YOGA.]

I HAVE described the duties of various Varṇas and Aśramas, by following which men attain to emancipation and the celestial region. (1)

I shall now describe, in brief, the most essential and excellent Yoga-Sāstra by listening to which, persons, desirous of acquiring emancipation, attain to it. (2)

All the sins are dissipated by the practice of Yoga. Therefore, resorting to Yoga and performing all religious rites, one should daily perform meditation. (3)

Having brought first the mind, difficult of being restrained, under control, by dhāraṇā (steady abstraction), one should control one's speech by prāṇ āyāma; and the senses, by withholding them from their objects. (4)

Considering the individual soul as identical with the Great Soul, he should meditate on Brahmaṇ, that is all knowledge, freed from diseases, subtler than the subtle and described as the stay of the universe. (5)

Seated in a solitary place with a concentrated mind, he should, till death, meditate on the ātman, that is situated both in the mind and the external world, and effulgent like gold. (6)

He should think,—“I am that which is the heart of all creatures, which is situated in the hearts of all and which is worthy of being known by all.” (7)

So long one enjoys the pleasure of seeing the ātman, he should not act against the religious practices mentioned in the S'ruti and the Smṛiti (such as penances, meditation, etc.). (8)

As a car without a horse and a horse without a charioteer [are of no use], so is penance and learning. They become useful when [they are] united. (9)

As food united with sweet juice, and sweet juice united with food, [are useful]; as birds, with two wings, fly in the sky; so one, by jñāna (knowledge) and karma (action), attains to the eternal Brahmaṇ. A Brāhmaṇa—endued with learning and penance and given to the practice of yoga—having cast off the two bodies (the material and the subtle), becomes freed from fetters. There is no destruction of the soul when the material body is destroyed. (10—12)

O ye foremost of the twice-born ones, all the divisions of castes and orders and their duties have been described unto you, in brief, by me. (13)

Hearing of religious duties, which yield, as fruits, the celestial region and emancipation, the ascetics, saluted the Rishi, and, delighted, repaired to their respective habitations. (14)

MA'RKANDEYA said -

Having studied this Religious Code, in full, emanating from the mouth of Hārīta, he, who follows its religious teachings, comes by the most excellent state. (15)

By acting against the duties laid down for the Brāhmaṇās, those laid down for the Kshatriyās (sprung from the arms of Brahṁā), those laid down for the Vais'yās (thigh-begotten), and those laid down for the S'ūdrās (foot-sprung), one is immediately degraded from his caste. Every one should perform the duty laid down for him (i.e., for his caste) The twice-born should, therefore, carefully satisfy their respective duties. (16—17)

Thus, O king, there are four Varnas, and four A's'ramas. Those, who abide by their own duties, come by the most excellent condition. (18)

The slayer of Madhu is not so much pleased with any other work, as the Man-Lion is gratified with the discharge of their respective duties by men. (19)

Therefore performing one's own duty in proper time and vigilantly, a person acquires habitation with the thousand-eyed King of the Celestials and the Man-Lion (Vishnu). (20)

By the power of the spirit of disassociation sprung in him, a Yogin, always performing religious rites, should meditate on Para-Brahman. Then casting off his body, he shall attain to the eternal and the ever-blissful station of Vishnu, which is without beginning or end. (21)

US'ANA' SAMHITA'.

[GENERAL DUTIES.]

HAVING bowed unto the ascetic Us'anâ's son, born in the race of Bhṛigu, the hermits, headed by Slounaka, asked of him [an account of] the divisions of all the Religious Codes. (1)

"Hear ye all attentively, I shall rehearse [the Religious Code]—the instrument of virtue, worldly profit, pleasure and emancipation, and the destroyer of sins—which formerly Us'anâ conversant with the secrets of the science of religion, [described] in the auditory of the Rishis."

Then saluting his father Us'anâ born in the family of Bhṛigu, he began to discourse on religious duties. (2—3)

Being invested with the sacred thread in the eighth year, either counting from the period of conception or from the [date of] birth, according to the regulation laid down in one's own Family Code of Rites, the foremost of the twice-born should study the Védās. (4)

A religious student should carry a staff, put on a girdle and the skin of a black antelope, live on what is got by begging, do good unto his preceptor and look at the preceptor's face. (5)

Formerly, cotton-made sacred thread was instituted by Brahmâ. Strings of three threads are for the Brâhmaṇas. A hempen cord [is for a Kshatriya]; and a woolen one, [for a Vais'ya]. (6)

A twice-born one should always wear the sacred thread and tie up the tuft of hair on his crown. He should put on a most excellent white piece of cotton or silk cloth without any hole, but quite different from the one used before. (7)

The sacred skin of a black antelope has been described as the cloth for covering the upper part of the body. In its absence the skin of a Ruru-deer is allowed to be used. (8)

The sacred thread should extend from the left shoulder to the bottom of the right arm. One should always wear the sacred thread. Nivita is the sacred thread lying round the neck [and hanging down like a garland]. (9)

O ye twice-born ones, the sacred thread, worn over the right shoulder and passing under the left arm, is called Prāchinavita. It should be worn at the rite for the departed manes. (10)

In a room where the Sacred Fire is kept, in a cowpen, [while offering] oblations to the Fire, [while making] recitations, while feeding after Vedic studies, near the Brāhmaṇās, while the preceptor makes his adoration and at the two periods of junction, one should always wear the sacred thread. This is the eternal regulation. (11—12)

The triple girdle of a Brāhmaṇa should be made of the Muñja-grass, have three equal folds, and be plain. Muñja not being available, Kus'a-grass is [next] spoken of, making either one- or three-, folds. (13)

A twice-born one should carry a staff, measuring up to the tips of hairs in length, made of the Bel, the Palāsha, the sacrificial fig, or of the Udumvara wood. (14)

Being self-restrained, a twice-born one should make the Sandhyā or adoration, [both] in the morning and evening. He should never fail, out of lustful desire, avarice, fear or stupefaction. (15)

Thereupon, with a delighted mind, he should adore the Sacred Fire, [both] in the morning and evening. Having bathed, he should offer oblations to the Deities, Rishis and all the classes of Pitris. (16)

He should, then, perform the adoration of the Deities with flowers, leaves and water. Saying with proper humility,—“I, such and such person, salute thee,” he should, every day, religiously bow unto his elders. [By this,] one acquires long life, health, wealth and prosperity. (17—18)

If another Brāhmaṇa salutes [him], he [the other Brāhmaṇa] should be [greeted in return], saying,—“Be long-lived, O gentle one.” These words should be uttered after addressing him by his name. (19)

A Brāhmaṇa, who does not know how to return a salutation, on being saluted [by another], should never be bowed unto by a learned person. He is like a S'ūdrā. (20)

One should, first of all, bow unto him from whom one acquires temporal, Vedic, and spiritual knowledge. (22)

One should not [at the time of saluting] touch water, food acquired by begging, flowers, [and] sacrificial fuels, as also other articles that may have been dedicated to a Deity. (23)

The preceptor, the father, the eldest brother, or the king, after approaching him, shall accost a Brāhmaṇa of his well-being; a Kshatriya, of his health; a Vais'ya, of peace; and a S'ūdra, of freedom from diseases. A maternal uncle, the father-in-law, the eldest brother, the maternal grandfather, the paternal grandfather, the head of the castes and a paternal uncle, are known as the seven Pitṛis or fathers. (24—25)

The mother, the maternal grandmother, the preceptor's wife, paternal and maternal aunts, the mother-in-law, the paternal grandmother and the eldest sister, are to be known as elderly women. (26)

All of them are spoken of as the female and male elders: one should follow them with mind, words and deeds. (27)

Seeing an elderly person, one should get up and salute him or her with folded palms. One should not sit with the elders, nor should one quarrel with them on any account. (28)

Even for preserving his own life, one should not injure or speak ill of elderly persons. Even when endued with other accomplishments, a person, injuring elders, goes downwards. (29)

Of all elderly persons, five are to be particularly [adored], viz., the father, the mother, the spiritual guide, the teacher and the priest; of them the first three are the foremost; and of them a mother is to be particularly adored. (30)

One who gives habitation even for a day, one who gives instructions even for a moment, the eldest brother and the protector [or the husband in case of a woman], are the five Gurus, (elderly persons worthy of respect). (31)

These five should be adored by one, seeking one's own well-being, with one's best personal exertion or even with the renon ncam ent of one's own life. (32)

With disinterestedness and renouncing all, a son should, devotedly, serve them both, so long as the father and the mother live. (33)

The father and the mother being pleased with their son's accomplishments, the son, by this deed, attains to [the fruition of] all [his] works. (34)

There is no Deity equal to mother ; there is no Guru (elder) equal to father ; there exists no return of their good offices. (35)

One should—by deeds, thoughts and words—do unto them what they like. Without being commanded by them, one should not perform any religious rite, excluding those which yield emancipation and the daily and obligatory rites. [To serve the parents] is laid down as the cream of religion, yielding delightful fruits in the next world. (36—37) .

With his permission, taking leave of the preceptor who properly instructs him about good conduct, makes a disciple enjoy the fruits of his learning [in this world], as well as in the celestial region after death. (38)

The silly wight, who disrespectfully treats his eldest brother who is like unto his father, goes, by that sin, into hell. (39)

[One should keep an eye on] the good services and honour of a giver in this world. It is admitted that a protector should be adored by all men with mental concentration. (40)

The most exalted regions are for those men who renounce their own lives for procuring food for their protector. The divine Bhrigu has said so. (41)

One, younger in years, should get up [on seeing] maternal uncles, paternal uncles, father-in-law, priests, and preceptors, and say,—“ I am here.” (42)

A person, younger in years, if he is initiated in a sacrifice, must not be called by name. A person, conversant with religious laws, should address him with the word,—“Bhos.” (43)

Brāhmaṇās, Kshatriyās and others, seeking their prosperity, should respectfully bow down their heads unto [their elders]. This destroys all sins. (44)

Even if they are endued with knowledge, good works and other accomplishments, and be sufficiently well-read in the S'ruti, the Kshatriyās and other castes are never to be saluted by the Brāhmaṇās. (45)

The rule is that a Brāhmaṇa should bless all the other castes and a younger person of his own caste, and salute the elderly persons [of his own caste]. (46).

Fire is adorable unto the twice-born ; a Brāhmaṇa, unto all the castes ; the husband also is adorable unto wives, and a guest is adorable unto all. (47)

[He is, to be revered,] who has learning, [pious] action, age, friend and wealth ; these five are called objects of honour, each preceding one being more important [than the succeeding one]. (48)

He is a qualified person amongst the three Varnas, who [at least] possesses one of these five [accomplishments]. Even if he happens to be inferior in any other respect, he is worthy of homage. (49)

[Respect should be offered*] unto the Brāhmaṇās, who help in the offering of piṇḍas, unto the womankind, the king, his eye (i.e., his emissary), aged persons, those, pressed down by a heavy load, the diseased and the weak. (50)

* The sense of the Text is, 'that if one of the persons, described therein, appears, one should give him way out of respect.

Having collected daily, in a devout spirit, alms from the houses of good people, one should dedicate them to the preceptor, and, then, with his permission, take one's meal, abstaining [all the while] from speech. (51)

A Brāhmaṇa, who has been invested with the sacred thread, should beg alms, using before [the word] Bhavat; a Kshatriya [should use the word] Bhavat in the middle; a Vais'ya [should use the word] Bhavat in the end.* (52)

One should first beg alms from his mother, sister, or mother's sister, and should approach such [a woman] as does not insult him. (53)

It is said that one may receive alms from all of his own caste or from all castes; but he should shun the outcastes. (54)

A Brahmachārin should daily, in a devout spirit, collect alms from those who are given to the study of the Védās, the celebration of sacrifices, and be intent upon the performance of his own works (i.e., those laid down for their respective castes and orders). (55)

One should not beg alms from the family of his preceptor, from his kinsmen and from relatives made by marriage. In the absence of a house [from which alms may be collected], every preceding party should, in order, be avoided.† (56)

Persons, mentioned before, being not available, one, controlling his ownself and speech and without looking

* This refers to the various forms of expressions used while begging alms. A Brāhmaṇa should say,—"Bhavati bhikshām dēhi," a Kshatriya should say,—"Bhikshām bhavati dēhi," and a Vais'ya,—" Bhikshām dēhi bhavati."

† The meaning is, that if there is not any other family available, one could receive alms from relations by marriage; in their absence, from his own kinsmen; and in their absence, from the preceptor's family.

towards any direction, should approach every one of the village. (57)

Having collected food by begging, he should, every day with [the preceptor's] permission, devoutly, attentively and abstaining from speech, take a portion capable of keeping him alive. (58)

A Brahmachārin should daily support himself with food acquired by begging and suppress his passions: It is said in the Smṛiti that a Brahmachārin's supporting himself with alms is tantamount to fasting. (59)

He should daily adore his food and take it without speaking ill of it; on seeing it, he should be delighted and happy, and should welcome it with laudation. (60)

Taking too much or bad food is destructive of health, longevity, attainment of the celestial region and virtue, and is condemned by the community. Therefore it should be avoided. (61)

With his face directed towards the east or the south, he should daily take his meals, according to the eternal regulation. But he should never eat facing the north. (62)

Having washed his hands and feet and been seated in a purified place, he should rinse his mouth twice after it. (63)

Having drawn a circular figure first, he should place the vessel on it, and eat till the recitation of the formulæ amṛitopidhān, etc., at the end of his meal. He should abstain from speech [all the while]. (64)

[RULES FOR RINSING THE MOUTH AND KEEPING THE BODY PURE.]

AFTER eating, drinking, bathing, walking, touching that part of a lip where there is no hair, changing clothes, passing semen, urine and excreta, conversing with degraded castes, at the commencement of study, after coughing or heavy sighing, after going to a cremation ground or to a crossing of many roads, and at the two Sandhyás or adorations, the foremost of the twice-born ones should rinse his mouth again. (1—3)

After conversing with a Chandála or a Mlechchha, after talking with abandoned women or with S'údrás, after touching an abandoned man or leavings of food, after shedding tears, after speaking an untruth, after taking meals at the two Sandhyas, after bathing, drinking or touching urine and excreta, one should rinse his mouth again, even if he has rinsed it once. Elsewhere [he should] rinse [it] once only. [Water for rinsing the mouth not being available, one, being self-restrained, can attain purification] by touching fire, kine or the right ear. (4—6)

By touching men, stones, or tying again Nivi,* one should touch pure water, grass or earth. By touching one's own hair or washing water, one should, seated at ease with his face directed towards the east or the north, [rinse his mouth] with pure water which is neither hot, nor frothy nor sullied. (7—8)

* A cloth worn round a woman's waist, or more properly the ends of the cloth tied into a knot in front.

By keeping the head or the ear covered, having the *Kāchhā or the S'ikkhā† untied, or by not washing the feet, one remains impure, even if he has rinsed his mouth. (9)

A learned man should never rinse his mouth with his shoes or with his headgear on, or while stationed in water. [Nor should he do it] with rain water, or with water mixed with clarified butter or while standing. (10)

[He should not rinse his mouth] with water placed in one palm, [and should rinse it] again [with water brought by all castes], excepting a S'ūdra. [He should not rinse it while] seated, with his sandals on, or keeping his hand outside the knee. (11)

He should not talk, laugh, cast his looks here and there, nor bend his body [while rinsing his mouth] [He should not rinse his mouth] without seeing water or with water that is hot or frothy. (12)

[Nor should he do it] with water served by the hands of a S'ūdra or of a dirty person, or with alkaline water, [or with water] taken up by the fingers. He should not make any sound and must be self-centered [at the time of his rinsing]. (13)

[Nor should he do it] with discoloured and distasteful water, or with the water passing through a crevice or [through the pores] of animals (such as drops of perspiration), and at a time beyond the appointed hour. (14)

A Brāhmaṇa is purified by water going to his heart, a Kshatriya by a drop [going to his throat], a Vais'ya by that entering into his mouth, while a S'ūdra and a woman by merely touching [the water with lips]. (15)

* The hem of the lower garment tucked into the waistband.

† A lock of hair on the crown of the head.

Brahman is said [to reside] in the line at the root of the thumb. The space between the thumb and the forefinger, is the most excellent Tīrtham (holy place) for the departed manes. (16)

The base of the smallest finger is called [the holy place] for Prajāpati or the Kāya-Tīrtham. The tops of all the fingers are described as [forming the holy place] for the Deities; and the roots, for the Rishis. [These are] Daiva-, and A'rsha-, Tīrthams. The middle part is described as that of Agni. It is also [called] Soumika (i.e., belonging to Soma or the Moon]. Knowing all these holy places, one is not possessed by stupefaction. (17—18)

A Brāhmaṇa should daily rinse his mouth with the Brahma-, or with the Kāya-, or with the Daiva-, Tīrtham, but not with the Pitṛi-[Tīrtham], O ye twice-born ones.* (19)

It is laid down in the Smṛiti that a Brāhmaṇa, being self-restrained, should first drink water thrice. Closing the lips of the mouth, he should touch it with the root of the thumb. (20)

Then with the thumb and the nameless finger, he should touch the two eyes. Then with the thumb and forefinger, he should touch the tip of the nose. (21)

With the smallest finger and the thumb, he should touch the two ears. With them all (i.e., all the fingers) or with the palm, he should touch the breast. (22)

Similarly he should touch the head with the thumb, [once] or twice. He should sip water thrice, the Deities are gratified by this [method]. (23)

* These are described as holy places, and a Brāhmaṇa should drink water at the time of the achamanam or rinsing, with these parts of the fingers.

We have heard that Brahmâ, Vishṇu and Mahes'wara become pleased [with him who performs âchamanam] The Ganges and the Yamunâ are pleased with sprinkling [the lips of water]. (24)

The Sun and the Moon are pleased with touching the two eyes; and the A'swins are gratified with touching the tip of the nose. (25)

When the two ears are touched similarly, the Wind and the Fire become pleased; and all the Deities become gratified when the breast is touched. (26)

The Purusha (âtman) becomes pleased when the head is touched The drops that fall from the mouth on the limbs, do not make leavings [of a drink]. (27)

When [any particle of food,] fixed to a tooth, drops down at the touch of the tongue, the person remains impure [so long he does not rinse his mouth]. The drops of water, which fall at the feet [of a person offering water] to another for performing achamanam (rinsing), are known as equal to [water] placed on a [pure] spot. By them, one does not become sullied There is no impurity in Madhuparka,* Soma,† in chewing betel-leaves, fruits, roots and the sugarcane rod. Us'anâ has said so. If while moving about in a place of eating and drinking, a Brâhmaṇa touches any leavings, he should keep on the ground [all the articles in his hands], rinse his mouth and sprinkle those articles with water. If while carrying metallic vessels [for adoration], he touches any leavings, he should rinse his mouth without placing those articles on earth and shall thereby attain purification. Similarly one should do, on touching [any leavings, while carrying clothes]: there being no difference between clothes [and metallic-vessels]. (28—32)

* A respectful offering of five ingredients, such as honey, etc.

† The juice of the Moon-Plant.

In the night, when there is fear of thieves and tigers on the way, if one passes urine and excreta without washing himself with water, [he does not become impure] nor the article in his hand becomes sullied. (33)

Placing his sacrificial thread on his right ear and facing the north, one should pass urine and excreta. In the night, he should face the south. (34)

Covering the ground with [pieces of] wood, leaves, clods of earth, or grass and bending his head low, one should pass urine and excreta there. (35)

One should not pass urine or excreta under a shade, in a well, in a river, in a cowpen, on a road, on a sacrificial ground, in water, fire, ashes or on the cremation ground. (36)

[One should not pass urine or excreta] on cowdung, on a foundation, in a cowshed, on a place covered with green grass; nor while standing, nor being naked, nor on the summit of a mountain. (37)

[Nor one should] do so in a dilapidated temple, or on an anthill, or in holes containing living animals, or while walking. (38)

[One should not do so] on husk, charcoal and skull, as well as on a public road, on a field of cultivation, in a hole, in water and at the crossing of four roads. (39)

[One should never ease oneself] near a garden, on a barren land, on another's excreta, with the shoes on, with an umbrella overhead, or having the atmospheric region in view. (40)

[One should not do so] before women, elderly persons, Brāhmaṇās and kine, or before [the image of a] Deity, a temple and a water. (41)

[One should not do so] casting his looks on a river or on luminous bodies, or facing them, or in an open space or looking towards the Sun, Fire or the Moon. (42)

Having brought [a clod of] earth, with it and pure water [already] brought, one should zealously wash oneself for purification till the bad smell is entirely removed. (43)

One should not bring earth filled profusely with the dust of a Brâhmaṇa's [feet], nor from clay, nor from a road, nor from a barren ground, nor from what has been left by another person after purifying oneself. (44)

What one drinks, by inspiring it with Mantrams and reciting all the letters of the Praṇava, Gâyatrî, and the Vyârhṛiti, is called Mantrâchamanam.* (46)

Thus by Gâyatryâchaman,† S'rûtyâchamanam‡ is described. (47)

[LIFE AND CONDUCT OF A BRAHMACHARIN, OR A RELIGIOUS STUDENT.]

HAVING thus purified his own body and restrained [the operation of] the body and others (speech, senses, etc.,) and casting his looks at the preceptor's face, [a religious student] should attentively prosecute his studies. (1)

Always keeping [the right hand] uplifted, performing the Sandhyâ-adorations and observing good conduct,

* Rinsing the mouth with water accompanied with the recitation of the Mystic Syllables.

† The same as above. Gâyatrî is the most sacred Vedic Mantram.

‡ A'chamanam accompanied with the recitation of the Vedic Mantram.

[and] when ordered by his preceptor with the saying,— Sit,' should he sit before him. (2)

While accepting the order [of his preceptor] or conversing with him, he should not lie down on his bed, be seated, eat and stand with his face against him (i.e., the preceptor). (3)

Near the preceptor, [a disciple's] bed and seat should always be lower [than the preceptor's]. He should not take his seat of his own accord at a place which is within the range of his preceptor's vision. (4)

He should not, even in his absence, take merely the name of his preceptor.* Nor should he imitate his (preceptor's) movements and speech. (5)

Where any accusation of the preceptor, real or false, takes place, [the disciple] should close his ears [with the fingers]; or he should leave that place and go elsewhere. (6)

He should not adore him (preceptor) living at a distance, nor being irate, nor near women. He should not cut words with him; nor should he remain seated in his presence. (7)

He should daily bring pitchers full of water, Kus'a, flowers, and sacrificial fuels, and should daily wash his limbs and paste them with earth. (8)

He should never go over the flowers used by him, or his (preceptor's) bed, sandals, shoes, seat and shadow. (9)

Having received wood for rubbing the tooth, he should not dedicate it to him. He should never go [anywhere] without obtaining leave from him; nor should he be engaged in a work calculated to incur his displeasure or do him any harm. (10)

* While taking the name of his preceptor, a disciple should always use such epithets as āchārya, upādhyāya, etc.

Near him, he should never place his feet, and avoid yawning, laughing, sneezing and using an upper garment. (11)

He should always avoid cracking fingers in his presence. He should study at the appointed hour till the preceptor does not draw his mind [from teaching]. (12)

He should never sit on [his preceptor's] seat, bed and conveyance. He should run after him when going quickly, and follow him when going [slowly]. (13)

He is allowed to sit with his preceptor on an elephant, on a camel, on a conveyance [drawn by bullocks], in a royal palace, on a rock, on a chariot, on a seat made of stone, or on one made of a big piece of wood. (14)

He should always have control over his senses and mind, be shorn of anger and pure, and should always give utterance to sweet and beneficial words. (15)

He should studiously avoid scented garlands, [sweet] juice, maidens, the destruction of small animals, smearing the body with oil, collyrium, shoes, the holding of umbrella, lustful desires, anger, fear, sleep (i.e., too much sleeping), singing [bad songs], playing on musical instruments, dancing, gambling, detracting other people, looking at and conversing with women, injuring other people and wickedness. With a delighted mind he should bring pitchers full of water, flowers, cowdung, earth and Kus'a as much as is necessary for his own use. He should daily collect food [which a Brahmachārin may take], except salt and what is stale. (16—19)

He should always be impartial, have no attachment for singing, etc., should not see his face in a mirror, should not rub his teeth, should not converse with notorious impure persons, women and Sūdrās, and should not take the residue of his preceptor's food willingly for medicinal purposes. (20—21)

He should never take such a bath as would remove the filth of his body,* and should not, without being permitted by his preceptor, salute his own elders. (22)

He should similarly behave towards those of his elders who confer learning, and towards those who are born of the same stock, who suppress irreligion and deliver wholesome instructions. (23)

Towards persons most prominent [in education and piety], preceptor's wives, sons and kinsmen,—he should daily so behave himself as he does towards his preceptor. (24)

Whether a disciple be younger in years or of the same age [with him], the son of the preceptor teaching him, deserves respect, like unto the preceptor himself, in all sacrificial rites. (25)

He should not besmear the body of the preceptor's son with turmeric, make him bathe, take the leavings of his food and wash his feet. (26)

All the wives of the preceptor should be adored like the preceptor himself. All his other caste-wives should be revered with salutation and rising up. (27)

Rubbing oil [on the person], bathing, cleansing with perfumes the body, and decorating the hairs, of the preceptor's wife should never be done. (28)

The youthful wife of the preceptor should never be saluted by the feet. [The disciple] should salute her

* The Author here means that a religious student should not be over-zealous in bathing so as to beautify his person. Students should not spend too much of their time in bathing in order to look handsome. They should have no eye on personal charms.

[placing his head on the ground] and saying,—“I am such and such a person.” (29)

Remembering always [the tenets of] religion, a Vipra (religious student) should touch the feet and salute the wives, of the preceptor. (30)

The mother's sister, maternal uncle's wife, mother-in-law, father's sister, and the wives of all the elders, should be adored like unto the preceptor's wife. (31)

The wife of an elder brother, those of kinsmen and relatives, mother's sisters and father's sisters, and elder sisters, should be saluted by touching the feet. (32)

One should treat them all like his mother, but the latter is superior to them all. The preceptor should duly instruct the disciple,—living for a year [in his house], behaving himself in the [aforesaid] manner, [who is] intelligent and always doing good unto all,—in the Vedas, Dharma-Sāstras, and the Purāṇās, and [impart him] the knowledge of the Tattvas (principles). (33—34)

The preceptor removes the sins of his disciple within a year. An A'charya's son, one who wishes to hear attentively, one who has given knowledge [in any other subject], a virtuous person, a person pure [in body and mind], a relative, one who is capable of understanding the scriptures, one who gives away money, a good man and a kinsman,—these ten should be taught according to the rules of religious teaching. A Kshatriya, [who is] grateful, shorn of malice, intelligent and always doing good; a Vais'ya, endued with similar accomplishments; a grateful Brāhmaṇa, a non-injuring Brāhmaṇa, an intelligent Brāhmaṇa and a Brāhmaṇa, doing good unto all,—these six should [also] be taught by the leading twice-born ones. Even though it be quite contrary to the established rules [of religious instruction], when a Vipra, invested with the sacred thread by another, comes, [he should be taught:] Instruction in the Vēdas should be given to these only, and not to any one else; so it is said. (35—37)

Having rinsed his mouth, controlled his mind, and with his face directed towards the north, [a student] should daily study. He should look towards the face of his preceptor and touch his feet [before commencing the study]. (38)

[When the preceptor] would say,—Adhishyabho (Oh, study), [the student should begin his study; and when he would say,—] Viramostu (stop), [he should close it.] Seated on a Kus'ā-seat with their tops facing the east, being purified by holding the Kus'ā-reed [in his hand] and first performing the Prāṇāyāma thrice, he should recite Om. At the close of the study, a twice-born Brāhmaṇa should also duly recite the Praṇava. (39—40)

Seated with folded palms, he should daily study [the Vēdas]. The Vēda is the eternal eye of all persons. (41)

He should duly study [the Vēdas] every day, or else he will fall off from the dignity of a Brāhmaṇa. He, who daily reads the Rich, propitiates the Deities with the oblations of thickened milk. (42)

The Deities, also, gratified, please him by granting him all desired-for articles. He, who always studies the Yajush, propitiates the Deities with curd. (43)

He, who daily studies the Sāman, propitiates the Deities with the oblations of clarified butter. The Deities are also propitiated by the daily study of Angirasa's Atharvaṇ. (44)

The Deities are also gratified by the study of the Dharma-S'āstras, Āngas (auxiliary subjects of the Vēdas, such as, Grammar, Astronomy, etc.), Purāṇas and Mimāṃsā. [If unable to read any of these,] he should, daily, with a concentrated mind and following the prescribed rules, study the Gāyatrī, either near water or going into a forest. A thousand times form the highest recitation of the divine [Gāyatrī]; a hundred times, the middling; and ten times, the lowest. He should daily recite the Gāyatrī. It is laid down that recitation must be made thrice [in a day.] The Lord [Brahmā], weighing, in a balance, the Gāyatrī and the Vēdas, [placed] the four Vēdas on one [scale], and the Gāyatrī on the other. First reciting Om, he should then [recite] the Vyāhṛitī (Bhūr, Bhuvah, Swah). He should then attentively study the Gāyatrī. [One] becomes possessed of great prosperity [by the study of the Gāyatrī]. [The preceptor] with his understanding (i.e., mind) fixed on the Gāyatrī, should teach [his disciples]. (45—49)

In the former Kalpa, were produced the three Mahā-Vyāhṛitis, named Bhūr, Bhuvah and Swah, destructive of all inauspiciousness. (50)

The three Vyāhṛitis [represent] Pradhāna (Prakṛiti or Nature), Purusha (the soul), and Kāla (time), or Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Mahes'wara, or Sattwa, Rajas and Tamas, or Present, Future and Past. (51)

Om is Para-Brahman and the Gāyatrī is eternal. This Mantram (namely the Gāyatrī) has been described as the means of witnessing the Maha-Yoga, (great union). (52)

The Brahmachārin, who, understanding its meaning daily reads the Gāyatrī, the mother of the Vēdas, comes by the most excellent condition. (53)

Of all (Mantrams) to be recited, there is none superior to the Gāyatrī. It has been described, in the Smṛiti-S'āstra, as the [means of the acquisition of the] knowledge of the Real. O ye, leading twice-born ones, the commencement [of Vedic study] must take place on the Full-Moon day either of the months of A'shāda, S'rāvaṇa, or Bhādra. Going away from a village or a city, a Brahmachārin, being self-controlled, should study [the Vēdas] for four-months-and-a-half in a holy place. Under the constellation of Pushyā, the twice-born ones should perform the dedicatory rite of the Vēdas. (54—56)

[Or, he should do it] in the first part of the first day of the month of Māgha. After this, the twice-born ones should study the Vēdas in the light fortnight. (57)

In the dark fortnight, a person should study the Vedāṅgas and the Purāṇas. Both the teacher and the pupil should carefully avoid the [following] periods, when no Vedic studies should be prosecuted:—vis., the night when a roaring wind blows, the day when a dusty wind blows, when a down-pour of rain takes place accompanied with the flashing of lightning and roaring of clouds, and when huge fire-brands drop down. Prajāpati has laid down these periods as being unworthy of Vedic (studies). (58—60)

When one shall see all these (thunder, lightning, etc.) rise in the morning and evening when the Sacred Fire is lighted up, he should not study the Vēdas; and in other seasons, except the rainy, on seeing a cloud.* (61)

Appearance of a portendous sound in the sky, earth-

* This means that in the rainy season when thunder and lightning appear in the morning and evening when the Sacred Fire is lighted, no study should be prosecuted. It may be done at any other time in the rainy season, even if these inauspicious signs appear.

quake and the fall of luminous bodies, form, also the periods when religious study should not be prosecuted even in the rainy season. (62)

In any other season, except the rainy, if the roaring of thunder and cloud appear in the morning and evening when the Sacred Fire is lighted up, the study should be stopped at once. So the Muni has said. (63)

Those, who wish for cleverness in actions, should never prosecute [religious] studies in villages or cities. And every day [the study must be stopped] when any bad smell [comes in]. (64)

No study [is allowed] in a village inhabited by low-caste people,* near an irreligious person, when cries are heard and where there is a multitude of men. (65)

In water, in the middle of the night, when one passes urine and excreta, while touching the leavings of food and after eating articles offered at a S'râddha,† a twice-born one should not even think [of the Vêdas] with the mind. (66)

Having accepted an invitation for the Ekoddhista-S'râddha,‡ on the birth of the king's son and on solar and lunar eclipses, a learned Brâhmaṇa should not study the Vêdas for three days. (67)

As long as the scent and paste, dedicated at the Ekoddhista (S'râddha) exist on the person of a learned Brâhmaṇa, he should not study the Vêdas. (68)

Lying down, seated by placing the soles of the feet on the seat, sitting with a cloth girt round the legs and

* Another reading is antargate s'ave, i.e., where there is a dead body.

† The meaning is that after taking food offered at a S'râddha one should not even think of the Vêdas for full twenty-four hours from that time.

‡ A funeral rite performed for a definite individual deceased.

knees, taking fish or meat, or food rendered impure by birth or death, a twice-born one should not study [the Vēdas]. (69)

On a day covered with mist, on hearing the sound of an arrow, at the two Sandhyās, on the last day of the dark fortnight, on the fourteenth-, and the eighth-, day of the two fortnights, and on the Full-Moon day, [a twice-born one should not study the Vēdas]. (70)

Before the commencement of Vedic study and after the performance of the dedicatory rite, [the study] must be put a stop to, as laid down in the Smṛiti, for three nights. One should not prosecute Vedic studies on Ashtakas, at the termination of the seasons and in the nights. (71)

The three eight days in the dark fortnight, in the months, of Agrahāyana, Pousha and Māgha, have been designated by the sages as Ashtakas. (72)

A twice-born one should never study under the shade of S'lesmataka, S'ālmali, Madhukā, Kovidara, and Kapithwa trees. (73)

On the demise of a person studying the same branch, or that of a fellow-religious-student, or that of the preceptor, [abstention from study] for three nights is prescribed in the Smṛiti. (74)

On all these faulty occasions, abstention from study is laid down for the Brāhmaṇās. The Rākshasās do mischief unto them who study [on these interdicted occasions]; therefore one should avoid them (i.e., these occasions). (75)

There is no stoppage of study in the daily rites of the Sandhyā-adorations, in the preliminary and dedicatory rites of Vedic study and in the Homa-Mantrams. (76)

On an Ashtaka-day, when a high wind blows or in [any other] calamity, a twice-born one should study one Rich-, or one Yajus-, or one Sāma-, Mantram. (77)

There is no prohibition in the study of the Vedāṅgas, or of the Itihāsas (History) and the Purāṇas; or of the Dharma-Sāstras and other [works]; but a twice-born one should abstain from studying all these on parva-days. (78)

I have thus described, in brief, the duties of the Religious Students. Formerly Brahmā described them before the Rishis gifted with the knowledge of self. (79)

A twice-born person, who without studying the S'ruti devotes his care elsewhere, (i.e., to any other subject) is, indeed, a foolish wight opposed to the study of the Vēda. He should not be accosted by the twice-born. (80)

The foremost of the twice-born ones should not be satisfied with merely reading the Vēdas. The mere recitation of the Vedas becomes useless like a cow in mire. (81)

He, who studying duly the Veda (Samhitā) does not discuss (i.e., master) the Vēdānta, becomes like a S'ūdra with his entire family. And he is not entitled to have water for washing his feet. (82)

If a twice-born person wishes to lead the life of a perpetual religious student at the house of his preceptor, he should serve him diligently and assiduously till the destruction of his body. (83)

Or (i.e., in the absence of his preceptor), going to a forest he should duly offer oblations to Fire. And being self-restrained, he should ever and anon study the Spiritual Science. (84)

Having bathed and besmeared his body with ashes, he should, always, study the Vēdas, and especially the Savitri, and S'atarudra (verses) of the Vēdas. (85)

O ye twice-born ones, having studied [either] one, or two, or three, of the Vēdas, or the [entire] four Vēdas and understood their meaning properly, the foremost of the twice-born should [celebrate the occasion with the terminating] bath. (86)

He should zealously perform, every day, his own duties as laid down in the Vēda. Not doing them, he immediately falls down on dreadful hells. (87)

Being self-controlled, he should practise [the recitation of] the Vēdas and never give up the [celebration of] great sacrifices. He should do all domestic works and the Sandhyā-adorations. (88)

He should, daily, study the Vēdas and put on his sacred thread. He should speak the truth and control his passion. [Such conduct] leads to the attainment of emancipation. (89)

Bathing, performing the Sandhyā-adorations and the Brahma-Yajña every day, being shorn of malice, mild and self-controlled, a householder succeeds in getting over worldliness. (90)

A twice-born man, who being self-restrained, reads religious books, discourses [on them], becomes glorified in the region of Brahmā. (91)

Having meditated completely on ātman and thereafter performed the morning rites before making offering to all the Deities (made by presenting oblations to Fire before meals), he should feed the Brāhmaṇas in the mid-day. (92)

With his face directed towards the east or the Sun, he should take his meals. Seated on a purified seat, he should place his feet on the ground. (93)

To take meals with one's face directed towards the east, produces longevity; [to do so] with the face directed towards the south, yields fame; to eat with the face towards the west, brings on prosperity; and to eat with the face towards the north, yields [the fruits of] truthfulness. (94)

He (i.e., one leading the domestic mode of life), should himself take his meals afterwards and place the residue on the ground. This, Us'ana says, is equal to fasting. (95)

Again, washing his hands and feet, [and] rinsing his mouth and being shorn of anger, he should take his meals in the night in a purified place after having it [properly] cleansed. (96)

Reciting the Vyāhṛiti and encircling the food with water, he should sprinkle it afterwards with the Pariś'echana-Mantram. (97)

Then offering food to Chitra-Gupta, sprinkling it and reciting the Mantram, [running as,—] Amritopistarānamasi, he should perform the rite of A'pos'āna.* (98)

With the recitation of Swāhā and Prāṇava, he should offer oblation to the [vital air] Prāṇa. Then offering oblation to the Apāna, he should offer the same afterwards to the Vyāna. (99)

Thereupon he should offer the same to the Udāna, and the fifth [oblation] to the Samāna. Then understanding their true import, a twice-born one should offer oblation to his own self. (100)

Having meditated, in his mind, on the Divine Self-Existent Prajāpati, he should, at his pleasure, take the last portion of the food with curry. (101)

* A kind of prayer repeated before and after eating.

After eating, he should recite [the Mantram] Amrito-pidhāṇamasi and drink water. Having sipped water, he should, again, perform the āchamanam. Then reciting the Mantram,—Gouriti, or thrice Gīyatrī, consisting of three pādas and destructive of all sins, he should touch his breast with the Mantram, Prānānām Granthirasi. (102—103)

Then taking up the thumb of the foot with the thumb, lifting his hand and being self-controlled, he should pass off water from his hand. (104)

Having offered oblations, he should inspire his ownself with Mantrams, reciting Swadhā. Then with the Mantram,—Yo yapet Brahmanā, he should sprinkle himself with water. (105)

It is laid down in the Smṛiti that of all the yāgas [sacrifices], ātma-yāga is the foremost. In the afternoon of every A'māvasyā (the last day of the dark fortnight) S'rāddha should be performed by the twice-born. (106)

This S'rāddha is called Piṇḍanvāharyakam.* In the afternoon of the day, when the waning of the Moon takes place, the twice-born should perform it with sanctified fish and meat. (107)

In the dark fortnight there are [fifteen] tithis (days) such as Pratipad (the first day). Leaving off the fourteenth day, [one should perform it] on Pañchamī (fifth day), one after another.† (108)

* Piṇḍa means the Pitris or the departed Manes. It is so called because it affords gratification to them for a month.

† There are fifteen days in the fortnight. If these days are divided by five, three groups are formed. The three Pañchamī-days are accordingly the fifth, tenth, and the last or the A'māvasyā-day. Of them, the second, i.e., the tenth, day is superior to the first or the fifth, day, and the last, i.e., the A'māvasyā-day is superior to the second, or the tenth, day. The word uttarottaram in the Text signifies this superiority.

Amongst the tithis beginning with the first day after the Full-Moon-Day, divided into three groups, the A'māvasyā (the last day of the dark fortnight), and the three Ashtakas [are the best]. The three sacred Ashtakas, the fifteenth day of the dark fortnight in every month, and the thirteenth day of the dark fortnight in the month of Māgha and under the constellation of Maghā, are particularly [preferable]. During the solar and lunar eclipses, on all these days, and on the death* of boys, occasional funeral rites should be performed. Otherwise, a person becomes a dweller of hell. Kāmya-S'rāddhas are praised in eclipses, on the last days of the summer and winter solistices, and when the Sun enters on its equinoctial passage. [A S'rāddha,—performed] when any conjunction of planets, foreboding evil, takes place, [yields] unending fruits. A S'rāddha, performed on the last day of all the months and on birth-days, [yields] eternal [fruits]. (109—112)

Under any planet and on any tithi and day, one may perform a Kāmya-S'rāddha for a particular object. O ye leading twice-born ones, by performing the same under the influence of the Pleiades, one acquires the celestial region. (113)

Proper ingredients and worthy Brāhmaṇas being available, [one should perform the [S'rāddha]: there is no limitation of time in it. One should perform an Abhyudaya-S'rāddha at the commencement of all [festive and initiatory] rites, such as the birth of a son, etc. A S'rāddha, that is performed on a parva-day, is called Pārvaṇa. What is performed every day, is called Nitya;

* In some Texts there is janana, i.e., on the birth of children. The S'rāddha is to be performed, because no child-death takes place in a family unless the Manes are offended.

[what is performed with a particular end in view, is called] Kāmya. [What is performed occasionally, when Ashtaka and other exceptional days appear, is called] Naimittika. (114—115)

He,—who disregarding a Brāhmaṇa, well-read in the S'rūti, living at hand, gives the food to another,—that sinful wight consumes, by such a deed, his seven generations. (116)

If a Vipra [living at a distance] excels [the one living near] in character, learning, etc., [the performer of the S'rāddha] should, himself, offer, with care, [the food] unto him, renouncing the one living near. (117)

An illiterate Brāhmaṇa, accepting funeral cakes, gold, kine, horses, lands and sesame seeds, gets consumed like a wood. (118)

The anniversary day of the death of the lady, devoted to her husband, who ascends the same funeral pyre with him, arriving, two separate funeral balls (piṇḍas) should be made. (119)

[For a deceased person,] oblations of water should be religiously offered; and S'rāddha and Pārvaṇa,—called Nagna (i.e., in which persons, qualified to offer piṇḍa, should shave their heads)—should be performed. The rite of depositing bones [should be performed] within the first three days after death; and on the tenth day, the piṇḍa for securing final beatitude [should be offered]. (120)

Ourdha-funeral rites should be performed on the tenth day and on the final day of purification [if the period is somehow increased]. If the rite of depositing bones takes place on the tenth day or on a day subsequent to that, on account of there being destroyed or lost, and if the dead body is to be cremated again, then one should duly perform anew the ceremony of offering water and the new or the first S'rāddha. (121—122)

A twice-born man, whether he maintains the Sacred Fire or not, whose father is dead, should perform the S'rāddha every day, particularly those at sacred places. (123)

If the Pitri-vessel lies upraised or askance, the departed Manes, being enraged, do not partake of the food. (124)

Ekoddistha, Ekoddhisthavidhika, Vṛiddhi, Pārvaṇa and Pārvaṇavidhika,—these fivefold S'rāddhas have been enunciated by Bhṛigu's son. (126)

The S'rāddha, performed with care at the time of starting on a journey, is called the sixth. And the Pārvaṇa, performed for purification, has been described by Brahmā as the seventh. (127)

The S'rāddha, performed for the Deities, is the eighth, by doing which, one is freed from fear. At the two periods of junction between day and night,* and in the night no S'rāddha should be performed, for no evidence is found [in the Vēdas in its support]. (128)

[Those performed at various] countries (pilgrimages) particularly, yield unending merits. (129)

A S'rāddha performed at Gaya, and death at Prayāga (Allahabad, the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā), yield unending fruits. The intelligent sages all sing and describe this Gāthā (discourse.) (130)

* Some Texts read Rāhudars'ānāt instead of Ahorātramādars'anāt, i.e., during the eclipses, no S'rāddha should be performed.

Many sons, endued with good character and accomplishments, should be sought for. If one, amongst that multitude, happens to go to Gayá, and even if going there accidentally in a company, performs the S'rāddha, the departed Manes are gratified by him; and he, too, comes by most excellent condition. (131—132)

On the Mountain Varāha, especially in Gayá and in such like pilgrimages, [if a S'rāddha is performed], the departed Manes are gratified thereby. (133)

With rice, barley, bean, water, fruits, roots, leaves of the sacred fig-tree, vegetables, rice growing wild or without cultivation, Priyaṅgu (a kind of creeper), wheat, sesame and kidney bean, one should gratify his departed Manes. At the time of a S'rāddha, he should give away sweet fruits, sugar-cane juice, sweet small cardamoms, Vidaryas (prickly pear) and ducks. He should give away with sugar and curd, fried paddy mixed with honey. (134—136)

One should, with care, give at a S'rāddha, deer, lamb and tortoise. With fish and meat, [the Manes attain to gratification for] two months; and [for] three months, with the meat of deer. (137)

With mutton, [they are gratified for] four months; with the meat of birds, [for] five months; with the meat of goat, [for] six months; and with the meat of Kuru-deer, [for] nine months. (138)

With the meat of buffalo and pork, [they] are gratified for ten months; and with the meat of hare and tortoise, for eleven months. (139)

With cow's milk and Pāyasa (milk and boiled-rice), [they attain to gratification for] one year. With the meat of rhinoceros, [they attain to] gratification for twelve years. (140)

Black pot herbs, sea-scrabs, meat of rhinoceros and black goat, honey and all other roots lead to their everlasting gratification. (141)

Having himself bought or obtained by begging all the ingredients necessary [for performing a S'rāddha] for a deceased person, a twice-born man should make a presentation of them, with care, at a S'rāddha. The fruit of such a gift is said to be eternal. (142)

One should avoid pepper, betel-nut, Masuraka (pulse), dirty bottle-gourd, Brinjal, incantation, the meat of crane, deceitfulness, big roots, broken rice, human flesh, and the milk of she-buffalos. (143)

The foremost of the twice-born ones should, with every care, avoid, at the time of a S'rāddha, Kodrava (a species of grain), Kovidara (fruit and leaves of the tree of the same name), Sthalapaka (a kind of grain) and A'mari. (144)

CHAPTER IV.

PERSONS WHO OUGHT TO BE INVITED AT A S'RA'DDHA.

HAVING duly bathed, offered libations of water to the departed Manes, Deities and the Rishis, one, being of a delightful mind and purified, should perform the S'raddha, of Pinḍanvaharyaka.* (1)

First of all, he should cast his looks towards the Brahmanas, who have mastered the Vēdas, for they are the most qualified in offering clarified butter and food [to the departed Manes] and are [to be revered like] a guest, according to the Smṛiti. (2)

* A S'rāddha in which one should take his meals after the funeral rice-ball has been offered to the Manes.

Those, who are given to the drinking of Soma-Juice, who know the true form of religion, who are truthful, who observe penances, who follow regulations, who know their wives at the proper time after the menses, who preserve the Five Sacred Fires, who are given to Vedic studies, who know the Yayur-Vēda, who know the Rig-Vēda, who are Trisuparna, (i.e., study the same portion of the Vēdas), who are Trimadhu (i.e., study the same portion of the Vēdas), who are Trīṇāchikēta, (i.e., study the same portion of the Vēdas), who have mastered the Sāmā-Vēda, who have duly studied the Sāman called the Jyēsthā-Sāma; those, who have studied the Atharva-S'īras, especially the Rudrādhyāyī; who are is given to the performance of Agnihotra; the learned; those, who know all sins, who have read the Six Āṅgas; those, who are given to the adoration of the Guru, the Deities and the Fires, who are endued with spiritual knowledge, who are non-injuring, who do not daily accept presents, who constantly perform sacrifices, who are given to [the practice of] making gifts;—all such Brāhmaṇas are *Paṅtipāvanās (i.e., entitled to seats of honour at dinner parties.) (3—7)

Even if they may not be of the same Pravara (lineage) and of the same Gotra (family), and [even if they be not] relations,—those Brāhmaṇas are to be known as Paṅtipāvanās. (8)

First of all one should feed a Yogin, endued with the knowledge of self; in his absence, a Naishtika (a perpetual religious student); in his absence, a self-controlled Upakarvānaka (a religious student who wishes to pass on to the state of a householder). (9)

* Literally, those who purify Paṅgti, or persons who sit in the same row to dine.

In the latter's absence, one should feed a householder, who wishes to acquire emancipation and who has given up company. But one should never feed a householder who performs various works expecting the fruits thereof. (10)

In this world, one, who feeds a Yatin, who is conversant with the three Guṇas (universal tendencies) of Prakṛiti (Nature) and the spiritual science, reaps fruits superior to that of (feeding) a thousand persons well-read in the Vēdas. (11)

Therefore one should, with care, feed the foremost of Yogins, endued with the knowledge of P's'vara, with food and clarified butter; and in his absence, the twice-born persons. (12)

This is the first rule in the distribution of the Havya (food) and the Kavya (clarified butter); the following is the minor rule which good people follow. (13)

One should feed his maternal grandfather, maternal uncle, father-in-law, preceptor, and daughter's son, if they are all learned and are like unto fire in Brahmanic energy. (14)

One should not feed a friend at a S'rāddha; he must be secured by money. Even if it is done without any money-present at a funeral offering, it secures prosperous fruits in the next world. (15)

[In the absence of a worthy person,] it is better to adore an accomplished friend, but never a qualified enemy. Clarified butter, partaken of by enemies, becomes fruitless in the region of the dead. (16)

Having offered the Havi to a person, who is not acquainted with the Vēdas, the giver does not attain to the fruits thereof. A person, not knowing the Vēdas, would, in the next world, eat as many burning maces with downward faces as the number of balls, which he would eat at the time of distributing the Havya and Kavya. If persons learned in the Vēdas and the Yogins [take their meals at a S'rāddha], the performer is honoured both in this world and the next. (17—18)

The twice-born men, as mentioned below, who partake of the Havya become A'sura (demoniac). He, in whose family the study of the Vēdas and the [practice of] sitting on the sacrificial altar has been given, up for three generations, is to be known as a bad Brāhmaṇa, and he [should never be invited] at S'rāddha. (19)

He, who is the servant of a S'ūdra; he, who is the servant of the king; he, who is proud; he, who is irreligious; he, who works as the priest for a [whole] village; and he, who leads the life of a butcher;—these six are contemptuous (nominal) Brāhmaṇās. Manu has designated them as degraded ones, even if they impart [lessons in the] Vēdas. (20—22)

The following are disqualified to be present at a S'rāddha ceremony :—Those, who sell the S'ruti; those, who marry widows; those, who enter into a locked room without the permission of the owner; and those, who officiate as priests for inferior castes;—are described as out-castes. Those, who teach unknown persons; those, who give instructions on receiving fees; those, who study the Vēdas by paying fees;—are described as Vṛitakās. The Srāmanās (Bouddha ascetics); Nirgoodās, (a class of naked mendicants); those, who, know the doctrines of the Pancharātra;* the

* This is a sect amongst the Vaishnavās. The promulgator of this sect was S'āndilya. According to them, Vishṇu is the Supreme Deity and the sole cause of all. Deliverance is attainable by the worship of this Deity.

Jinās ;* the Kāpālikās ;† the Pas'upatas ;‡—if these and similar other heretics,—wicked souls pervaded by the quality of Tamas,—partake of the Havi, the S'raddha does not become successful, and it does not yield fruits in the next world. O ye leading Vipras, a twice-born man, who does not follow an established order of life ; as well as the one, who enters upon a false one ;—are to be known as Paṅgtidushakās (i.e., those who are unworthy to sit at a dinner party.) One, who has a bad skin ; one, who has bad nails ; one, who is afflicted with leprosy ; one, who suffers from leucoderma (i.e., white leprosy) ; one, who has brown colored teeth ; one, who is wily ; one, who carries on a trade ; a thief ; a eunuch, an atheist ; a drunkard ; one, who knows an unmarried girl ; one, who kills heroes ; one, who has sexually known his brother's widow (not as a sacred duty, but for the carnal gratification of one's senses ; an incendiary ; one, who takes food, offered by an intelligent person called the Kuṇḍa ; the Brāhmaṇās, who sell the Soma ; one, who serves meals ; an injuring person ; a (Parivitti) younger brother who marries before his elder has been married ; one, who does not perform the five great sacrifices ; the son of a widow, re-married ; one, who lives on usury ; one, who lives by astrological calculations ; one, who lives by singing and playing on musical instruments ; one, who is afflicted with a disease ; one, who is deaf ; (23—30)

* A follower of Jaina doctrines.

† Followers of a certain S'aiva Sect (the left-hand order) characterised by carrying skulls of men in the form of garlands and eating and drinking from them.

‡ A sect of S'aiva worshippers ; they hold that I's'wara, the Supreme Being is the Efficient Cause of the world, its Creator and Superintending and Ruling Providence.

One, who is defective in limbs ; one, who has extra limbs ; a religious student, who has committed an act of incontinence ; one, who vilifies a maiden ; the son of a woman who commits adultery during the life-time of her husband ; the bastard son of a widow ; one imprecated with a curse ; a low Brâhmaṇa, who subsists upon offerings made to an idol ; (31)

One, who injures a friend ; one, who is deceitful ; one, who daily beats women ; one, who renounces his parents and preceptor ; as well as one, who renounces his wife ; (32)

One, who has no issue ; one, who gives false evidence ; one, who cooks food ; one, who lives by treating diseases ; one who goes to sea ; one, who is ungrateful ; one, who breaks a high way ; and one, who breaks an agreement ; (33)

One, who is given to the vilification of the Vêdas ; one, who is given to speaking against the Deities ; one, who is given to speaking ill of the twice-born ;—[all these] should be avoided in all rites appertaining to a S'râddha. (34)

An ungrateful person ; a deceitful person ; a wicked soul ; an atheist ; one, who speaks against the Vêdas ; one, who slays a friend ; one, who knows another's wife ; one, who falsely accuses a learned person ; [should, also, be avoided.] (35).

What is the use of speaking more on this subject, even those, who after doing prescribed works perpetrate interdicted deeds, should, also, be carefully avoided in a S'râddha. (36)

CHAPTER V.

[RULES OF S'RA'DDHA.]

HAVING purified himself with cow-dung and water and being self-controlled, [the performer of a S'rāddha,] saluting all the twice-born, should invite them with welcome words. (1)

On the day previous, he should say,—“To-morrow shall my S'rāddha take place.” If it is impossible, he should invite a Brāhmaṇa, endued with [all] the marks mentioned before. (2)

When the hour for the S'rāddha arrives, his departed Manes, fleet like the mind, hearing his [invitation] and meditating on it with a concentrated mind, arrive there. (3)

The departed Manes, who range in the intermediate region, follow the Brāhmaṇās, remain there in the shape of the wind, and attain to the most excellent condition after partaking of the food [offered there.] (4)

When the hour for the S'rāddha arrives, the Brāhmaṇās who are invited, should all lead continent lives and sit there being self-restrained (5)

They should all be shorn of anger and hastiness and be truthful and self-restrained. One, who takes meals at a S'rāddha, should give up fear, sexual intercourse, wending a way and the recitation [of the Gāyatrī.] (6)

A Brāhmaṇa, who, being invited, accepts another's invitation, [is a sinner.] And a twice-born person, who, having invited [Brāhmaṇās, according to his acquirements], invites another out of stupefaction, is a greater sinner and is born as a virmin of excreta. (7)

A Brahmaṇa, who being invited at a S'rāddha, holds sexual intercourse, is visited by the sin of Brāhmanicide and is born amongst the degraded castes (8)

The departed Manes of the wicked-minded Vipra, who being invited, wends a way, live for that month on dust. (9)

The departed Manes of the twice-born person, who being invited, picks up a quarrel, live for that month on dirt and excreta. (10)

Therefore, being invited at a S'rāddha, a twice-born one should become self-controlled. The performer of the S'rāddha, too, should be shorn of anger, remain purified and control his senses. (11)

Having gone to the southern quarter, [the performer of a S'rāddha] should, attentively, offer [unto the invited persons,] beautifying [the place], Durvā-grass with roots, having their tips directed towards the south, and pure water. (12)

He should paste, with cow-dung, a low ground in the south, cool, demarcated, possessed of auspicious marks, purified and secluded. (13)

The departed Manes are gratified [with oblations] offered at the secluded banks of rivers, [pilgrimages, one's own ground, and the summits of mountains. (14)]

One should not offer oblations to the departed Manes on another's ground. Whatever [rite] is performed [there], by men out of stupefaction, becomes lost on account of its ownership [being invested in another.] (15)

Forests, mountains, sacred shrines, sacrificial places, all these are described as having no owners. No one has any right of possession over them. (16)

A twice-born person should put boundary marks all over there and scatter sesame seeds. All places, sullied by the Asurās, are purified by sesame and the Aja (a kind of corn.) (17)

He should, then, according to his power, dedicate food, purified in many ways, not consisting of one curry, fresh and of which nothing has been spent, and prosperous with articles to be sucked and drunk. (18)

Then when the noon sets in, he, having approached the twice-born, who have pared their nails and shaved their beards, should offer them, as laid down in the ritual, sticks for rubbing the teeth. (19)

First of all he should offer unto [the Brāhmaṇās representing the] Viśvadevās, in Udumvara-vessels, oil, unguents, water for bathing [and] other ingredients of bathing, and perfumeries of sorts. (20)

Then, having risen up and with folded palms, he should offer, in order, water, for washing the feet and rinsing the mouth, unto them, when they have returned from after bath. (21)

The seats, made of Kas'ā, for those Brāhmaṇās who, being invited for the first [party, the Deities], are beautifully seated there (i.e., the place where a S'rāddha is performed), should be placed facing the east. (22)

They (i.e., those seats) shall have one Kus'ā facing the south, and should be sprinkled with sesame-water. [The performer of the S'rāddha] should make the Brāhmaṇās, like unto the Deities themselves, sit thereon, saying,—‘Sit.’ They (the Brāhmaṇās), too, should sit separately. (23)

Two, on the side of the Dēva, [should sit with their] faces towards the east. Three, belonging to the Pitṛis, should sit with their faces towards the north. Or one on each side should [be present] there. Such is [the rule in the case] of the maternal grandfather. (24)

The ceremony of reception, the determination of time and place, purity and the [acquisition of] qualified Brāhmans,—these five destroy [the true spirit of] the S'rāddha. Therefore many should not be invited. (25)

Or, one should feed only one Brāhmaṇa who has mastered the Vedas, is endued with good character and with [the knowledge of] the S'ruti, and who is shorn of [all] bad marks. (26)

All self-restrained persons, [desirous of offering] food to a qualified person, [should offer the same], in a temple, unto him returned from the three regions. (27)

He should then offer [a part of] that food unto the Fire and then unto the [invited] religious student. A Bhikṣu (religious mendicant) or a Brahmachārin being present for food, one should feed them to satisfaction after [the invited Brāhmans] have been seated [to take their meals] at a S'rāddha. That S'rāddha is not well spoken of where an Atithi (uninvited guest) does not take his food. (28—29)

Therefore, even at places of pilgrimage, the Atithis should be adored by the twice-born ones with care. Those twice-borns, who take meals at a S'rāddha, if they, without spending a night, hold sexual congress or make gifts, are, forsooth, born in the species of crows. One having defective limbs, an outcaste, one suffering from leprosy, a merchant, the offspring of a Nishada by a S'udra woman, one having a foetid nose, a fowl, a hog, and a dog should be shunned from a distance in all S'rāddhas. One should not touch a person of grim visage, a Mlechchha and a woman in menses. (30—32)

One should avoid persons putting on violet coloured raiments and [useless] silk raiments, as well as heretics. Whatever rites are performed there [in a S'rāddha] towards the Brahmans belonging to the Pitṛis, should all be done in the worship of the Vaishadévās. One should bedeck, with ornaments, all those [Brāhmanś] seated at pleasure. (33—34)

[Then] one should offer Arghya unto their hands with the Mantram,—"Yāaiṃya;" as also scents, garlands, incense, etc., according to one's might. (35)

Then making the sacred thread hang down towards the left part of the body over the right shoulder, a wise person, with his face directed towards the south, should invoke the departed Manes with the Mantram,—"Us'antastwā." (36)

Having invoked [them] and been commanded, [he] should then recite [the Mantram,—] "A'yāntunas." [Then with the Mantram,—] "S'annodévi," [he should place] water; [and with the Mantram,—] "Tilosi," sesame, in the vessel. (37)

Having placed [water and sesame] and given again, as before, Arghya unto their hands, [he should], being self-restrained, place the remaining water of Arghya in a vessel. (38)

Having placed, with this vessel, the Arghya-vessel along with the Pitṛis (i.e., having kept it as a place of their residence) and then taken up rice soaked with clarified butter, he should ask—"Agnou Karishyé," (i.e., if I can offer oblation to the Fire.) (39)

Being commanded with "Kurushwa," (do it), he should, with the sacred thread on,* offer oblations [to

* This and similar other passages distinctly show that to put on the sacred thread always, was not the practice prevailing then. But the Brāhmanās used to put on the sacred thread, as a distinctive mark, before the performance of any particular religious rite.

the Fire.] Wearing the sacrificial thread and with the Kus'a in hand, one should perform the Homa. (40)

Wearing the sacred thread over the right shoulder and under the left arm, one should perform the Homa for the Pitris and the Vis'wadevâs. Then when serving meals to the Deities, he should lower down his right knee. (41)

Then reciting,—Somâya Pitṛimate Swadhâ, namas, Agnaye Kavyavâhanâya Swadhâ, he should offer oblations. (42)

Being self-restrained and stationed near the image of a Great Deity or in a cowpen, he should consign them to the hands of a Vipra in the absence of the Fire. (43)

Therefore having circumambulated, at the command [of the Brahmanâs], the [image of the] Deity and his own tutelary Deity, he should paint, with cowdung, before him, towards the south, on a little elevated place, an auspicious circular or square figure. He should, then, with a Kus'a-reed, rub thrice inside the figure. (44—45)

Thereupon having spread there Kus'a-grass, with their tips directed towards the south, he should, being self-controlled, make three balls [for the Manes] with the residue of the oblation. (46)

Thereupon having offered the Pindas there, he should rub, with his hands, those Kus'a-reeds for [the satisfaction of] the partakers of the paste. Then rinsing and rinsing his mouth thrice and suppressing the vital airs gradually, he should, by and by, throw the residue of the water near the Pindas. Then being self-restrained, he should beat the Pindas slowly. (47—48)

Thereupon one should duly feed a twice-born person, with the remaining portion of the food [forming the] Pinda. Here (i.e., in a S'râddha) a person, conversant with religious laws, should bow unto the six seasons, the departed Manes and the Deities. (49)

If the burning lamp is extinguished, while taking meals at a S'rāddha, one should not again take food. Having taken it, one should perform the Chāndrayāna. (50)

One should offer corns, various cakes of flour, sweet boiled milk and rice, soup, vegetables, desired-for fruits, milk, curd, clarified butter and honey. (51)

One should dedicate desired-for boiled rice, various edibles and drinks and all that is liked by the leading twice-borns (52)

One, seeking one's well-being, should give unto the twice-borns, paddy, various kinds of sesame, sugar and warm boiled rice, but not (warm) roots, fruits, and drinks. One should not [while offering these] shed tears; nor should one be angry; nor should one speak an untruth. (53—54)

One should not touch boiled rice with the feet; nor should one scatter it. The Yātudhānās (Rākshasās) destroy what is offered angrily or hastily, or what is acquired by sinful means. One should not, with a moistened body, stand near a twice-born person. (55—56).

One should not look at the crows or drive away the birds; for the departed Manes, for knowing the real truth, come there in those forms. (57)

One should not give anything there with the hands [only], nor simple salt (i.e., without mixing it with any other article); nor should one give it in an iron vessel, nor disrespectfully. (58)

[By offering food] in a golden vessel, or in an Edumvara one, and particularly in the horn of a rhinoceros, one comes by the most excellent sovereignty. (59)

He, who feeds the departed Manes in an earthen vessel, goes, with the eater, to the most dreadful hell of Purodhā, (60)

One should not offer food in unequal quantities in the same row, nor should one beg food, nor should [the eaters] quarrel with [one another] By begging food, one despatches oneself to a dreadful hell. (61)

Abstaining from speech, one should take food ; even when accosted, one should not describe the real virtues [of the food]. As long as the merits of the Havi are not described, the departed Manes partake of the food. (62)

[Disregarding] many others seeing him, a twice-born person, seated in the first row, should not take his meals. Such an ignorant person takes upon [himself] the sin of the [entire] row. (63)

The foremost of the twice-born, [who is] engaged, should not leave anything in a S'rāddha. Even he must not prevent one from offering Māsha-corns ; nor shall he look at another's food. (64).

A twice-born one, who being engaged in a rite for the departed Manes, does not eat Māsha-corns, is born, after death, as a beast for twenty-one births. (65)

One should make them [i.e., the invited Brāhmaṇas] listen to the Vedic recitations, Dharma-Sāstras, Itihāsas (History) Purāṇs, and the most beautiful portion [of the S'āstras] dealing with [the performance of] the S'rāddha. (66)

Thereupon one should offer food and scatter it on the earth before those who are unfed. Then accosting the gratified [Brāhmaṇs] with "Swa'ditam" (are you satisfied?), he should make them sip the water. (67)

After they have sipped the water, he should address them "Bho ramyatām," (Hon'ble Sirs, please take rest). Thereupon the Brāhmaṇs should say,—"Swadhā." (68)

Thereupon he should communicate the residue of the food unto the [Brāhmaṇs already] fed. Then commanded by the twice-borns, he should do what they say. (69)

In a Pitṛi-S'rāddha (i.e., Ekoddhistha and Pārvaṇa) "Swadita" should be uttered; in a Gosktha (i.e., a S'rāddha; described by Viśwamitra) "Sunrita"; in an Abhyudaya S'rāddha, "Sampannam"; and in a Daiva, "Ruchitam." (70)

Being speechless, he should send away first of all the Brāhmaṇs representing the Deities. Then looking towards the south, he should beg [the following] of the departed Manes. (71).

May [the number of] givers [in our family] multiply; may our children [be given to the reading and teaching of the] Vēdas; may reverential faith [in the Vēdas] not disappear [in our family; may riches, to be given away, multiply [in our family]. (72)

One should offer Pinḍas and edibles unto the Brāhmaṇs, throw them into the Fire or water. The Vipras being seated, one should not cleanse the leavings of the twice-born persons. (73)

Thereupon one, seeking a son, should offer unto one's wife, the middle [Pinḍa]. Then washing the hands and rinsing the mouth, one should feed one's kinsmen in the end. (74)

The kinsmen being [gratified, one should, thereafter feed the servants. One should, afterwards, take, with one's wife, the last portion of the food. (75)

So long the sun is not set, one should not look at the leavings; the pair should lead a continent life for that night. (76)

He,—who having made presents in a S'rāddha, or he,—who, having taken meals [there-at]; holds sexual intercourse,—is again born as a virmin, after having passed through [the hell of] Mahāraurava. (77)

One (i.e., the performer of the S'rāddha or the partaker of food) should be pure, shorn of anger, of quiescent soul, truthful and self-controlled. Even the performer or the eater, should give up [for that day] Vedic studies and meditation. (78)

The twice-borns, who, having made presents in a S'rāddha, take their meals elsewhere, are equal to great sinners and go to innumerable hells. (79)

I have thus attentively described, in full, the rituals relating to a S'rāddha. An Udāsīn (an indifferent ascetic) should perform the S'rāddha with A'ma (raw or uncooked materials) and not with any thing else. (80)

A twice-born one who does not keep the Fire, who wends ways and who is given to all sorts of evil habits, should perform the S'rāddha with raw rice. A S'ūdra should always do the same. (81)

A twice-born person, who is conversant with religious regulations, should, being endued with reverential faith, perform the S'rāddha with raw rice. He should [then] offer the same as oblations to the Fire and make Piṇdas with the same. (82)

He, who, having controlled his mind, performs the S'rāddha, according to these regulations, attains to the station of Viṣṇu, being daily freed from his sins. (83)

Therefore the foremost of the twice-born ones, should perform a S'rāddha with all care. By it the Eternal Lord becomes perfectly adored. (84)

A twice-born person, the foremost of them, who is not rich should, after bathing and gratifying the departed Manes with oblations of sesame and water, perform [the S'rāddha] only with roots or fruits. (85)

One should not offer [Piṇḍas at a S'rāddha] in the lifetime of one's father. Homa and its terminating offerings are laid down [for such a one]. Or such a person may offer [Piṇḍas] for them to whom he [his father] offers the same. This is the opinion of the learned. (86)

One should offer [Piṇḍa] for him who, amongst the father, grandfather, or great grandfather is dead, and not for any one else. (87)

One should, with reverence, feed any one amongst them who is alive, to his heart's content. Disregarding one alive, one should not offer [food to another]. Such is the S'ruti (Vedic regulation) transmitted. (88)

A Dvamushyāyana son* should offer Piṇḍa [for his procreator], for he is born from his seed (semen); he should likewise offer [Piṇḍa for the other father], if by his religious appointment he (i.e., the son) is procreated by another on his barren wife.† (89)

A son, [who is procreated] without any agreement [upon another's wife], should offer Piṇḍa for [the father]

* This is a son, who is begotten by a person of good birth, on the barren wife of another person, with her husband's permission or with that of her elders in the absence of her husband. Such a son should offer Piṇḍas for his procreating father as well as the other father who is the husband of his mother. [See Yājñamalkya, Chapter I., Sloka 68—69.]

† i.e., if there is no such contract between the parties, (the one procreating the son, and the person on whose wife the son is begotten) as that the son shall belong to them both.

who gives seed, for he is born of his semen. Otherwise, [he should offer it] to the Kshétri [father].* (90)

He should offer two Piṇḍas both for the Kshétri (father), and the Viji (procreator); or in one (S'rāddha) he should offer it to the Kshétri after mentioning the name of the Vijī. (91)

On the day of death, he should perform [the S'rāddha,] according to the regulation of the Ekoddishta.† But determining the impurity, he should perform the Kāmya-S'rāddha, if he seeks any thing. (92)

One, seeking prosperity, should perform the Abhyudaya-S'rāddha in the fore part of the day. All [its rituals are like those of a] Daiva. No external rite should be performed. (93)

Darva (grass) should be spread over on all sides. Thereon he (the performer) should feed the twice-born ones. He should say,—“Be ye gratified, Nāndi-mukha-Pitris.” (94)

First of all, the S'rāddha of the female ancestors should take place; then that of the male ones; then that of the [deceased] maternal grandfather. These three S'rāddhas have been laid down in the Smritis for the Vṛiddhi (i.e., offerings made to the Manes on prosperous occasions, such as the birth of a son, et .) (95)

First [before performing these S'rāddhas], offerings should be made unto the Deities. No work should be done from the left to the right. (96)

* The father on whose wife he has been begotten by another person with the former's permission.

† In the performance of the S'rāddha for a particular person on the day of death, it is not necessary to take any notice of the purity or impurity of the day.

Having made adorations with flowers, incense, edibles and ornaments unto the variegated altars, the idols and the twice-born persons, one, with the sacred thread on, being self-controlled and facing the east, should offer Pinḍas; and having adored the Mātṛis, a learned person should perform three S'rāddhas. (97—98)

The Mātṛis (deceased female ancestors), being possessed by ire, seek to injure him, who, without performing the Mātṛi-Yajña, performs a S'rāddha. (99)

CHAPTER VI.

[VARIOUS FORMS OF IMPURITY.]

IF any, amongst the Sapiṇḍas, is born or dead, the impurity of the Brāhmaṇās, say the learned, extends over ten days. (1)

During the period of impurity, one should not perform any of the (Nitya) daily rites, and particularly those of the Kāmya; nor should one think of the Vedic Mantrams. (2)

At this time, one, who keeps the [Sacred] Fire, being purified and shorn of anger, should feed the other (i.e., pure twice-born persons. He should, with dried rice and fruits, offer oblations to the Fire for the departed Manes. (3)

Others should not touch them [who are in impurity]; nor should they offer food to the Spirits. In [an impurity] consequent on the birth of a] son, no sin is committed by touching [the other] Sapiṇḍas, with the exception of the mother. Again, in [an impurity of] death, it has been said by the Sages, that one can, on the fourth, or the fifth, day, touch him who is given to religious study, who celebrates sacrifices, or who is conversant with the Védas. (4—5)

On the tenth day, after bathing, all [other castes] may be touched by them. Unmeritorious [impurity], in the case of servants and unworthy* Sapiṇḍas, has been described [to extend over] ten days. (6)

A person possessing one qualification† [is purified] in four days; one possessing two,‡ in three days; and one possessing three, in one day. (7)

After the tenth day, one should fully read out the Véda and offer oblations to the Fire. He (i.e., one who observes impurity for ten days) becomes worthy of being touched on the fourth day. So the Patriarch Manu has said. (8).

The period of impurity of those who do not perform religious rites, who are not read in the Védas, and who suffer from leprosy, etc., terminates with their death. (9)

The [period of] impurity, on the death of [Nirguṇa] Bráhmaṇás, ranges from three to ten nights. [Impurity on the death of a Sapiṇḍa,] before he is invested with the sacred thread, extends over three nights; and for ten nights; thereafter. (10)

[If a child] is dead within two years after its birth, the same [period of impurity, i.e., ten nights] is for the parents. Such is desired [by the Law-givers]. [If the Sapiṇḍa] is highly unmeritorious, [one attains to] purity within three nights. (11)

* Nirguṇa persons are those who do not maintain the Sacred Fires, as described in the S'ruti and the Smṛiti.

† Two qualifications are the maintenance of either the Srauta-, or the Smárta-, Fire and Vedic studies.

‡ Three qualifications are the maintenance of both the Fires and complete Vedic study.

The same [is the period of impurity, i.e., three nights] for the parents on the death of a child before teething. Such is the deliverance [of the Rishis] Three nights [form the period of impurity on the demise] of a child that has teethed. [A child is called] Jātadanta when the teeth grow. (12)

Immediate is [the purification, on the death of a child] who has not teethed; [and impurity extends over] one night, before the ceremony of tonsure (Chudākaraṇam) [is performed within two years]; and three nights, before the investiture with the sacred thread (Upa-nayanam); and ten nights, afterwards. (13)

If a child is dead as soon as it is born, both the father and mother suffer from impurity consequent on the birth* [only]; the father, too,† becomes unfit to be touched. (14)

Immediate is the purification for the Sapīndas, [if death takes place after ten days]. One day [is the period of impurity] for a uterine brother, if he is Nirguṇa (unmeritorious). (15)

If death takes place after the teething, one night is the period of impurity for the Nirguṇa Sapīndas; and three nights, if it takes place after the ceremony of tonsure. (16)

O ye learned ones, if death takes place before the teething, one night [is the period of impurity] for the Sapīndas, if they are highly disqualified. (17)

Immediate is the purification of the Sapīndas on the dropping [of an embryo] by abortion. But if the Sapīndas are greatly disqualified, a day and night

* i.e., the impurity consequent on death does not affect them.

† Mother, of course, is also not to be touched.

[form the period of impurity] on account of abortion. (18)

Three nights have been laid down [as the period of impurity] for kinsmen, if they act according to their desire. If any birth takes place during [the period of impurity consequent on] a birth and any death during [impurity owing to] a death, purification is attained with the termination of [the first impurity]. [If any such incident takes place] on the last day [of impurity, the period is increased by] two nights. [If impurity] for both birth and death simultaneously takes place, it terminates with that of death. (19—20)

If any impurity, multiplying sin,* takes place after [any other minor impurity],—one is purified by it (i.e. by its termination). Hearing of an impurity consequent on birth or death, a person, gone to another country, should observe impurity till the [remaining] period is completed. [If he hears of it] after the period of impurity is over, three nights have been spoken of [as the period of impurity] for the Sapīṇdas. (21—22)

Hearing of a death after a year, a bath [brings on purification]. Under all circumstances and in all times,

* This is an impurity consequent on the death of father, mother, grandfather, etc., which is called Guru, or most important as'oucha, impurity. There is another reading "ardhavrittimaḍas'ouchamurdhamanyenas'oudhyati," meaning,—“if any impurity, of a more important character, takes place after half the period of another impurity is over, it lasts for the entire period to be observed for the latter, and at its termination one is purified.” Thus the meaning of the context is:—Supposing a person is in impurity for the death of a Sapīṇda kinsman. After four days his father or mother dies. In this case, his impurity does not end with the last day of the first one, but extends over the entire period beginning with the commencement of the latter.

immediate is the purification for a person who is observing a vow, for one who studies the Vêdas, and for one who is engaged in a work for carrying on his livelihood. [On the death of] maidens who have been engaged by words but not married, the father and the Sapinda-relations [have to observe impurity for] three nights. If marriage has been solemnized, [their] husbands [are to observe impurity]. One day has been prescribed in the Smritis [as the period of] impurity on the death of a maiden who has not been even orally engaged. (23—25)

Impurity has been spoken of as immediate on the death [of a maiden] within two years from birth. [Impurity extends over] a night, [if she dies before] the ceremony of tonsure. (26)

Three nights [form the period of impurity if a maiden dies] before being given away in marriage; and ten [nights] after that [form the period of impurity in her husband's family]. Three nights [form the period of] impurity on the death of a maternal grandfather. (27)

Similarly is to be known the period of impurity on the death of a uterine sister. Pakshiṇi (a night with the two days enclosing it,) [forms the period of impurity] on the death of relations formed by marriage as also of Vândhavas (i.e., maternal uncles).. (28)

One night has been laid down [in the case of the death] of the preceptor or a fellow religious student. Immediate [is the purification] on the death of the king in whose territory [a person] lives. (29)

On the death of a married daughter [living] in the house, the father [has to observe impurity for] three days; three nights [form the period on the death and birth of sons to] Punarvu-wives (i.e., widows married by him), of sons born in the family (i.e., not born of his own loins), and of the preceptor. A day and night is spoken of [as the period of impurity on the death of] a wife who has been visited by another person, [and on that] of the preceptor's son and wife. (30—31)

One night [is the period of impurity on the death] of an Upādhyāya, of S'rotriyās and of Sapiṇḍa-relations living in [a person's] house. (32)

Three nights [form the period of impurity] on the death of the mother-in-law as well as that of the father-in-law. Immediate purification is laid down on the death of a Sagotra (i.e., one of the same family after fourteen generations). (33)

A Brāhmaṇa attains to purity within ten days ; a Kshatriya, within twelve days ; a Vaiśya, within fifteen days, and a Sūdra within a month. (34)

It has been desired [by the Law-givers] that of all persons, born in the families of the Kshatriyās, Vais'yās, and the Sūdrās who serve good Brāhmaṇās with undivided attention, one attains to purification within ten days like unto a Brāhmaṇa [himself]. (35)

[If a person born] in degraded castes, [serves the Kshatriyās and Vais'yās] [he attains to purification] like the Kshatriyās and Vais'yās.* [On the death of a Sapiṇḍa-] Sūdra, the impurity for the Vais'yās, Kshatriyās and the Brāhmaṇās extends, in order, over six, three, and one night. O ye leading Brāhmaṇās, [similarly on the death of a Sapiṇḍa-Vais'ya] the impurity for the Sūdrās, Kshatriyās and the Brāhmaṇās extends over a fortnight, six nights and three nights respectively. O ye foremost of the twice-born race, the impurity [on the death] of a Kshatriya, for the Brāhmaṇas, the Vais'yas and the S'ūdras [extends]; it is said, over six nights and twelve days gradually.* (36—38)

On the death of a Brāhmaṇa, the S'ūdras, Vais'yas, and the Kshatriyas [should have to observe the usual period of impurity]. By performing the funeral rites of a Brāhmaṇa who is a Sapinda (i.e., for whom one is entitled to offer a Pinda), a Vipra attains to purification within one night. The Lotus-sprung (Brahma) has said so. By taking meals or living with [that Brāhmaṇa], one attains to purification within ten nights. (39—40)

If having his mind possessed by avarice, one speedily burns [the dead body of a Brāhmaṇa], a twice-born person (i.e., a Brāhmaṇa) becomes purified within ten; and a Kshatriya, within twelve days. (41)

A Vais'ya attains to purification within a fortnight and a S'ūdra, within a month; or again, in six, seven and three nights. (42)

Having cremated a helpless, friendless, poor Brāhmaṇa, the Brāhmaṇas and others attain to purification by drinking clarified butter after bathing. (43)

If out of love, a person of a lower caste touches, during the period of impurity, a higher caste, and a higher caste a lower one, he attains to purification with [the termination of] his impurity. [By following the dead body of a] Kshatriya, [a Bráhmaṇa] attains purification in one day; and [following that of] a Vais'ya, in two days. (44)

* These S'lokas conclusively prove that there was inter-caste-marriage prevalent at that time. otherwise these laws, relating to purification, would not have been promulgated by the Law-givers.

[In following that of] a S'údra, three days have been spoken of [as the period of impurity]. [He should] again [practise] Prāṇāyām for a hundred times. If, before the bones of a S'údra are deposited, a Bráhmaṇa weeps with his (i.e., the S'údra's) own people, [his] impurity lasts for three nights. One night is for a Kshatriya and Vais'ya, [if they do the same]. Otherwise (i.e., after the depositing of the bones), a Bráhmaṇa [attains purification by bathing after a day or a night]. (45—46)

If, before the bones of a Vipra are deposited, a Bráhmaṇa weeps for him, he, forsooth, attains purification by bathing with the cloth, worn by him at that time, on. (47)

He, amongst the Bráhmaṇs or other inferior castes who takes food with them (i.e., those who are impure) or drives in the same conveyance, attains purification within ten days (i.e., the fixed period of impurity). (48)

He who wilfully takes their (i.e., impure persons') food, even if he be a Deity, attains purification after observing impurity [for the fixed period] and bathing after its termination. (49)

A person, who under the pressure of famine takes food offered by them, should observe impurity for the [number of] days [he has taken it]; thereafter, he should perform penances. (50)

The twice-born, who maintain [their] Sacred Fires, should on the death of their Sapīṇdas, observe impurity from the time of cremation; and others, from the hour of death. (51)

Sapīṇdatá (kinship connected by the offering of the funeral rice-balls to the Manes) ceases in the seventh generation ;* Samānodakabhāva† (relationship connected by the libations of water to the Manes of common ancestors) ceases when there is no knowledge of the name and birth [of a person]. (52)

Father, grandfather and great-grandfather [who are entitled to S'rāddha], the Lepabhājas,‡ and one's own self,—these seven generations form the *Sapinda*s. (53)

The Divine Prajāpati has said that Sapinda-relationship extends over [three generations] upwards [from the great-grandfather]. Sapinda relationship extends over three degrees in case of persons of various Varnas begotten by one [father] upon many wives of various castes. (54)

Architects, artizans, physicians, maid-, and man-, servants, kings, and royal officers have been described as to have immediate purification. Persons, who make daily charities ; one, who makes a Niyama (i.e., a particular promise); one, who knows the Brahman; religious students ; those, who are initiated ; those, who are engaged in religious rites ; a king who has been duly installed and those who continually distribute rice,—[all these]—attain immediate purification according to ordinances. (55—57)

† This relationship extends from the seventh or the (eleventh) to the thirteenth (or the fourteenth, according to some,) degree.

‡ Lepas means the wipings of the hand (or the remnants of the food sticking to the hand) after offering funeral oblations to the first three ancestors (father, grandfather and great-grandfather); these wipings being offered to the three ancestors after the great-grandfather i.e., to paternal ancestors in the 4th, 5th and the 6th, degree,

In a sacrifice, at the time of wedding, in any religious rite relating to a Deity, during famine or any other calamity, immediate purification has been mentioned. (58)

Immediate is the purification for those who have been killed by poison, by lightning, by the king, by the Brāhmaṇas, or by snake-bite. (59)

Immediate purification is laid down in a death by entering into fire, by jumping down from a high place, by taking poison, or by fasting; in that for Brāhmaṇas and kine; and in that while leading the life of a Sannyāsin. (60)

There is no impurity [at the death of] perpetual religious students, forest-recluses, Yatins, and religious students, as well as at that of an outcaste. [This has been said] by the learned. (61)

CHAPTER VII.

[PERSONS QUALIFIED TO PERFORM THE S'RA'DDHA.]

NO cremation, no funeral rites, no depositing of bones, no shedding of tears, [no offering of] Pinda and no S'rāddha whatsoever [should be done for the degraded ones. (1)]

There is no impurity for him who lays a violent hand on himself with fire, poison, etc. No cremation and no offering of water should be made for him. (2)

If, however, by a mistake one dies through fire, poison, etc., impurity should be observed for him and [the rite of offering] water should be performed. (3)

If a son is born [to a person], gold, paddy, kine, clothes, sesame, rice, oil, molasses, and clarified butter-

all these raw materials may be accepted from him on that very day. (4)

From the house of a person who is in an impure state, fruits, sugar-cane, vegetables, salt, wood, water, curd, clarified butter, medicines, milk, and dried food may be accepted daily. One, who maintains the Sacred Fire, shall be duly burnt with the Three Fires. (5—6)

One, who does not maintain the three Sacred Fires [should be burnt] with the Sacred Fire consecrated in the house; and other inferior persons, with the ordinary fire;—by the twice-born. If the dead body is not found, an image should be made with Palāsa [leaves];—and be only burnt by the Sapinda-relations endued with reverence, controlling speech and [mentioning] only the name and family. Water, they should offer, only once. (7—8)

They all,* putting on wet cloth and with kinsmen, should duly offer every day, [both] morning and evening for ten days [consecutively], Pindas † at the gate of the house for the deceased person. They should feed four Brāhmaṇas. On the second day, shaving ‡ shall be done along with all kinsmen. (9—10)

Then the bones [of the deceased person] should be deposited by the Ṣṇātī (chief-mourner) with all kinsmen. [The performer of the S'rāddha on that

* The usual practice is that the son should offer the Pindas. In the Text Sarva or all, is mentioned; because, in the absence of a son, all the Sapindas are qualified to offer Pindas.

† Shaving takes place generally on the last but one day of impurity.

‡ Here the word Ṣṇātī means the next kin who performs the funeral rite; and he is, therefore, qualified to perform the S'rāddha in the absence of a son.

day], should, with reverence, feed an uneven number of pure Brâhm anâs not lesser than three. (11)

On the fifth, ninth, and the eleventh, day he should feed an uneven number of Brâhmaṇs. This rite is known as the first S'râddha. (12)

On the eleventh day (for the Brâhmaṇs) and on [the day after] the twelfth (for the Kshatriyâs), the person, who lights up [the funeral pyre], should, with reverence, offer a Piṇḍa and a Pavitra (a Kus'â-reed) in honour of the deceased. And he should [perform the S'râddha] every month on the day of death for one year. (13—14)

It is said that after full one year, the Sapīṇḍikaraṇ (annual S'râddha for offering Piṇḍas) should be performed. O leading twice-born ones, [in that S'râddha the performer] should make four vessels, [one] for the deceased, and [three for] ancestors of three degrees upwards. (15)

Thereupon with the Mantrams,—"Ye Samânâ, etc.," he should pour down [water from] the vessel dedicated to the deceased into those offered for the Pitris (grandfather, etc.). Piṇḍas should be offered in the same manner. (16)

It is laid down that Sapīṇḍikaraṇ, S'râddha should be preceded by the Daiva, (i.e., offerings made to the Deities). There one should invite the departed Manes and point out again (i.e., invoke) the deceased.* (17)

No separate rite should be performed for those deceased ancestors for whom Sapīṇḍikaraṇ has [once] been done. He, who makes separate Piṇḍas, becomes a destroyer of the departed Manes. (18)

* A deceased person is called Prêta till the celebration of the Sapīṇḍikaraṇ-S'râddha, after which he is designated Pitri.

After the death of his father, a son should be well instructed in the word Piṇḍa. He should, every day, offer boiled rice and a pitcher, full of water, according to the rites to be performed for a deceased person. (19)

The annual S'rāddha, which should be performed every year, must be done according to the regulation of a Pārvaṇa-(S'rāddha). Such is the eternal law.* (20)

[Every rite] for the parents, such as the offering of the Piṇḍas, should be performed by the sons. In the absence of a son, the wife should do it; and in the absence of a wife, the uterine brother should do the same. (21)

I have thus described duly the duties of the householder. [The duty] of women is to serve their husbands. There is no other duty laid down for them. (22)

He, who daily satisfies his own duties and has his mind dedicated to P's'vara, attains to that great station which has been highly spoken of in the Védās. (23)

[PENANCES FOR VARIOUS SINS.]

Penance for Brahminicide.

THE destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa, one who drinks spirituous liquors, a thief, and the violator of the preceptor's bed, and the one who associates with them,—are the great sinners. (1)

He, who lives for a year in their company, becomes

* This is the ritual when the father dies after becoming a Sannyāsin or when the parents die on an Amāvasyā-day.

degraded. Even he, who daily sits [with them] on [the same] bed and seat, also, becomes degraded. (2)

A twice-born person, who knowingly performs religious rites for, holds sexual union with, teaches and takes meals with [those great sinners], becomes forthwith degraded. (3)

A twice-born one, who unwillingly and out of ignorance, receives religious instructions [from such a sinner] and a fellow-student remain outcasted for one year. (4)

One, who is guilty of Brahminicide, should, for self-purification, by making a hut, begging alms and carrying a rod with the skull of a dead [Brāhmaṇa] placed on its top, live in a forest for twelve years. (5)

He should avoid all the houses belonging to the Brāhmaṇās and temples. He should always accuse his ownself and think of the [dead] Brāhmaṇa. (6)

Every day when the fire is shorn of its smoke and all conversation about food is stopped, gradually he should enter into seven houses belonging to qualified castes and capable [of offering alms]. (7)

Or, [for purification,] he should voluntarily betake to fasting, jump down from a high place, enter into a burning fire or into the water. This is the first [part]. (8)

Or, for a Brāhmaṇa or a cow, he should, disinterestedly, give up his vital airs (i.e., life); or, making a Vipra, suffering from a long-standing disease, shorn of his ailment, [he attains to purification]. (9)

By offering food to a learned [Brāhmaṇa], one is freed from [the sin of] Brahminicide. A twice-born person is [also] purified by taking the final bath in a Horse-Sacrifice. (10)

The killer of a Brāhmaṇa, who gives his all unto a

Brāhmaṇa conversant with the Vēdas, or who sees the Bridge,* is freed from sins. (11)

Penance for Drinking Spirituous Liquors.

A DRINKER of spirituous liquors should drink wine, red-hot like iron. A twice-born person, when his body is [thus] burnt, is freed from [the sin]. (12)

Or by drinking red-hot cow's urine, or [similar] liquidified cowdung, milk, clarified butter or water, [he is] freed from the sin. (13).

Or for the expiation of the sin, he should, with a wet cloth on and being self-controlled, perform the vow of Brāhmanicide (for twelve years). (14).

Penance for the Theft of Gold.

A Brāhmaṇa, who has stolen gold, should, after approaching the king and describing his own misdeeds, once say,—“Do thou punish me.” (15)

Taking up the mace, the king should himself once strike him. Thereupon he [the perpetrator] becomes freed [from the sin]. Or by [practising] austerities a Brāhmaṇa-thief becomes freed]. (16)

Finding out and taking up by the hand a destructive mace, stick, or an iron rod sharpened on both ends, running about with dishevelled hairs, trumpeting his own sinful deeds, [a perpetrator of a crime should say,—] “Punish me.” The king should [then] strike the thief (17—18).

Whether meeting with death or escaping it, thereupon, he is freed from [the sin of] theft. Without

* This refers to the Bridge, constructed by Rāma over the Sea, at Rāmes'waram, in the District of Madura, [in the Madras Presidency, popularly known as Adam's Bridge. This shows that this Samhitā must have been written after the Rāmāyana Period.

punishing [a thief], a king is visited with the sin of the thief. (19)

The fruit (i.e., the sin) of gold-theft [committed by] another (i.e., a Brāhmaṇa), is dissipated by [the performance of] austerities. Putting on a tattered cloth, a Brāhmaṇa should practise the Brāhma-vow in the forest [for twelve years]. (20)

By [either] taking the final bath in a Horse-Sacrifice, or by giving unto the Brāhmaṇās gold equal to the weight of his own body, a twice-born person is [also] purified. (21)

A Brāhmaṇa-thief of gold, for the expiation of that sin, leading a continent life, should practise hard austerities for a year. (22)

Penance for Knowing a Step-Mother.

By knowing a step-mother, under the influence of lust, a Brāhmaṇa should embrace a female-form, made of black iron after his heart and heated. (23)

Or having cut off himself his generative organ and testes and taken them in his palms, he should proceed straight on to the south or to the west till the destruction of his body. (24)

Or, for expiation, he should meet with death for his preceptor, or he should practise the Brahma-vow [for twelve years]. In a year [he is also purified] by embracing the branch [of a tree] full of thorns. (25)

Being self-restrained he should lie down on earth. A Vipra, being self-controlled and with a tattered cloth on, should practise hard austerities for a year. One, knowing a step-mother, should thus be freed [from the sin.] (26).

The foremost of the twice-born becomes freed [from the sin] by taking the final bath in a Horse-Sacrifice,

Leading a continent life, always practising austerities taking his meals at the eighth period (i.e., in the night of the fourth day after fasting for three days), standing or seated and lying down on earth,—a man, who has no money,* should thus, in three years, be freed from the sin. (27—28)

Or he should perform four or five Chāndrāyaṇas. (29)

Penance for the Sin of mixing with the Degraded.

If a twice-born person mixes, out of avarice, with a degraded person, he should once perform, for the expiation of the sin, the penance laid down for him (i.e., the degraded). Such a person, amongst those who associate with the degraded, attains to freedom [from the sin], or he should zealously practise hard austerities for one year. (30—31)

Half is the penance for associating [with them] for six months. Such purificatory rites dissipate even the impurity of the great sinners. (32)

One attains to freedom [from the sin] by taking journeys to holy places situate on this earth. O ye Vipras, a Brāhmaṇa, possessed by lust, after perpetrating the mighty iniquities of Brahmanicide, drinking spirituous liquors, theft, or knowing his step-mother, being self-controlled, should perform [the vow of] fasting at a holy place. (33—34)

Or meditating on Kapardin (S'iva), he should enter into the fire or water. Munis, conversant with religious rites, have not seen of any other means of redemption [for them]. (35)

* It shows that a rich man is freed from the sin by making proper gifts.

[PENANCES FOR VARIOUS MINOR SINS.]

By willingly knowing his daughter, sister or daughter-in-law, a Vipra should enter into a burning fire. This is the law. (1)

By co-habiting with mother's sister, maternal uncle's wife, or with father's sister, or by knowing sister's daughter, maternal aunt's daughter, or paternal aunt's daughter, one, being self-controlled, [and] after practising hard austerities, should perform four or five Chândráyanas. (2—3)

By knowing a maternal uncle's daughter, one should perform the Chândrayana. By co-habiting with wife's friend or with her sister, after fasting for a day and a night, one should perform the Taptakrichha (a kind of penance). By knowing a woman in [her] menses, [one should attain] purification [by fasting] for three nights. (4—5)

By co-habiting with a Kshatriya-woman, [a Bráhmaṇa] is purified by a Chândráyana or by a Paráka (a kind of penance). The Divine Unborn (Bráhmā) has said so. (6)

By [consciously] killing a frog, mongoose, crow, cat, boar, mouse or a dog,—a twice-born person should perform a great penance extending over sixteen days. Or by [unconsciously] killing a dog, one should zealously drink milk for three nights. (7)

Or by [unknowingly] killing a cat or a mongoose, one should wend a way a Yojana [in length]. By killing a horse, a twice-born person should perform a hard austerity extending over twelve [days]. (8).

Having killed a servant, the foremost of the twice-born should give away a weapon made of crude iron

Having slain a crane, Raṅgana-mouse, Kṛitalambhak-boar, a black-spotted raven, Tilāt, francolinine partridge or a parrot,—[one should give away] a two-years-old calf; and a three-years-old one, for having killed a heron. (9—10)

By killing a swan, crane, Vaka (a kind of crane), a Titti-bird, a monkey, or a Bhāsa,—one should make a gift of a cow unto a Brahmaṇa. (11)

By slaying animals living on flesh or deer, one should give away a milch-cow; [by killing] animals that do not take flesh, a calf; and [by killing] a camel, gold weighing five rupees. (12)

By killing animals having bones, [one should] present something to a Vipra; and by killing those that have no bones, one is purified by Prāṇāyāma. (13)

By destroying trees yielding fruits, groves, creepers, and large trees loaded with fruits,—one should recite a hundred Rik-verses. (14)

To take clarified butter is the purification [enjoined for destroying] flowering [plants]. By killing, by mistake, [a cow], one should perform the Chāndrāyaṇa and the Parāka. (15)

There is no penance for willingly killing her (i.e., a cow). By stealing men, women, houses, tanks, wells or other watery expanses,—one is purified by the Chāndrāyaṇa. By stealing articles of little value from another's house, one should perform the austere Sānta-pāna for self-purification. The five ingredients supplied by the cow (Pañchagavya) [form] the purification for pilfering rice, etc., and wealth. (16—18)

Fasting for three nights is [the penance for pilfering] grass, wood, trees, flowers, garments, hide, meat and fish. (29)

Fasting for twelve nights is [the penance for stealing] diamonds, corals, precious stones, gold, silver, iron, belmetal and pebbles. (20)

[For robbing] cloven-footed and one-hoofed animals, one should perform the self-same penance (i.e., fasting for twelve nights). [He, who] pilfers birds and medicinal herbs, [should live on] milk for three days. (21)

[There is] no [penance for taking] the meat [of animals] sacrificed unto a deity; [for taking any other meat, one] should perform the Chāndráyaṇa. Or, fasting for twelve days, he should offer oblations of clarified butter to the Fire with the Kushmaṇḍa-[Mantram]. (22)

By eating [the meat of] a mungoose, owl or a cat, one should perform the Sāntapanam. By eating [that of] a dog, one is purified by performing a mortifying penance or by looking at an auspicious planet. (23)

And he should then perform the initiatory rites as laid down before [by the preceptors]. By eating a porcupine, crane, swan, Karaṇḍava (water-fowl), or a Chakravāka,—one should fast for twelve days. By eating a pigeon, Titiva-bird, Bhāsa, parrot, Sārasa (a kind of crane), a leech, or a goose,—one should perform the same penance. By eating a porpoise, bean, meat, fish, or a boar,—one should perform the same penance. By eating a cuckoo, a bird living on fish, a frog, or a snake,—one attains to purification by living, for a month, on barley boiled with the urine of a cow. By eating water-ranging animals, those born in water, those killed by Rākshasas, those having blood-red feet,—one should perform the self-same penance for a week. By taking the meat of a dead or a useless animal procured for one's use, one should perform the same penance for the expiation of the sin. By eating a pigeon, an elephant, a pot-herb, a fowl, a Rajaka or an alligator,—one should perform the Prájápatya (penance). By eating onion or garlic, one should perform the Chândráyana. (24—31)

[By eating] the Vártaku, (the egg-fruit), or the Tanduliya (broken rice), [or the both],—one is purified by Prájápatya. [By eating] the As'mantaka (a plant from the fibres of which a Bráhmaṇa's girdle may be made), or what comes near,—one is purified [by performing] the Taptakrichha. By eating [the flesh of] a man or a hare, one is purified by Prájápatya. By eating bottle-gourd or turnip, one should perform the very same penance. (32—33)

By eating Udumvara, one is purified by self-sought [penance of] Taptakrichha. By eating useless (i.e., not dedicated to a deity), Kṛisara Samjáva (a kind of pudding), Páyasa (rice boiled with milk, cake, S'ushkali (a preparation of cake),—one is purified by performing this penance for three nights. By drinking milk, unworthy of being drunk, [all], especially a Brahmachârin becomes purified in a fortnight by living on barley boiled with the urine of a cow. By drinking the milk of a cow that has not passed ten nights from the day of delivery, that of a (similar) she-buffaloe, that of a (similar) she-goat, that of a cow big with a young one, or that of a cow that has no calf,—one should perform the self-same penance. By taking unnatural transformations of these (such as, curd, etc.,) or drinking them out of ignorance,—one is purified within seven nights by living on barley boiled with the urine of a cow. By taking food of the first S'raddha, or on the occasion of a birth or death,—a Bráhmaṇa becomes purified by attentively (performing) the Chândráyana. A twice-born person, by taking the food of a person who does not perform the daily rites, the end of which is not ruinous, should fully perform the Chândrāyaṇa. Having taken food prepared by people who are disqualified to serve it, that of a degraded caste, or that offered at the monthly funeral rite of a deceased person,—one [should, so it is said, perform] the Taptakṛichha. Having taken boiled rice from a Chandāla, a twice-born person should completely perform the [penance of] the Chândrāyaṇa. (34—41)

By unwittingly taking excreta, urine, or any other article sullied with spirituous liquor,—the three twice-born castes should again perform the Samskâras (rites of purification). (42)

The twice-born,—amongst those taking, out of ignorance, urine or excreta of birds living upon flesh,—should perform the great Santapanam. (43)

[By taking] Bhāsa, frog, dog or a crow,—[one should] perform a distressing penance. A Brâhmaṇa becomes purified by Prājāpatya and a painfully restricted diet. (44)

By drinking water from a wine-bowl, a Kshatriya should perform the Taptakṛichha; a Vaisya three distressing penances; [and a Brâhmaṇa,] the Chândrāyaṇa. (45)

By taking the residue of food or the remnant of drinking water left by a dog, a twice-born one becomes purified, within three nights, by living upon barley boiled with the urine of a cow. (46)

By drinking water sullied with urine or excreta, one should perform the Santapanam capable of purifying the body. (47)

If a Brâhmaṇa unknowingly drinks water in a well or a vessel belonging to a Chāṇḍāla, he should perform the Sāntapanam destructive of sins. (48)

By drinking water touched by a Chāṇḍāla, the foremost of the twice-born becomes purified [by fasting] for three nights or by taking the Pañchagavya.* (49)

By taking food, without bathing after willingly touching a great sinner, a foolish twice-born person should perform the Taptakrichha. (50)

By marrying in another caste (i.e., a Sūdra-maiden), one (i.e., a Brāhmaṇa) becomes a Mahāpātakin (great sinner). By associating with such a sinner, one also becomes a sinner. (51)

By simply marrying a maiden of different caste, twenty-four penances are [to be performed]; half of those, for living with her; there is no penance in procreating a son [on her]. (52)

By taking food, out of ignorance, after seeing a Mahāpātakin, a Chāṇḍāla, or a woman in [her] menses,—one is purified [by fasting] for three nights. (53)

By taking [one's] meals, while still wet after bathing, one becomes purified [by fasting] for a day and a night. [By doing so] knowingly, [one attains to purification] with the [performance of] a distressing penance. So the Divine Lotus-Sprung Deity has said. (54)

By eating dry [meat], rotten or foul-smelling articles,—a twice-born person should fast. [He should] do it again and again. (55)

By officiating as a priest for servants, [or by helping] others (i.e., other castes) in other rites, by performing rites causing death to another person, and other unworthy deeds,—[a Brāhmaṇa] becomes purified by three distressing penances. (56)

By performing the cremation of those who have been killed by a Brāhmaṇa, a twice-born person becomes purified by a Prājāpatya, living [all the while] on barley boiled with the urine of a cow. (57)

He, who having his body anointed with oil, passes urine or excreta, or has his beard shaven, or holds sexual intercourse, in the morning, becomes purified [by fasting] for a day and night. (58)

By disregarding (i.e., not performing Homa) Vivāha-Fire for a day, a leading twice-born person becomes purified in three nights; [and by doing so] for three nights again, [one becomes purified by fasting for] six days. (59)

By neglecting it for ten or twelve days, one should perform the most distressing Chāndrayāna for the expiation of that sin. (60)

By accepting an article from an outcaste, one becomes purified by throwing it away. He should, also, duly perform a penance. So has the Divine Lord said. (61)

By desisting from a fast [intended to bring about death] and returning from the order of religious mendicants, one should perform three distressing (Prājāpatyas) and Chāndrayānas. (62)

[Then] by again performing all the purificatory rites, such as the Jātakarma, etc., twice-born persons [are] purified. They should, having an eye on religion, completely perform this penance. (63)

By not performing a morning adoration and offering sacrificial fuels to the Fire for pressure or urgency of work, [a Brahmachārin].—taking his meals once, and in the night only, [if] an evening [rite is neglected], and after being purified by bathing, governing his mind and restraining his self,—should recite the Gāyatrī eight thousand times and be [thus] purged of [his sin.] (64—65)

If a householder, out of mistake, does not perform his Sandhyā-adoration or deviates from the performance of a Snātaka-vow, he should fast for the day. (66)

In consequence of wilfully [neglecting the Sandhyā], the foremost of the twice-born should perform the distressing penance [of Prājāpatya for full one year, and should perform the Chāndrāyana, [if he does so] for livelihood. [And] by making a gift of kine, [he is] purged of [his sins]. (67)

If he does so, prompted by agnosticism, a twice-born person should perform the Prājāpatya. By performing the Taptakrichha, one is purged off of [the sin of] acting against the Deities and preceptors. (68)

By willingly riding a car drawn by camels or asses, one becomes purified [by fasting] for three nights. One should not, being nude, enter into the water. (69)

The purification of the offspring [of sinners, is brought about] by taking food in the night of the third day for a month, the recitation of the Samhitā or the performance of S'ākala-Homa.* (70)

By putting on a blue or a dark-blue raiment, a Brāhmaṇa should fast for a day and night, and he should purify [himself] by [taking] the Pañchagavya after bathing. (71)

By reciting the Védās, Dharma-S'āstras and the

* The rite of offering oblation to the Sacred Fire as followed by the S'ākala School of the Rig-Vēda.

Purāṇas before the Chāṇḍālas, one is purified by the Chāṇḍrāyaṇa. There is no other means of redemption for him. (72)

Having touched, on some occasion, [the dead body of a person] killed by hanging, a Brāhmaṇa becomes purified either by the Chāṇḍrāyaṇa or the Prajāpatya. (73).

If, without washing his mouth after taking his meals, a twice-born person touches a Chāṇḍāla or any other low-born having still the leavings of food in his mouth, he should perform the Prajāpatya for purification. (74)

By touching a Chāṇḍāla, a woman who has given birth to a child, a dead body, a woman in [her] menses or those touched by her, or any outcaste, one should bathe for purification. (75)

If, out of mistake, one touches an article touched by a Chāṇḍāla, a woman who has given birth to a child, or a dead body, purification is attained by bathing, rinsing the mouth and [thereafter] reciting the Gāyatrī. (76)

By touching what should not be touched, the foremost of the twice-born should purify [himself] by bathing. And he should [also] rinse his mouth for purification. So the Divine Grandfather has said. (77)

If, on any occasion, a Vipra passes excreta while taking meals, he should then immediately wash himself, bathe, fast and offer libations of clarified butter to the Fire. (78)

By touching the dead body of a Chāṇḍāla, the foremost of the twice-born should perform the distressing penance [of Prajāpatya]. Then by [fasting] for a day and night [and] seeing a star in the sky, [he becomes] purified. (79)

Having touched spirituous liquor, a twice-born person should perform the Prāñāyam thrice [for] purification.

[By touching] onion or garlic, one. is purified by drinking clarified butter. (80)

Being bitten by a dog [on the lower part of the navel], a Brâhmaṇa should drink milk only in the evening for three days ; threefold is the penance, if bitten on the upper part of the navel. (81)

Threefold is the penance, [if bitten] on the arms ; and fourfold, if on the head. Being bitten by a dog, the foremost of the twice-born should, after bathing, recite the Gâyatri. (82)

An indigent householder,—who, when not suffering from an ailment, daily takes his food without performing the Five Sacrifices,—becomes purified by performing half the Prajâpatya (83)

He, who does not adore the Sacred Fire deposited in his house on Parva-days, (i.e., on the day of the New-Moon, or on the day of any Planetary Conjunction) ;—as also he, who does not know his wife after the menses ;—should perform half the Prajâpatya. (84)

He,—who, without water or entering into water passes urine or excreta,—becomes purified by being immersed in water with a cloth on or by touching it.* (85)

A householder, [who does so by practice], should fast for three days [and] recite the Gâyatri for eight thousand times. The foremost of the twice-born, who follows the dead body of a S'ûdra, should recite the Gâyatri eight thousand times in a river. A Vipra, by swearing falsely in a matter relating to the destruction of another Vipra, should perform the penance of Chândrâyana, living on boiled barley. By making unequal gifts in the same row, one is purified by [the distressing penance of [Prājāpatya]]. (86—88).

By getting on the shadow of a lowcaste person, one should drink clarified butter after bathing. By looking at the Sun in an impure state, one should recite the Mantram "Agnīndraja." (89).

By touching human bones, one is purified by bathing. By completing his religious study, a Vipra should beg alms for full one year. (90)

[By becoming] ungrateful to a Brāhmaṇa [after having lived] in his house, [one] should perform the penance for five years. By disregarding an elderly Brāhmaṇa by uttering Hum or Thou, one, after bathing and rinsing the mouth, should, thereafter, please him with salutation. By striking [a Brāhmaṇa] with a reed, by binding his neck with a cloth or defeating him in a dissension, one should gratify him with salutation. By uplifting a rod [to strike him], one should perform a distressing penance; and by [actually] striking him, a most distressing one. (91—93)

By shedding a Brāhmaṇa's blood, one should perform the most painful of all the penances. And by remonstrating with his preceptor, one should perform a purifying penance. (94)

By spitting before a Deity or a Rishi or reproaching [any of] them aloud, one should, for the expiation of that sin, [fast] one or two nights. (95)

By defeating a Brāhmaṇa in a discussion about Mīmāṃsā, one should give away gold. A twice-born person, who passes urine or excreta in gardens attached to temples or who cuts a whole leaf, should, for purification, perform the penance of Chāndrayana. The foremost of the twice-born, who, out of malevolent feelings, passes urine in a temple, should, after cutting off his generative organ, perform the Chânurâyaṇa. For vilifying the Deities, the Rishis, or the Védās, a twice-born person should fully perform the Prájápatya. By conversing with such [persons], one should, after bathing, adore the Deities. (96—99)

If a woman, in her girlhood, commits a great sin, she should have a penance performed by her father on her behalf. (100)

One can espouse such a maiden, if the penance has been performed. Otherwise he, [who marries her,] should be outcasted. Even in the destruction of a Kshatriya, one should perform, for a year, the penance for Brahmanicide. After that period, one should give away a thousand kine together with a bull. (101)

By killing all (insects, etc.), one should give away gold or silver to the weight of a Māśā. Copper, tin, lead, belmetal and iron are purified by water and earth. All metallic vessels, containing leavings, are purified by ashes and water. Gold, silver, precious stones, conch-shell, pearls, corals, diamonds, ebony, rope and hide are purified by water. (102)

Being touched by a Chandāla or a S'wapacha while passing urine or excreta, one is purified by [fasting for] three nights. By taking the residue of food, one should fast for six days. (103)

If one's father, maternal grandfather or elder brother [does not perform] the Tapas and the Agnihotra, there is no sin in the younger brother's marrying before the elder. (104)

He,—who, on the last day of the dark fortnight, adores a Bráhmaṇa-lady, thinking of the Grandfather Brahmā,—becomes freed from all sins. (105)

Having obtained the auspicious day of Amāvasyā, one should adore Yama (the Regent of the Dead) and Bhava (S'iva). And having fed the Brāhmaṇas [on that day], he becomes freed from all sins. (106)

Having adored, with all the leading Brāhmaṇas, Mahādēva on the eighth, or the fourteenth, day of the dark fortnight, one is freed from all sins. (107)

Having seen the three-eyed Deity with all the ingredients of adoration in the first Yama (part) of the night of the thirteenth day, one is freed from the entire multitude of sins. (108)

By accepting 'gifts from everywhere, sacrificial presents and a golden image, one is released by performing the Soma-Sacrifice and uttering benedictory verses. (109)
